A Morning Smile

"I can only take one of you," said the conductor of a crowded tramcar to two women waiting in the rain.

"But we are mother and daughter. Surely you won't separate us," pleaded one.

"Not likely," replied the conductor, reaching for the bell. "I did so once."

"What's the price of this table?" "Three guineas, sir," replied the furniture dealer.

"Too expensive. You must be ignorant of present-day values." "Well," drawled the dealer, "I ought to know a good deal."

"Possibly," answered the customer, "but why label it mahogany?"

real sterling standard. Four hundred years ago provincial goldsmiths found it impossible to have their gold and silver "assayed" or tested in London.

In those days carrying valuables around the country was a risky business. So they started assay offices in big provincial cities.

To avoid clashing with London's assay mark of a leopard's head they took their own hall-marks. These persist even today.

A tiny anchor on your silver means it was made in Birmingham. Sheffield-made silver has a crown, Chester silver three sheaves and a dagger, Glasgow silver a combination of a tree, a fish and a bell.

London, of course, still has its leopard. But today he has lost the crown he used to wear and looks more like a cat than a leopard.

Behind the tiny hall-marks on our silver lies the romance of hundreds of years. Look at a silver article—a cigarette case or a napkin ring. You will see on it a number of little marks. These are the hall-marks, first put on silver by goldsmiths in the fourteenth century.

Since 1300 the hall-mark has only changed six times. It started in 1300 as a picture of a leopard's head. The fourteenth century goldsmiths stamped this mark on their silver to show that the metal was up to a certain standard.

Then came the "maker's mark" in 1363. This was another check on the quality of the silver. It took the form of the initials or other sign of the man who made the article.

Grasshoppers, martlets and squirrels were among the early maker's signs. Nowadays the initials are always used—you will find them on your piece of silver.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

How One Woman Whose Husband Outgrew Her Regained His Respect—Is There Any Way a Girl Can Tell When She's Really in Love?—Crippled Girl's Plight

Dear Dorothy Dix—I was much interested in the letter the woman wrote you about being lonely and forlorn because her husband has outgrown her. My case was similar to hers. I had no education. I disliked to read and had a bad inferiority complex.

Of course, a man likes his wife to be a good cook and housekeeper, but that is not enough. She must be a pal, comrade and a good sport.

Answer: There would not be so many ladies in Reno nor so many lacrymose, neglected wives if more women had the intelligence and determination of this woman.

She saw that her marriage was going on the rocks, but instead of beating on her breast and lamenting over the perfidy of husbands, as most wives do under similar circumstances, she got busy and saved it.

But they are not. They would rather lose a husband than make the effort to hold him. They will let their house come tumbling down around their ears rather than put their shoulders up to it and hold it up by sheer strength and determination.

It is the more strange that woman makes so little effort to make their marriages a success when not only their love lives but their physical well-being depends on it.

Most wives who lose their husbands' affections, as the phrase goes, contend that it was an act of God, so to speak. A bolt from the blue, like responsible and could not have prevented. They are sure their husbands' husbands didn't come home to dinner because there was nothing fit to eat at home, nor that their husbands hunted up other women for companions because they never talked about anything except the children and the high price of food.

But she did it and she won out, and my wife who will follow her example can attain the same results nine times out of ten. For the wife always has the advantage over any other woman, that she was her husband's first love, that he is bound to her by a thousand ties of association and habit and duty, that the hands of little children hold them together, and all the powers of convention and society fight on her side.

Many a wife who sees the love light going out on the domestic altar could fan it into flame again if only she had the energy to do it.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a girl of 17. How can I tell absolutely and without fail when I have fallen in love and when a boy is in love with me? I don't want to make any mistake. I want to be sure of love when I find it.

Answer: Ah, Norma, nobody in the world is wise enough to tell real love from spurious love at sight. For love comes in so many guises, it bears itself so honestly and speaks with such sincerity of tone that it deceives even the most cautious and suspicious, and we never know when we open the doors of our hearts for it to enter whether we are entertaining an angel who will bless us with its presence or a devil who will destroy us.

There is no way, even by which we can tell for certain whether we ourselves are in love or not. We may have all the symptoms, "chills and thrills and hectic fevers," we may palpitate at the sound of a footstep and feel that the world is empty if some one figure is not within our touch. We may be certain that we will die if Fate should separate us from some particular man or woman. In short, we may be perfectly sure

Expect Triumph For Young Star

Following is the second of a Canadian Press series of 12 sketches of Canadian tennis and golf players, each who will compete in English and Scottish tournaments this season.

MONTRÉAL, May 1.—(C.P.)—Generally speaking, Robert D. (Bobby) Murray of Montréal, 20 years old and ambitious, is the most promising young player Canada has ever sent to the international tennis wars.

Practically every man and woman who marry are wildly in love at the time and think they cannot live without each other, yet look how often they were mistaken in their sentiments and have come actually to hate each other.

The young are particularly apt to make the mistake of thinking they are in love when they are not, because they are so sloshing over with sentiment, and so in love with love that they can throw the beautiful cloak of their romance over any member of the opposite sex who comes along.

So watch your step. Check and double check your emotions when your heart begins to go pit-a-pat, but no matter how careful you are, or how much you visit other girls talk about, you will never be able to tell beforehand whether what you are experiencing is a passing fancy or the grand passion.

Dear Dorothy Dix—Please tell me what I can do about my social life. I feel that my whole life is ruined because I am handicapped by being a cripple. When the other girls talk about their beaux, parties and dates I feel as if I don't belong anywhere and my heart is heavy. Always there is that feeling of hopelessness. How can I get over this?

Answer: To lose heart is worse than losing your leg, Gertrude. You must fight against this hopelessness and achieve what Stevenson called "the brave attitude toward life." That means making the best of things and not letting a misfortune drag you down into defeat.

I know that a girl of your age wants to do all of the things that other girls do. Most of them you can do, because so many wonderful artificial appliances are made now that crippled people are no longer handicapped as they used to be. So don't give up and feel that you are left out of things.

And get something to do that will make you a career. Some way to support yourself, so that if you should not marry you will be financially independent and have something interesting to do and think about with which to fill your life.

THE COOK'S CORNER

CANNED CORN CUSTARD Heat 2 tablespoons butter substitute; in it cook a slice of onion and half a whole green pepper, shredded very fine, stirring constantly until yellowed and softened.

DATE OATCAKE One cup brown sugar, 1 cup rolled oats, 1/2 cup each of lard and butter (or one cup lard), 1/2 cup sour milk or cream, 1 teaspoon soda. Flour to make paste like cookies. Roll into layers and put date filling between. Bake in moderate oven.

STEWED LETTUCE Two tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1/2 cup cream, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, salt and pepper, 2 bunches of Ontario leaf lettuce. Cook lettuce in salted boiling water for 30 minutes. Drain and put in a pan of cold water for 20 minutes. This cold dip tends to prevent the lettuce from becoming mushy. Then drain and chop lightly. Make a cream sauce by combining the butter, flour, lemon juice and cream. Add the lettuce to this mixture. Heat and serve it at once.

Offer Prayers For Hitler

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) BERLIN, April 30.—Solemn prayers for Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler in his work as "the saviour of the nation from Bolshevism" were offered up in the Protestant churches tonight as an overture to the labor celebrations tomorrow.

Reports in the city that Hitler again championed from throat trouble and wants to cancel the speeches he has planned for tomorrow were denied by the propaganda ministry.

Murray first came into prominence in 1933 when he was ranked in the first 10 in Quebec. He was a fine junior player and the impression he gives even now is that he still is a junior. Potentially he is a great player, as promising as his age as Walter Martin or Gilbert Nunn was at the same stage.

Overcast experience never came to Martin or Nunn.

never sent abroad. Murray goes to Wimbledon and other major tournaments in the United Kingdom equipped with a classical style and a fine ground game that the veteran Willard Crocker taught him. He is ranked behind only two players in Canada, Marcel Rainville and Gilbert Nunn.

The Canadian Lawn Tennis Association selected Murray and Laird Watt of Montreal, Caroline Deacon and Eleanor Young of Vancouver, for the British invasion largely because of their youth. The idea is to develop young players rather than accept annual Davis Cup beatings from the United States with the youngsters getting little or no chance to take part in even these slaughters. Last summer Murray scored some notable triumphs. He eliminated Rainville from the Quebec championships. Don Leabong, brilliant Jamaican star, fell before his stylish stroking in the quarter-finals of the Ontario singles, and he topped it off by reaching the semi-finals of the Canadian, defeating Walter Martin, ranked No. 1 last year, in a stirring five-set battle.

Bobby was unbeatable in intercollegiate tennis. He won the singles and teamed for a doubles victory on behalf of McGill. Then he succeeded Watt as Quebec champion and teamed with Laird to capture the doubles. In the Canadian indoor championships last winter he again defeated Watt in the finals and they teamed to take the doubles.

Murray started wedding a racket when he was 12, playing in Montreal West. Flat strokes constitute the base of his game and he produces strokes more easily than any other player in the country. He has a preference for the backcourt, but his half-volleys from mid-court and his overhead game at the net are among the best in Canadian tennis.
