PUTTING "WIND UP" SIR GEORGE.
What would you do if you were in the cab of a locomotive with an engine that was fairly throwing its gears through a mountain canyon in an effort to make you shove fast? Would you do under those circumstances if you had the power to fire the engineer on the spot? Sir George Bury, who knows what the experience is like, admits that he was afraid, but he didn't fire the engineer. Thereby hangs one of the stories which lend the color of reality to the remarkable frank memoirs from the pen of the former vice-president of the C. P. R., which are now appearing in MacLean's Magazine. In the current issue, Sir George says:
"During one of my first trips through the mountains (as general manager of the western lines of the C. P. R.) I stopped at a divisional point and climbed up on the engine to talk to the engineer," writes Sir George. "He was a young man and shortly placed his train at a very high speed. The line skirted the river, and in some places was about three hundred feet above it. Looking out from the edge of the cliff, besides there were many sharp curves, and, as the engine continued to increase the speed, I had the wildest ride of my life."
"It was my duty to have restrained him, and I felt nervous enough to do so, but I sensed that if I took any such action, word would be circulated that the first time they had Bury in British Columbia he had been given the seat of his life, so I decided to take a chance on a derailment and let him run as fast as he wanted to. A sign of fear on the part of the men might have meant that they would not have followed me, and if so, I would have taken some drastic steps."
Needless to say, no drastic steps

BOTH EXPRESS CONFIDENCE
(Canadian Press)
LONDON, Jan. 25.—Confidence that an agreement for the settlement of Italy's debt to Great Britain would be concluded is expressed in an official statement issued by the Treasury after a long conference this afternoon between Count Volpi, Italian Finance Minister and Right Hon. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Extinction of Horses in Europe Seen Soon
PARIS, Jan. 25.—The prospect of the ultimate extinction of horses in Europe, which hitherto has been rendered nugatory by the interest in horse racing, is suggested by a private bill just tabled in the chamber of deputies, proposing that the totalizers be established in autódromes, thereby bringing in large sums to the state and also encouraging the motor industry and motor racing.

Electors Notice
Ladies and Gentlemen,—I am in the field as a candidate for Mayor at the coming City Elections. With a record of twelve years continuous service as Councilor for Ward Three, including four years as Chairman of the Street Committee and eight years Chairman of the Fire Committee, I feel that I am justified in seeking your votes for the highest office in the city.
Should you be the honor of electing me I shall endeavor to justify the confidence which you have reposed in me, and to give my support to a policy of improvement in our Civic Departments consistent with our revenue.
As it will be impossible for me to call upon every elector, I take this opportunity of thanking you for the generous support which you have accorded me in the past, and of soliciting your vote in the present election.
Respectfully yours,
R. B. RATTRAY.

Pilgrims Mortgage Property to Visit Holy Land
NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—With her maids gaily decorated with streamers, the steamship Republic, of the United States Lines, sailed from Hoboken yesterday with 519 passengers bound for the Holy Land on an inter-denominational pilgrimage. Many of the passengers had mortgaged their possessions to pay the fare for the trip which will take fifty days.
Bottles were carried by the passengers to bring back water from the Jordan River. The pilgrimage is sponsored by the Christian Herald.

EVERYONE WILL BE READING THE YELLOW STUB, a gripping mystery serial which starts in The Guardian next Monday, its one of Ernest Lynn's best.
THE YELLOW STUB is a mystery story with a closely intertwined love theme. Start the first chapter next Monday in The Guardian.

ZION CHURCH—Rev. Charles W. Squires, D. D., S. T. D., preached both morning and evening in Zion Church on Sunday, his topics respectively being "Food for the Soul" and "Mighty to Save." Both sermons were eloquent, thoughtful and scholarly. Dr. Squires left yesterday morning on return to Lynn, Mass. It was announced that Rev. Mr. Existance will be preacher for the next three Sundays.

THE YELLOW STUB—The Guardian's new serial starts next week. This is a story for the entire family. It concerns ordinary, everyday people. Its action might take place very naturally in your neighborhood, even in your own home. The men folk are going to devour this one. It has adventure and thrill and mystery to it. And as for the women and girls, bless their hearts, there's an engrossing, romantic plot running through the action as they'll find in many a day. The outcome of the love situation will be as breathlessly anticipated by them as the pulse-quickening solution of the crime mystery will be awaited by the men. Although the main theme has to do with the solution of a very mysterious murder, the author does not make heroes of criminals. You will not have to hide the story from the juvenile members of the household.

WEDDING BELLS—An event of more than ordinary interest took place at the home of Mrs. Emma Duffy, 17 Chestnut Street, Charlottetown when Miss Bessie Duffey became the bride of Mr. Alfred G. McKay, a prosperous farmer of New London. After the ceremony which was performed by the Rev. Ross C. Eaton in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom, a buffet dinner was served in Mrs. Duffey's best style, after which the happy couple left by the afternoon train for their home in New London amid showers of confetti and the good wishes of a host of friends who had gathered at their pretty new home in Cornwall. The surprise took the form of a nicely worded address and the presentation of a beautifully polished rattan arm-chair to Mr. Scott, while Mrs. Scott was also pleasantly remembered with a suitable gift. In recognition of the valuable assistance Mr. Scott had rendered the ladies of the Institute, during their many money-making activities at Cornwall Hall, the presentation was made. With speech-making, music, and the pleasant entertainment "when neighbours meet"—not "drouthy" ones, however—the hours sped swiftly until the social cup of tea and dainty lunch was served by the ladies. All good wishes for the New Year and merry good byes ended a delightful evening.

Spanish Aviators Report Progress
(Canadian Press)
LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands, Jan. 25.—Commander Franco and his fellow Spanish aviators today landed in their airplanes on Gando Bay on the east coast of Grand Canary Island the Principal member of the Canary group and tomorrow will start for Cape Verde Island a distance of 1,056 miles weather permitting.
The aviators are tentatively planning to fly from the latter city to New York.

—FUNERAL TOMORROW—The funeral of the late Mr. Hammond Wadman takes place tomorrow (Wednesday) from his late residence at Bellevue at 12 o'clock noon. There will be a service at the house at 12 o'clock and at the Church of St. Andrew, Cape Traverse upon arrival of the funeral.

DUTY MAY BE PREPAID—Regulations made under the Newfoundland Customs Act provide for a duty on all classes of advertising matter, such as price lists, catalogues, calendars, circulars, etc. The duty can be prepaid by means of Customs Duty Stamps affixed to each package. A package weighing up to 8 ounces would have to bear a duty stamp of 3c, a package weighing up to 12 ounces, 4c, and a package weighing up to 16 ounces, 5c. The stamps can be obtained from the Superintendent of the Newfoundland and Labrador Assorting Office, North Sydney, N. S., so that merchants or others sending out the above class of matter to Newfoundland should provide themselves with the necessary Customs Duty Stamps.

A SURPRISE VISIT—Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Scott were pleasantly surprised on Wednesday evening Jan. 13, when the members of Cornwall-York Pt. Women's Institute, with their men folk, called at their pretty new home in Cornwall. The surprise took the form of a nicely worded address and the presentation of a beautifully polished rattan arm-chair to Mr. Scott, while Mrs. Scott was also pleasantly remembered with a suitable gift. In recognition of the valuable assistance Mr. Scott had rendered the ladies of the Institute, during their many money-making activities at Cornwall Hall, the presentation was made. With speech-making, music, and the pleasant entertainment "when neighbours meet"—not "drouthy" ones, however—the hours sped swiftly until the social cup of tea and dainty lunch was served by the ladies. LONDON, Jan. 25.—Dr. Robert Bell, famous cancer expert, whose opposition to operating as a cure for cancer brought him into conflict with many surgeons, is dead here.
He was 80 years of age.

DOGS THAT MADE HISTORY.
"A legend tells us that after the Creation a gulf gradually opened between Adam and the beasts he had named. Among them stood the dog, gazing wistfully at the ever-widening chasm till, the separation was all but complete, he leaped the gulf and stood by man's side. There, with such slight exceptions as prove the rule, in his master's hour of need he has stood ever since."
As Miss Estelle Ross points out in her interesting volume "The Book of Noble Dogs", from which the above extract is taken, there are probably more myths and legends about dogs than about any other animal.
Some of these mythical beliefs are very curious. In England the natives insist that it is owing to the greediness of dogs that man lost his immortality. The Koumo, a tribe of Eastern India, believe that when a man is dying his dogs begin to howl. The ancient Greeks had many dog superstitions. They thought that Cerberus, the dog-guarded portals of Hades, guarded Heaven's portals. Dogs figure prominently in Irish and Scandinavian legends: one of the best-known was Samr, a hound, "huge of limb and for a follower equal to any able man."
Dogs, the author shows, have enjoyed the close friendship of kings as well as commoners. Everyone remembers, for example, King Edward's wretched terrier Caesar.
Charles I. inherited the Stuart love of dogs. He had great personal affection for Prince Rupert's white pointer, Boye. "He never sleeps or dines," writes an old chronicler, "but he continually feeds him. And what think you of the sides of capons and other such-like Christian morsels. If is thought that the King will make him Sergeant-Major General Boye. But truly the King's affection to him is so extra ordinary that some at Court envy him."
Charles 2nd's name is permanently linked with a breed of dog, the black and tan toy spaniel, which he first introduced to England. Oliver Cromwell had a dog named Coffin Nail; James 1st had for his constant companion a hound called Jewell. James 6th of Scotland's favorite dog, Bashe, used to sleep on his master's bed, and was fed on delicacies from the royal table, until he had to be banished. "His crimes were such that they came to James' ears. He worried the sheep, fought and killed other dogs, chased five foals through the brushwood till, in their terror they jumped into a bog and were drowned."
During her long imprisonment, Mary Queen of Scots had the companionship of a Skye terrier, of which a pathetic story is told. The animal seemed to have a premonition of his mistress' approaching end; he crept out as she passed to the scaffold, and as she laid her head on the block, whined piteously and snuggled into the folds of her black gown. And gradually plied away.
Queen Victoria, the author records, was devoted to dogs, especially to Dash, a little spaniel; another favorite was Sharp, a collie. At one time King George had a favorite dog, Harry; while the Prince of Wales' fondness for dogs is well-known. His special pet is a Cairn terrier, which is seldom away from his side when he is at St. James' Palace.

Thugs Bind Woman Set Clothes Afire
(Canadian Press)
MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—After being attacked in her home by three men, who bound her hand and foot, Mrs. Alfred Jobin, 38, of Verdun, came to her senses in a shed at the rear of her home with her clothing on fire, last night. She managed to roll out of the shed in the snow, and extinguished the flames before suffering serious injury. Neighbors, attracted by her screams, released her from her bonds.
As Miss Estelle Ross points out in her interesting volume "The Book of Noble Dogs", from which the above extract is taken, there are probably more myths and legends about dogs than about any other animal.
Some of these mythical beliefs are very curious. In England the natives insist that it is owing to the greediness of dogs that man lost his immortality. THE MARKETS
(Canadian Press)
MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market today was extremely dull, there being no demand from the United Kingdom or continent for supplies. The domestic trade in cash grain was quiet, the demand from all sources being still of a very limited character, but the undertone to the market was steady.
The trade in the spring and winter wheat flour market was moderately active and prices were unchanged. The movement of all kinds of millfeed continues fair and prices were well maintained. The demand for rolled oats was fair and prices unchanged. Prices for all grades of grain were quiet, the demand from all sources being still of a very limited character, but the undertone to the market was steady.

Prince Visits Canada House
LONDON, Jan. 25.—The Prince of Wales, attended by his equerry, Sir Godfrey Thomas, visited Canada House in Trafalgar Square, the Canadian government's headquarters, in London, this afternoon. The visit was quite informal but it, perhaps would be scarcely accurate to say that business in the building was uninterrupted thereby. At any rate it was not intended that the ordinary business in Canada House should be interrupted by the visit.
His Royal Highness chatted for a short time with the Canadian High Commissioner, Hon. P. C. Larkin, in the Commissioner's own room which is of a spaciousness that might be deemed symbolic of the expansive area of the Dominion itself.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 25.—The Makbar dam on the Blue Nile, far down in the Sudan, will be opened tomorrow by Lord Lloyd, British High Commissioner to Egypt, and will irrigate 300,000 acres of the Giza plain, devoted to cotton raising.
Egyptian officials estimate that in this area 40,000,000 pounds of cotton can be raised annually, thus providing a new cotton supply for the Lancashire mills, which draw most of their supply at present from the United States.
It was Earl Kitchener who first fostered the plan for a great dam in the Sudan. The dam is two miles long and will make a lake of 50 miles at its greatest dimension, holding 140,000,000 gals. of water. It cost £13,000,000 (about $53,000,000).

Quebec Seminary Sued for $1,000,000
(Canadian Press)
QUEBEC, Jan. 25.—Direct descendants of Louis Hébert, the first man to settle in what is now the City of Quebec, have entered action against the Quebec Seminary, in the Superior Court here, involving property that was deeded to M. Hébert over 400 years ago, and which now has a value that is estimated at well over $1,000,000, it was revealed today.
The action, which is the eighth of its kind instituted against the Seminary, has as plaintiff Dame Marie Benoit, formerly Marie Marguerite Couillard Despres, of St. Janvier, Quebec County, who claims that, because the property was deeded to her ancestors by the King of France, her rights to it are undeniable.

King May Leave Shortly For Prince Albert
(Canadian Press)
OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—While there is no definite announcement yet, it is understood that Premier Mackenzie King will leave shortly to visit the constituency of Prince Albert. By-election takes place in this constituency on the first of next month with voting on the fifteenth. Mr. King may be in the constituency on nomination day.
The Prime Minister has been suffering from a severe cold which confined him to his home, but he is now better.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of our dear sister Mrs. George Whitlock, who passed away January 26th, 1925.
Not gone from memory or from love.
But gone to her heavenly home above.
We loved her here we love her still.
Forget her no! We never will.
God knows how much we miss her.
He coaxes the tears we shed.
And whispers, hush, she only sleeps.
Your loved one is not dead.
Inserted by her loving sisters.

Ship Confiscated
(Canadian Press)
NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Orders from Federal Judge Sheppard of Pensacola, Fla., directing confiscation of the British schooner Pictonian have been received by the clerk of the federal court in Brooklyn.
The Pictonian was seized by the coastguard 14 miles off Long Island on Sept. 28, 1924, and was the first vessel to be taken under the "one-hour-from-shore" pact. It had on board 800 cases of liquor.
In the proceedings to libel the schooner, the government contended that a motor launch capable of a speed of 16 miles an hour, seized after it had obtained liquor from the Pictonian, put the latter "within the one-hour cruising distance from the United States shore."
