W. C. T. U. NOTES

SONNETS TO MOTHER

(By GEORGE G. COX)

Oh, how my heart is filled with love for thee!
No greater treasure could one ever hold.
No greater friend, no greater purity
Than thou dost in thy tender love unfold.
What do I owe to thee, my mother dear?
Do I not owe all life will give to thee?
When thou didst bring me through my tender years
What trying days and anxious heart for me!
That thou didst bear has crowned thy head in white.
How thou hast taught me how to kneel in grace!
When I have seen the glory of God's light
As it's revealed upon thy gleaming face
Is one of many joys I'll ne'er forget,
That comforts me when I'm in deep regret.

No better comrade have I ever known,
No one who better understands may ways.
No one a greater sympathy has shown
Than thou hast shown to me in saddest days.
This world of untold beauty and arrayed
With all the fancy cloaks that Spring puts on,
And all the joys I find in life's parade
From world of fragrance to the world of song,
Compare not to thy pure unselfish love,
For all I am and all I have today
Has come to me from Him who reigns above,
And had to come to me thy kindly way.
So may I live the best I can for thee,
And do a part of what thou hast for me!

THE HOME CIRCLE

John Randolph, the Southern statesman, wrote: "I should have been an atheist if it had not been for one recollection, namely, the memory of the time when my departed mother used to take my little hands in hers, and on bended knees taught me to say, 'Our Father, who art in heaven.'" Robert G. Ingersoll, the eloquent agnostic orator, acknowledged, publicly, the many criticisms credited to him concerning his father, who was a Congregational preacher of narrow views and unreasonable prejudices; but even though challenged again and again by T. De Witt Talmage and other well known American divines, he never questioned, in public or private, the Christian character and consistency of his mother's life.

"What have you left now?" said an agnostic to a young man after he had listened to a brilliant oration by the most eloquent infidel advocate of the present generation: "What have you left now?" The young man's answer was expressed in these words: "My mother's life!"

Said one friend to another, which translation of the Bible do you prefer —the authorized version, the revised or the American?" His answer was, "I prefer my mother's translation!" His mother had made the doctrine of the New Testament real, vital and substantial. Her life had been an incarnation of Christian ideals.

A mother whose name has passed into history once wrote to her boy, saying: "If you could see me kissing your picture and then, after awhile, taking it up again, and with tears in my eyes, calling you 'My Beloved Son' you would comprehend what it costs me, sometimes, to use the stern language of authority and even to occasion you moments of pain."

The mightiest prayers ever offered have ascended from a mother lips. 'My mother's prayers haunt me like a ghost!" said the conscious-stricken sailor when slipping down the rattlines one night as though stung into nervousness by an unwelcome thought. "I knew that my mother would be praying for me," said one who became a famous American bishop. "I knew that my mother would be praying for me —and it helped me!"

The swiftest thing in the universe is a mother's prayer. From London to Edinburgh in a flash! From Edinburgh to Montreal in a flash; From Montreal to Winnipeg in a flash; From Winnipeg to Vancouver in a flash! Oh, what a wonderful arrow of light, tripped with fire, aflame with love, winged with faith and vibrating with spiritual force. A mother's prayer is a thought of love passing through the universal heart of God and on its way from soul to soul. I seem to hear the reply of the Bishop of Hippo to the mother of Augustine, who came beseeching him to pray for her skeptical son: "Depart, good woman," said he; "the child of so many prayers can not be lost!"

The greatest sacrifices for the church have been made by Christian mothers.

IS THIS TRUE IN YOUR COMMUNITY

In a speech delivered recently, Mrs. Donald McDonald, of Cobourg, said that only about 31 per cent of the Canadian women voters ever went to the polls. If that is the case in any community, larger or smaller, for municipal, provincial or Dominion elections, we cannot be said to be in the least measuring up to a democratic form of government. The skeleton is there to be sure, but there will be little flesh on the bones. Did your local union ever find out just how that proportion stands in your own community? And did you ever try to make it better? Mrs. McDonald has done a great thing in Cobourg. She formed twelve women of her own acquaintance as a nucleus of a Ratepayers' Association. It has now grown in that small town to 1,000 members, who are a strong citizenship force in the town. Cannot you do likewise?

WET CHURCHES IN ACTION

Here is news on a par with the well-known "man bites a dog" definition.

Columbus, Ohio, newspapers of recent date tell of a complaint of a beer tavern keeper of a certain city in Noble country (the name of which the liquor board refused to divulgie) filed with the board against two churches of his town, charging that these churches were unfair competitors in that they took out week-end licenses to sell beer Saturdays and Sundays, practically killing his Sunday business. These special week-end licenses granted to fraternal and charitable organizations cost five dollars. The two church alternate the weeks, thus giving the poor tavern keeper no Sunday without competition, which he can't meet because of the reduced license fee. The brewers at least can't label the preachers of these churches as "prohibition fanatics."

DO YOU KNOW HOW TO CHEER?

As the King and Queen ride by the particular square foot of Canada where you are standing—what will you be doing? Cheering, waving—or just staring?

We're not a demonstractive people We're not used to Royalty. Our processions are usually spectacles, and we watch them pass with silent interest.

The King and Queen are used to massed crowds, who are accustomed for generations to showing their love and fealty in cheering. Every time they appear in public they are met by crowds who shout their welcome as naturally as they crane forward to get the best view.

Is there a chance that in all the preparation for the Royal Visit in your own particular community everything will be attended to but the need for pointing out to the people how much it will mean to the King and Queen to hear their welcome?

CITY RENTINGS

It will be noted that we now have a number of new listings, particulars of which we shall be glad to give to enquirers.

BUILDING LOTS

We have building lots for sale in all parts of the City, the more important of which are included in the list below.

FARMS FOR SALE

With the spring weather the demand for farms has become quite brisk and many sales are being arranged for. In the accompanying list only the locality, acreage and price are given; and those interested are invited to call for full particulars and terms. Most of these farms are being offered because of the death, illness or maturing years of the owners. The prices are all low, in most cases scarcely covering the cost of the buildings alone.
