SELECTED NEWS OF GENERAL INTEREST FROM EUROPEAN CENTRES

JOHANNESBURG, Nov. 14 (Special)—According to the "Rand Daily Mail," and extensive conspiracy for the illicit exportation of gold has been discovered. It is stated that for some time past large quantities of gold in the form of ingots have been sent to London, Liverpool, Dover, and other places through the post, packed in parcels purporting to be process blocks. Payment was made to a man in Johannesburg who was dealing direct with a wealthy English syndicate. The gold itself was, of course, easily disposed of at one of the depots of the firm in England. The traffic is said to have been discovered by a spy, who spent some months in the gold mines, and wormed himself into the confidence of the illicit exporters.

LONDON Nov. 14 (Special)—The "mysterious musical sounds" recorded on wireless instruments in the watches of the night to which Dr. W. H. Cummings made interesting and poetic reference at a meeting of the Authors' Club, have frequently puzzled Marconi operators. The Marconi, engineers, however, describe them simply as being closely connected with charges of an electrical nature in the upper regions of the atmosphere.

"At one time," an official of the company explained, "our operators were mabifestly puzzled at these interpositions, and were unable to account for the phenomena. Today our instruments are so turned that the influence of the atmosphere reates an entirely different note from that which owes its origin to electromagnetic causes."

These mysterious noises are also described as "wireless freak communications" due to the variations in the transmitting efficiency of the atmosphere.

During the night the variations are far more pronounced than at any other time, and are marked by the sudden veiling or obscuring of distant signals.

The approach of thunder effects the instruments noticeably, and is responsible for much of that "heavenly music," the origin of which remains a mystery no longer.

BERLIN, Nov. 19—(Special)—Compulsory military service for German women is the remedy suggested by Professor Witzel, of Dusseldorf, in order to safeguard the health of the army when engaged in active service. Every woman should, in his opinion, undergo a thorough course of training in Red Cross work, needlework, and field cookery; then, in the event of war, the feminine forces could be quickly mobilized and despatched to the scene of operation with the regular army. The women's forces would be officered by members of their own sex, and while on active service would receive wages in accordance with the duties performed.

MUNICH, Nov. 19—(Special)—As a protection for young girls leaving the country to join theatrical companies or troupes as variety singers and dancers, the Bavarian Minister of the Interior has issued a decree to the effect that before being allowed to leave Bavaria young girls will have to obtain a written testimonial from their parents or legal guardians that the journey is being undertaken with their consent. This testimonial will then be exchanged by the police authorities for a pass.

Shou ld, however, the authorities have reason to believe that the errand is a doubtful one, even if the parents state that they have made investigations, power is given to hinder the journey by placing the girls as wards in Chancery, withholding the pass until satisfactory investigations have been made through liable sources.

JOHANNESBURG, Nov. 12. (Special.)— A conference of Imperial authorities has been held at Durban for the purpose of considering plans for the defence of the port. Details are not forthcoming, but it is understood that the scheme will be put in hand forthwith. At the same conference the decision was taken to make Pietermaritzburg the artillery centre for the whole Union and to abolish all the existing small units, both of infantry, engineers, and mounted men, with a view to the absorption of their members in larger corps. An idea has gained some currency that this conference, which was attended by the Minister of Defence as well as the General Officer Commanding, had some reference to the threatening state of affairs in Europe at the present time.

BERLIN, Nov. 14 (Sperlial)—The population statistics based on the Imperial census of December 1, 1910, shows that the total population of Germany has increased by 15.18 per cent, in the space of ten years. One of the most remarkable facts shown by the new statistical tables is the importance of the foreign element in the German Empire, and the extent to which the foreign and foreign-born population has recently increased. With a population of 63,925,993 subjects of the Imperial throne, Germany also counts 1,259,873 foreigners within her frontiers. It is patent that Germany is importing brains and labor, for the inrrease in the foreign population has been four times as rapid as that of the native population—the increase indeed was nearly 20 per cent in only five years, the total addition to the foreign population within this period being 231,313.

There is little fear that the character of the nation will be changed in consequence, as more than half of the foreign element comes from German-speaking Austria, and the next largest element comes from Holland, a country which has more in common with Germany than most of the other nations. In all, there were 144,000 Dutchmen, 137,000 Russians, 104,000 Italians, and 68,000 Swiss. The Rhine provinces continue to be more international than any other part of the Empire. The statistics as to religion show that the Protestants outnumber Roman Catholics in the proportion of three to two.

BERLIN, Nov. 16 (Special)—The Emperor has opened the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute for Chemistry and the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute for Physical Chemistry and Electro-Chemistry. They are situated at Dahlem, a suburb of Berlin, which promises to be occupied almost entirely by scientific institutions and the dwellings of professors and other persons connected with them. They are the first two institutions established under the auspices of the Kaiser Wilhelm Gesellschaft, founded at the instigation of the Emperor to commemorate the centenary of Berlin University. Ample funds were apportioned for building expenses and for fitting up the institutes with the most modern and complete appliances.

In the course of his opening speech the Emperor said:—"Terrible catastrophes that have occurred in our coal mines during the past few years have impelled me to ask chemists through the technical Universities if chemistry cannot furnish prophylactic means for protecting men working underground, and if so to submit to me proposals and designs. What I have in my mind are innocuous chemical preparations, a change in whose appearance would at once warn superintending officials and workmen of approaching danger."

DUBLIN, Nov. 16 (Special)—An important manifesto in favor of Home Rule has been signed by seven noted gentlemen, The significance of their declaration is that they are converts to Home Rule; and the case of one of them, Sir West Ridgeway, is of especial importance, inasmuch as he was associated with Mr. Balfour's Irish Secretaryship and its policy of coercion.

The manifesto is as follows:—

We, the undersigned, who were unable to support Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule Bills, are now convinced that some form of Home Rule is the only feasible method of removing the chronic trouble and standing danger to the Empire which arise from the anomalous relations between Great Britain and Ireland. Procumbrous, and practically irresponsible system of Irish government cannot be remedied so long as Irish administration is entangled in British party politics. We believe that the present Home Rule Bill, though in the opinion of some of us important modifications are necessary, is an honest endeavor to grapple with the problems; and, should be passed into law. Among the signatories were:—

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the well-known novelist, who was once a Unionist candidate.

Joseph Hocking, the novelist, and many other noted men.

DUBLIN, Nov. 16 (Special)—The Tories in the House of Commons are thoroughly dispirited with the complete failure of their attempts at obstructing the Home Rule Bill. Their original plan was to get up a disorderly scene, and to be suspended in large numbers. They have been warned that that would have a very bad effect in the country. They are now considering a new proposal that fifty or sixty of their best speakers should abandon the struggle in the House and conduct a campaign in the country. They hope thus to steal a march on Liberal members, who are tied to the House. Their organizers, however, report that it is practically impossible to get the people to take an interest in the matter.

It was intended by the Government that Trinity College and its privileges should be handed over to the Irish Government under Home Rule, and J. H. Campbell, the junior representative in the House of Commons of that illustrious foundation, portested at the sitting of the Committee on the Bill that no safeguards were provided in the Bill that would protect Trinity College; he therefore moved that "Trinity College, Dublin, or the Irish University," should be added to the list of matters that are to be removed from the control of the Irish Parliament. He enforced this proposal with a vigorous defence of the ancient rights and privileges of his "alma mater," in a House that included Mr. Balfour, newly arrived from a refreshing recess; Walter Long, just back from Canada; and Mr. Asquith, looking all the better for his enforced rest indoors.

BERLIN, Nov. 14 (Special)—The German vineyards have been visited with severe frosts, and the hope of good vintage has been destroyed. Nearly everywhere the vine leaves have been destroyed, and the grapes injured by the frost must now be picked before they are completely ripe. This is a great blow to the vine-growers, who, if they had a good harvest last year, lost heavily in the two previous years. The question now arises how far the law of 1909 against adulteration will allow the addition of sugar and other substances for the improvement of the wine this year. The law of 1909 laid it down that grapes were only to be grown for the manufacture of wine on soil that produced drinkable wine without any artificial improvement in normal years. In bad seasons artificial sweetening may only be employed to bring the wine up to the standard of ordinary years. No doubt the artificial sweetening of the wine was carried too far. But the German growers and the public are asking at present, if this law cannot be amended, for if considerably more than the average amount of sugar used in different seasons is not allowed, the wine of 1912 will cause everyone who drinks it a very sour face indeed.

WEIMAR, Nov. 16 (Special)—A free lecture was given last night by the "Flotten Verein," the German Navy League, under the title of "Our Fleet in Comparison with those of England and other Powers." The lecturer was Captain Baron von Meerscheidt-Hullessem, a retired officer, who was on board the "Brandenburg" in the China Expedition, and whose promising naval career was cut short by an accident. The hall was crowded, and many people could not obtain seats. The general trend of the lecture was as follows:—Last year England and France put their oars in Germany's boat in Morocco. Then Germany was not strong enough to challenge England—worse luck (leider). What the German people must do is to put their strength into the German Navy, and build the strongest Navy, just as they made the strongest Army. The enemy in the first rank was not France, but England. And they would not cease to build until they were strong ?nough to overcome these "English bulls," (Loud cheers). What he wished to see was the day when Germany could put her foot down anywhere in the world without the interference of other Powers. The Germans did not wish for war, they wished to avoid it, but if it was necessary they would fight until the last man fired the last gun. The lecturer then proceeded to speak of the Fleet, Kiel, Wilhelmshafen, and Danzig, and to show maps and slides. It is estimated that the illustrated lectures of the "Flotten Verein," which has a membership of a million and an income of about $250,000, rare attended on the average by 150,000 people every month.

DUBLIN, Nov. 15 (Special)— It is recognized at Westminster that Mr. Birrell's pledge to deal with land purchase at the earliest possible moment has removed a difficulty which confronted the Irish Nationalist members—the reluctance of the Irish rural community to show any enthusiasm for Home Rule unless accompanied by some promise to accelerate land purchase. The Prime Minister's hope to relieve the Imperial Parliament through Home Rule of Irish business will not be realized, if its attention after Home Rule is to be devoted to land purchase, and, as Mr. Austen Chamberlain stated, opinion in Great Britain after Home Rule is likely to be very different towards Irish land purchase.

In deference to the appeals of the Opposition the Government gave two additional days to the Committee stage of the bill, making 27 in all.

ROME, Nov. 19—(Special)—It has been known for some time past that, as the result of inquiries and tests, a commission of officers and technical advisers of the Italian War Office had advised the purchase of "Bristol" military monoplanes, and successive orders have arrived at Filton for some months past, last week's order being for nine monoplanes. A National Patriotic Fund is being raised in Italy, and already amounts to between $400,000 and $500,000. The National Committee asked their War Office to settle, among all the makers of the world, the best type of machine for military purposes, and the official decision has now been published. All the machines paid for out of the Patriotic Fund will be built in Italy under the license and technical advice of the British and Colonial Aeroplane Company.
