

HOW IT FEELS TO BE CROWNED

LONDON, Aug. 5.—There has hardly been time for George V and Queen Mary to tell how they felt when the final act of the coronation was performed, but the Standard has collected the expressions of other kings and queens on the subject. About thirty years ago there was discovered a letter from Annie Boleyn to her father in which she writes:

"I said to myself that on Whitsunday, when his Grace did do unto me so mightily honor, that I was all in a dream and that it could not last, but that I should awake out of my sleep into my own pettiness. And from the moment when the Mayor and Aldermen did greet me and her Grace of Norfolk did bear my traine from Westminster Hall to the Abbey, I say to myself a thousand times it is untrue. The King's Grace cometh bent to so unworthy as I. And God knows how his grace of Canterbury can tell, and Friar Robert, whether or not I shed tears of joy but astonishment, when the golden bonnet of St. Edward was put upon my forehead."

Both William III. and his queen wrote accounts of their coronation, that of the former being contained in a letter to one Count Hoven or Koven at The Hague, where the original still is.

"It was a great moment," wrote the King, "when I actually felt the crown descending upon me and touching my temples, and I could not restrain a thrill but not of joy, my dear Koven, but of awe, at the responsibilities Almighty God has been pleased to put upon me. Bentinck and Schomburg caught my glance, and when they initiated the rest and flung their caps upwards knew how it fared with me.

"Nor did I at that supreme moment forget my own first country, my beloved Holland. The crowning business is sufficiently fatiguing, but I thank God, although last week far from well and today found me in the best of health. Likewise was the Queen well and went through the whole ceremony happily, barring a

Queen Mary was charged by many with unbecoming leixity in view of the circumstances, the flight and deposition of her father, that had raised her to the throne. But from her own account "this was a misjudgment."

"Many," she writes, "would not believe it, so that I was fain to force myself to more mirth than became me at that time, and was by many interpreted as ill natured, pride and the great delight I had to be a Queen. But alas they did little know me who thought me guilty of that; I had been only for a regency, and wished for nothing else; I had never dreamed being Queen, liking my condition much better. My heart is not made for a kingdom and my inclination leads me to a retired quiet life, so that I have the need of all the resignation and self-denial in the world to bear with such a condition as I am now in."

Queen Ann wrote very freely on the subject of her own coronation.

"I need hardly tell you," she says, in a letter to one of her intimates then abroad, "I suffered agonies yesterday, although Lord Jersey very constantly arranged that I should be spared being on my feet as much as possible, for which I owe him much thanks. But in getting into the chair I gave my right foot such a wrench that I was fain to cry out. The hearing the cries of the multitude sustained me then and afterwards in the Abbey, although when I rose, with the help of the Archbishop, I was forced to keep my eyes on a very gaudy escutcheon on a pillar, little minding his words until he nudged me to turn to the east.

"Moreover, what is not usual with me, my finger was so swollen that when the ring was put on it was too small and caused me much pain in the endeavor to make it pass. They should have provided this, and so I told Somerset to tell the duke. You can well believe that I had more need for rest than food and further ceremony, but these duties were not to be without complaint, as you have heard."

shape of a kirtle, which was put over a singular sort of a little gown of linen trimmed with lace. I also took off my circlet of diamonds and then proceeded bareheaded into the Abbey.

"I was then seated upon St. Edward's chair, where the Dramatic robe was clasped around me by the Lord Great Chamberlain. Then followed all the various things and last (of those things) the crown being placed on my head—which was, I must own, a most beautiful impressive moment; all the peers and peereses put on their coronets at the same instant. The shouts which were very great, the Will Mathieson, miller for Mr. Hayden, Vernon Rice Rolles Mills, has gone to the West. He was a very popular and estimable young man, and will be much missed by a large host of friends.

SIR WILFRID'S TOUR IN THE MARITIME PROVINCES

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier's program of addresses in the Maritime Provinces has been fixed as follows:

Monday, August 28th, Saint John. Tuesday, August 29th, Digby. Wednesday, August 30th, Halifax. Thursday, August 31st, New Glasgow. Friday, September 1st, Charlottetown. Saturday, September 2nd, Moncton.

Cabinet changes are foreshadowed in connection with the retirement of Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries and Naval Affairs, who is to take a position on the Supreme Court Bench, it will take place next week. Mr. Brodeur is now winding up matters of Departmental Administration to have things in shape for his successor, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, present Postmaster-General. Dr. Beland, member for Beauce, will enter the Cabinet as Postmaster-General and will be sworn in within a few days at Murray Bay, Que., where Earl Grey now is.

The various provincial governments on both sides are likely to take a decidedly more active part in the general federal contest than in the last general election.

Mr. Borden has repeatedly appealed to every possible ally to help him out.

The Imperialist National League, the anti-imperial Bourassaites, the English tariff reformers, the high tariff vested interests, have all rallied in one fortuitous concourse of related prejudices to defeat Laurier.

It is understood that Sir James Whitney and Premier Hazen of New Brunswick, following the lead of Premier McBride of British Columbia, and acting Premier Rogers of Manitoba, have after much pressure decided to throw the whole weight of their provincial governments and organizations into the fight against Liberalism.

To meet the attack, Liberalism, both federal and provincial, will present a united front. Premier A. L. Sifton of Alberta, and Premier Walter Scott of Saskatchewan, who arrived here today, had a long conference with Sir Wilfrid and will give all possible aid to the Liberal candidates in their respective provinces.

Premier Scott may enter the Laurier Cabinet after the elections, thus giving the west the additional Cabinet representation to which it is now entitled.

Premier Gouin of Quebec and his government will, of course, fight vigorously against the Nationalist foes both of himself and of Sir Wilfrid.

Hon. A. K. McLean, attorney general of Nova Scotia, has been here for the past two days consulting Sir Wilfrid and Hon. Mr. Fielding. Premier Murray also met Mr. Fielding and Sir Frederick Borden in Montreal on Tuesday. Arrangements have been made for the active support of the provincial Liberals in the federal fight. Hon. A. K. McLean will take a large share in the direction of the Liberal campaign in Nova Scotia, and may be the government's candidate against Mr. Borden in Halifax.

Sir Wilfrid will remain in the capital until he opens his tour on August 15th.

The place selected for Sir Wilfrid Laurier's opening meeting of the campaign on August 15th is the town of Simeoe, Norfolk County. The town is in the centre of a fine-fighting ground for the Liberal candidates in a half dozen surrounding ridings.

Leaders are being called for the construction of a branch line of the Intercolonial Railway to Dean Settlement in Guysboro County, a distance of about 70 miles and for a shorter branch from Country Harbor to Guysboro. An act was put through early last session authorizing the construction of these lines.

QUEEN VICTORIA

It is doubtful if any monarch ever left a fuller or more intimate account of a coronation in which he was the central figure than that sent by Queen Victoria to her uncle, King Leopold.

"I reached the Abbey," she writes "amid deafening cheers at a little after 11.30. I first went into a robing room quite close to the entrance, where I found my eight train bearers, all dressed alike and beautifully in white satin and silver tissue, with wreaths of silver corn ears in front and a small one of pink roses round the plait behind, and pink roses in the trimming of the dresses.

"After putting on my mantle and the young ladies having properly got hold of it and Lord Conyngham holding the end of it, I left the robing room and the procession began. The sight was splendid; the bank of peereses quite beautiful all in their robes and the peers on the other side. My young train bearers were always near me and helped me whenever I wanted anything. The Bishop of Durham stood on the side near me, but he was as Lord Melbourne told me remarkably maladroit and never could tell me what was to take place.

"At the beginning of the anthem I retired to St. Edward's Chapel, a dark small place immediately behind the altar, with my ladies and train bearers. Took off my person robe and kirtle and put on the super tunica of cloth of gold, also in the
