3 Stoves in One

1. It Circulates Heat. Being built along the lines of the regular Circulator or Furnacette, it sets up a circulation of warmed moist air which reaches the furthermost corners of the House.

2. It Radiates Heat. Built of Cast-iron both inside and out it Radiates Heat in its immediate vicinity in the same way as a regular Heating Stove.

3. It Has the Charm of an Open Fire. The large mica door in the upper part shows the fire the same as a regular Franklin, or it can be opened so one can enjoy the open fire the same as from a fireplace.

No other stove on the market combines these desirable features.

Motoring With Mary

Every revolution of the engine grinds out wisdom for the woman who drives a car, one of them has discovered.

By MARY JANE MOORE

THE MODEL MUDDLE

"Now that we've decided that we are going to buy a new car and selected the make after trying everything within price limit we set, I want to know if you have made up our mind as to the right model."

Recognizing this remark of Bob's as a flash-back of the defeat his judgment took when the Splendid Six won over the Serene Six in our car shopping competition, I let it pass lightly.

"I am a model muddle," I began. "What do you think?"

"What difference does it make what I think?" he queried.

"A lot—if you really think," I retorted.

"under ordinary circumstances, that answer would not be soft enough to turn away wrath," said Bob. " These, however, are not ordinary circumstances. I want to drive that car right away, regardless of the model."

Recognizing that conditions called for some member of the family becoming matter-of-fact, I nomiated and elected myself for the office at once.

"Let's see, the salesman gave us four or five catalogues," I opened the subject. "This one seems bulgy enough to do the work of all. It lists 14 models. Price eliminates some of them. Present condition of servitude eliminates others. Those are the deluxe models. We have left eight different body styles from which to select the one that fits our needs."

"What are our needs?" Bob broke in. "Would a roadster fit them?"

"Since we are going to try to get along with one car, it will have to fit mutual needs," I replied. "Offhand, I doubt that a roadster would fill the bill. They are fine and popular, as they should be but in what are known as single-car families, the manufacturer saw a need for closed cars. You can upset that argument, if you try hard enough perhaps."

"I won't try," replied Bob. "You'd give the family all the snap it needed even if its car was a collegiate flivver."

"Encore," I applauded, but knowing that the next one would be labored, I rushed on:

"There are three of us. A five passenger car would mean unused space a great deal of the time — most of the time. If you agree with that, admitting of course that it does not apply except in our own case, that eliminates the coach and sedan models. We already have eliminated the roadster for the moment. That leaves only the coupe.

"I like coupe models. It's a personal preference, I admit. Somehow they seem best in the matter of setting off my particular style of beauty — and I'd always have Junior within grabbing distance should he ever learn how to open the doors. You see, I'll admit I count upon driving this car."

"Yes, and if we get a coupe with a rumble seat, we'll have room for our in-laws when they come to visit us," said Bob — a little too significantly, I thought.

"And, with a glass partition between ourselves and them," I added.

So, the model muddle ended on the choice of a coupe. Next time it may have a far different ending.

C. N. R. Gives Tank Car Order

(Special to The Guardian)

MONCTON, Nov. 2—The order has been placed, it was announced today, by Canadian National Railway officials, for thirty tank cars for use on that system. These cars are to be built by Canadian Car and Foundry Company and it is understood will be used chiefly in the conveyance of creosote oil shipments between the production factories and the creosoted plants, where ties are to be treated for use on Canadian National lines.

Loading Record

The S. S. Hansi loaded by DeBlois Bros., which sailed at noon Tuesday for Cuba was loaded in record time at Bruce Stewart & Co's. Wharf. Loading commenced at 7.30 Monday and up to 8.30 p.m. 12672 bags of potatoes were put on board with three gangs working. 16960 bags were taken altogether.

This is the best record made so far in loading a ship with potatoes in this Province. John B. Gormley was boss Stevedore and aided by Mr. H. V. Buntain of Buntain & Bell Co., who were agents for this ship kept a steady stream of Cobblers pouring into the hold.

In an interview with the Captain he expressed his appreciation and said he had received the best attention and service ever rendered him in any port where he loaded. This speaks well for all who took part in the loading of the ship and for the facilities afforded at Bruce Stewart & Co's. Wharf for handling a cargo of this kind.

In Memoriam

MRS. STEPHEN MORRISON

On October 23rd the community of Savage Harbour was saddened, when it learned of the death of one of its residents, Mrs. Stephen Morrison, in the 49th year of her age. Though she had not enjoyed good health for some months, it was not until six weeks before her death, that she was forced to remain bedfast. During those weeks she was perfectly resigned to the death she knew was approaching, and maintained a cheerful manner throughout her sufferings.

Besides her sorrowing husband she leaves to mourn their loss, one sister, Mrs. Alexander MacAuley Mt. Ryan, and four brothers John J of Blooming Pt., Pius, James and Thomas of the United States. A large procession followed the remains to St. Andrews Church, where Requiem high Mass was celebrated by her pastor Rev. A. P. McLellan who also performed the services at the grave in the adjoining cemetery. The pall bearers were: Adrian Feeban, Fulton Douglass James Morrison, Charles Morrison, Percy Coffin Wilfred Coffin.

ADVICE FOR ADVERTISING CAMPAIGNS

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 2—American advertisers in planning an advertising campaign in Canada should take full recognition of Canadian national pride and the character of the people, according to H. E. Mihell of Toronto, manager of the Association of Canadian Advertisers, who addressed the delegates to the annual Association of National Advertisers' Convention in session here today.

"The national pride of the people in Canada," he said, "and our additional pride in our place in the British Empire, must not be slighted in advertising or any other form of appeal. Under this arrangement the Canadian people have a strong belief in the destiny of Canada as an autonomous, co-operative nation. Our ideals are Anglo-Saxon and British.

Newspapers Come First

"We have an unparalleled opportunity for co-operation with the other nations of the British Empire, among whom is perfected understanding on trade and other matters.

"The usual order of consideration in larger Canadian campaigns is: First, newspapers; second, magazines, including farm papers; third, posters and perhaps radio, with direct-mail placed where advertiser wishes it.

"In Ontario, for instance, we have found that the intensity of newspaper circulation per capita varies from .18 to .89 while magazines have a fairly even distribution of about .04. English magazines are not read to any extent in Quebec."

Officers Are Elected

Guy C. Smith of Chicago was elected President at today's session. He succeeds William A. Hart of Wilmington, Delaware. Other officers elected were: Bernard Lichtenberg, New York, Eastern Vice-President; Norman E. Olds, Cleveland, Central Vice-President; T. F. Driscoll, Chicago, Western Vice-President, and Arthur H. Ogle, New York, Secretary-Treasurer.

Free publicity was criticized as lessening the advertising value of a newspaper by John Benson of New York, President of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, in speaking before the convention. "The offer of free publicity is only a bait employed to secure advertising," he declared, and we cannot be too sweeping about it. Publicity service may be quite constructive and proper, but often it is not. The news columns of the press should not be inspired by an advertiser. They should be free from commercial bias. As advertisers and advertising agents, we have a common interest in maintaining greater confidence in the press."

FRENCH HEELS RESEMBLE OLD CHINESE CUSTOM

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 5.—French heels worn by western women today are almost on a par with the custom of bandaging feet adopted by Chinese women of a generation ago, according to Miss Bernice Chu, who has come from Peking to study public health nursing systems in the western hemisphere, and even a generation go the Chinese women though that American and European ladies inflicted great self-torture when they wore corsets.

Interviewed locally Miss Chu said: "It is cruel and foolish to pierce the ears to put in jewels for the sake of beauty, and it is just the same with French heels. Only because of an instinctive idea of beauty they wear those heels which throw the body forward and gradually deform the pelvis. Chinese women do not wear such heels, and they do not use as many things on their face. College girls in China do not use powder and rouge to keep their faces pretty, only those with nothing else to do but live at home and keep beautiful use as many things as the American women do."

Thoroughly modern in her professional knowledge, in her speech and study, Miss Chu retains many of the customs of her country. Beneath her tailored chinchilla coat she wears a native Chinese costume, with long overblouse of silk with wide kimono sleeves and skirt of figured black velvet. Her hair is not bodded, but coiled tightly over her ears. She wears a bang or "liu Hae," as the the short hair over the forehead is called. When she returns to Peking Miss Chu will spend all her time directing training in health among the children in the school, for she believes that is the best way to teach a nation.

III ALARCON TURNS BACK

For a long time the Spaniards in Mexico did not know whether or not California was an island. They were really thinking of Lower California, the long peninsula which still belongs to Mexico.

The men who sailed north to carry baggage for Coronado, learned that California was not an island. They sailed up the gulf until they came to the mouth of a river now known as the Colorado. It was very wide, but the current was so strong that the sailing ships could not go up.

Indians brought corn to the white men

Alarcon, the leader of the fleet, decided to enter the river with two small boats and 20 men. Long ropes were tied to the boats, which were pulled by sailors walking along the shore.

Form time to time groups of Indians were seen. They watched from a little distance, and sometimes gave forth angry shouts. The Spaniards did not shoot at them, however, and after a time some of the Indians became friendly. They brought corn to the white men and were given trinkets in return. Certain Indians even offered to tug the boats, and thus saved the Spaniards a great deal of labor.

With the sailors were two or three Indians from Mexico, who were able to talk a little with some of the natives along the river. One of the natives said:

"Two of our men have just come back from the land of Cibola. They saw white men there with things that shoot fire."

Alarcon felt sure that his friends were in Cibola. He asked how long it would take to get there, and was told that the journey would be about 40 days. He asked his men if they were willing to make the trip, but they shook their heads. They were afraid to go so far through wild, strange country, and could not be persuaded to do so.

Soon the party turned back and rode swiftly down stream. It had taken 15 days to get to the north, but the return took less than three days! That was because the river had such a swift current.

NEW MACHINE TALKS BACK TO SPEAKER

LONDON, Nov. 5 — The Daily Express said to-day that a device has been invented which recorded sound and reproduced it immediately in full volume an with clarity and accuracy.

A short test speech spoken into an ordinary microphone yesterday came back with startling distinctness one minute after it was finished. It was recorded on a few inches of magnetized wire. No wax, chemicals or other fixing materials were needed.

The device can be attached to a telephone and the entire conversation reheard immediately after it is finished. The paper said the device was the simplest, cheapest, and most practical system of sound reproducelon ever invented. It is a development of an invention known to experimenters for 30 years.

::For Burns and Scalds.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil will take the fire out of a burn or scald. It should be at hand in every kitchen so that it may be available at any time. There is no preparation required. Just apply the oil to the burn or scald and the pain will abate and in a short time cease altogether.
