—KENSINGTON POST OFFICE — The new Post Office at Kensington is a complete picture of modest utility. Located it is within the triangular space formed by the termini of the Irishtown and the Margate roads which unite in Kensington and that part of Commercial Street which intersects. Nearby is the Civic Building with its Lockup, also the Fire Station—two coolers. The Post Office Building, though not spectacular in appearance, is nevertheless, a valuable asset to the town the evident need of which had long been felt. The foundation is solidly secure and capable of sustaining perfectly erect, the structure that it supports. The floor and walls are built of dependable concrete. The underpinning, in fact, is guaranteed to endure so long as the building lasts. The material of the structure proper is of the finest quality, the frame composed of parts that will preserve the form. The framework is completely covered with matched spruce boards, laid on the diagonal which insures symmetry. This surface is covered with twelve-ounce tarred felt, the inner space veneered with terra cotia red brick. The roof is covered with British Columbia fir, installed by Mr. Thomas Johnston, caretaker is Mr. William L. Delaney, who also did the wiring. Mr. H. C. also a returned soldier. Mr. Gordon

Are Your Truck Tires "Geared" to their Average Load?

OVERLOADING is more destructive on truck and bus tires than any other single force.

Find out the maximum wheel load of your trucks or busses, front and rear, buy tires built for that load and don't go beyond it. Weigh the front wheels and the rear wheels, and be careful that loads which project over the rear end of the chassis do not throw an excessive load on the rear tires.

Get a good tire dealer's advice about the size and type of tire for any particular class of service. His experience is supplemented by the knowledge and experience of the tire manufacturer.

A weekly trip to a tire service station for a thorough inspection of tires will pay good dividends in reduced tire costs.

"Usconite," an outstanding development in heavy service pneumatic tire construction

For years tire engineers have tried to find a way to offset the effects of heat accumulation in pneumatic truck tires.

Now the Dominion Rubber Company have developed a rubber compound — "Usconite" — which minimizes this destructive element.

It maintains its tenacious characteristics under high temperatures. It has a strong affinity for cotton, making the plies hold firmly together, and preventing tread and carcass separation. Yet, it permits great freedom of movement in the carcass. Only Dominion use "Usconite".

Note the ribbed wall construction which protects the side walls against wear and side-scuffing from curb or deep rut. "Usconite," the new rubber compound prevents tread and carcass separation. Read about it in the paragraph at the right.
