MYSTERY BARS WORRY FRENCH

(United Press)

JUAN-LES-PINS, French Riviera, Sept. 9.—Mystery bars like American speakies, are puzzling French revenue officers along the Riviera.

The new bars are usually established in private houses. The proprietor acts as bartender, but this position is often filled by the most skillful mixer among the guests.

As the bars are not run for profit, they have been strongly criticized by proprietors of drink emporiums, who have seen their profits decline during the already bad season.

The worries of the professional bar proprietors are shared by revenue officials, who realize they will lose heavily if private drinking becomes too fashionable.

Like most fads on the Riviera this one is said to have come from Hollywood.

New Glasgow

On Sunday September 6th, a service was held in the New Glasgow United Church under the auspices of the Cradle Roll department of that church. Fathers, mothers, babies and the Sunday school occupied the centre seats, as the junior members of the congregation were the guests of honor. After the hymn "Jesus tids us shine," the scripture lesson was read by Vivian Howatt. Then followed a prayer by the pastor, a chorus by the school, a recitation by Vivian Howatt, an exercise by the Primary, and a recitation by Erwin Andrew. The offering was received by Harold Howatt and Robert Stevenson, following which came the hymn "God sees the little sparrow fall."

Mrs. Blair Andrew, the superintendent of the Cradle Roll department, gave a reading telling of the origin of the cradle roll work, stressing its importance in the life of a church, following which she presented the babies with the membership certificates in the Cradle Roll. After the singing of "Jesus Tender Shepherd hear me, Bless Thy little lamb tonight," the pastor, Rev. H. S. Bishop gave a short talk on "The Child in the Midst." It is a natural inborn tendency for parents to love their children, an instinct that we see in all sorts of people. We find great evidence of this love in the Old Testament, in the story of the child Moses being hid in the river Nile from the ruthless soldiers of Pharaoh, and in the story of how God answered Hannah's prayer, and then later presented Samuel again to God. But perhaps the noblest and most uplifting teaching concerning the worth of little ones, and our responsibility towards them comes from the lips of Christ. Children instinctively drew near to Him, listening to His stories, waiting for His smile, coming to Him in spite of the disciples who sought to drive them away. On one occasion when the disciples were discussing who would be the greatest in the Kingdom, Jesus took "a little child and set him in the midst of them," telling them that if they were to enter the Kingdom they must be like him. As people look to this action of Jesus they are forced to focus their attention on the "child in the midst."

The child in the midst is not the property of the parents alone, rather he is a gift of God to be held in trust for Him, to be brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Thus to each parent there is not only given the joy of great possession, but the responsibility of a young life moulded for eternity. For despite the natural tendencies of the child that may be very hard to overcome, and despite the place, companions outside the home play in moulding the young life, and despite the responsibility of the church the greatest responsibility rests on the parents, for more than anywhere else the child is "in the midst" of home influences. On one occasion when Louis Pasteur was being honored, he said, "Oh my father, my mother, my dear departed ones, who lived so humbly in this little house, it is to you I owe everything."

The child in the midst does present a definite challenge to the church. For too long a time the church has neglected the children. Today she is working, not only through the junior departments of the Sunday School but through the Cradle Roll and its contact with those of the tenderest years, endeavoring to help mould the young lives for God at their most pliable and responsive ages.

Children shall ever be in the midst of the people, but even these gifts from God are in vain unless in the midst of us all is the Christ the babe of Bethlehem.—N.

Woman Runs Two Homes

(United Press)

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 9.—For more than two months Mrs. Elsie Lavigne, 40, managed two homes without arousing the suspicions of either of her husbands.

After 20 years as the wife of Henry Lavigne, the woman, mother of a 19 year old daughter, secretly married James L. Tully, cable repair man, last June.

She then told her two mates that she was taking up practical nursing, and thus was able to divide her time between her two homes.

One day her real husband lost his job as a carpenter and for the first time, became curious over his wife's work as a nurse. His investigation revealed Mrs. Lavigne's double life and resulted in her arrest on a bigamy charge.

LOUIS HUGHES

The death occurred suddenly at Iona August ninth of Louis Hughes. Deceased with his wife and two children were spending a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Connelly and had worked around the farm as usual, until Saturday evening when he complained of a severe headache which apparently disappeared after a couple of hours and he appeared as cheerful as usual until he retired about ten o'clock. But about 11 o'clock Sunday morning his wife was awakened by him in pain and receiving no answer when she spoke, sent at once for priest and doctor. Rev. Father Duffy soon arrived to find him with a stroke of apoplexy, so he administered the sacraments and remained by his bedside until he passed away at seven o'clock when the doctor arrived.

Deceased was a son of the late David Hughes and wife of Vernon River. He was thirty seven years old and had spent many of them in the United States where he married Miss Annie Connelly about two years ago, they returned and have lived in Charlottetown where he worked at plumbing. Besides his heart-broken wife and two small children he leaves to mourn two brothers, Joseph and Peter in Vernon River, and four sisters, Mrs. Seale and Margaret in Charlottetown, Georgina and Mrs. McIsaac in United States. The funeral which was well attended was held at St. Michael's Church, Iona. Rev. Father Duffy officiating. The pall bearers were Alphonsus O'Donnell, Louis Reid, Harry Callaghan, Harry Kelly, Patrick Wood, Clifford Murphy. R. I. P.

Two Headed Turtle Puzzles Best Experts

OCALA, Fla., Sept. 9.—A two headed, six legged terrapin is leading a life of luxury and ease here. The creature, no bigger than a silver dollar, is believed to be one of the few animals on earth with two perfectly formed and normally functioning heads and one body. Found more than five months ago in Union County, it was sold by Louis Tyson to U. R. Parker, filling station operator for $100.00. Parker said he had already refused $500 for the freak.

Director F. C. Van Hynning of the Florida State Museum has studied it and reported that it had one stomach.

It can eat with either of both of its two heads. The terrapin may eat a cricket, one of its favorite dishes, with one mouth and beef, another favorite, with the other.

The freak terrapin is now about six months old.

Organized hunts have taken place on several occasions recently in the downs and fields. Nineteen snakes were killed in one field by a party of Benfleet men. Seven were adders, or vipers, almost England's only poisonous snake, and twelve were grass snakes.

About fifty adders have been killed thus far this year in the neighborhood of the village. While poisonous, the bite usually is not fatal. Two children bitten at play on Hadleigh Downs, recovered, but only after painful treatment.

Plague Of Snakes Visit South Beaufleet, England

A plague of snakes, many of them poisonous, has disrupted the peaceful life of the little fishing village of South Beaufleet, England, says The Associated Press.

Men of the village, accustomed to a rigorous and dangerous life on the sea have been confounded by the visitation of reptiles, which is without precedent and is unexplained.

Many of them, devout churchmen and remembering the happy delivery of Ireland by St. Patrick in similar circumstances, have asked the community to pay special attention to the plague in their prayers.

Little children of the fishing village, playing on the beautiful downs which overlook the river, have been bitten and picnic parties have been
