Debate Continued On Draft Address

Messrs. McIntyre, LePage And T. A. Campbell Continue Debate Yesterday Afternoon.

Opposition members had an unbroken innings in the Legislature yesterday afternoon in the debate on the Draft Address. During the two hours of session, Messrs. J. P. McIntyre, B. W. LePage and Thane A. Campbell were heard. The latter, after speaking for some twenty-five minutes, closed the debate at six o'clock.

Referring to the new Prince of Wales College, Mr. McIntyre said it was certainly a splendid building, but the question was whether the taxpayers could afford it. The Premier at the formal opening function had disclaimed any credit except for his foresight in having appointed the Minister of Education.

The Education Minister, Mr. McIntyre charged, had spent money "pretty lavishly." The Mayor of the City had stated that the College was still only a "high school," and the speaker doubted if it would turn out any more successful men than the former institution.

The Government at the present time had "a hard row to hoe." Revenues are not great; expenditures are increasing and if expenditures in the Health and Education departments continue to increase, Mr. McIntyre could not but view the outcome with alarm.

Reference was made by Mr. McIntyre to a press report alleging that New Brunswick people were "bootlegging" skunks into the Province in order to obtain bounty payments. The Government should make sure that this practice is not continued.

He commended the good work done by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and said he believed a good saving had been made by the Province in establishing this force in Prince Edward Island.

Despite general conditions of depression, it was gratifying that our farming people have at least a sufficiency of food. The real cause of the trouble with the world today was selfishness. The United States financial structure is tottering.

States where some 5,000 banks have failed. Fortunately, Mr. LePage said we were in a better condition in this respect in Canada, though the situation otherwise is serious enough.

He did not believe in Free Trade, but in a small tariff not exceeding 10 or 15 per cent. United States and Canada are today reaping what they have sown in tariff warfare.

The speaker quoted Sir John Aird, Sir Herbert Holt, E. W. Beatty, Thomas Bradshaw, J. S. Moore, J. A. McLeod and Senator Meighen on the danger of high tariffs. It was up to this Government to make a demand on the federal administration to reduce the tariffs and endeavor to obtain reciprocal trade with the United States.

The Liberals had not negotiated a reciprocal treaty with United States during the Mackenzie King regime because there was not then the opportunity and it was not so necessary, he said in answer to interruptions.

Nothing was contained in the Speech from the Throne regarding unemployment, Mr. LePage complained. He wished to thank the Government for assistance given in this connection to people in his district.

Quite a number of farmers were in distress today and the value of farm properties had gone down. It was all right for Mr. Lea to say that the farmers should go in more for dairying but many of them, Mr. LePage believed, could not afford to do so.

He thought a saving of $100,000 could have been made in rebuilding Prince of Wales College. Mr. LePage understood the old foundation under had been used and a steel and concrete structure costing not over $200,000 could have been erected on the old site.

Mr. LePage declared. Congratulations were extended to Hon. Mr. MacNutt on his appointment to the portfolio of Agriculture. The speaker regretted that Mr. MacNutt had not also been appointed Provincial Secretary-Treasurer, as he would have been a good man for the position.

Mr. LePage commended the Minister of Education for his frank explanation of the Falconwood situation. The Government had received a number of tenders, and it was stated that these were returned unopened. "But I suppose they would be operated? This is what was happening in the United States where some 5,000 banks have failed."

Mr. LePage: "I know that to be a fact, because the contractors stated it themselves." Hon. Dr. MacMillan: "What contractors?" Mr. LePage: "Never mind. I am making that statement. If you don't believe it, it is all right. I guess the people of this Province will believe me. The lighting and heating fittings in that building amounted to $60,000. I give the Government credit for turning down such a proposition as that, because this Province can't afford it."

Continuing, Mr. LePage suggested that additions might be made to the building now standing, at a cost of a couple of hundred thousand dollars. A building had been offered the Government in which to put the aged people. These two provisions might be sufficient for the requirements.

The old age pensions would also help to keep down the cost of maintaining infirm persons. The Liberals had made the first move in the direction of old age pensions, and he was delighted that this Government was putting the legislation into effect.

Discussing the Government bond issues last year, Mr. LePage maintained that poor judgment had been used in issuing the bonds at that time. Had they waited for seven or eight months as they were asked to do, they would have effected a big saving.

Hon. Dr. MacMillan: "Who asked the Government to wait?" Mr. LePage: "I did, for one." Hon. Dr. MacMillan: "That is a different thing, with the Bank telling us that we must clear off the overdraft?" Mr. LePage: "The Bank didn't ask you to clear off all the overdraft."

Hon. Dr. MacMillan: "Yes, they could not afford to come in to a central clinic and some man with public spirit should undertake these cases at a nominal charge. He did not think this would interfere with professional practice." Hon. Dr. MacMillan: "Isn't that very thing being done now?" Mr. LePage: "Not to any great extent. It may be done in some cases."

With regard to the Provincial Sanatorium, Mr. LePage believed the Government would have to take care of the non-paying patients. He did not believe the people would object if a few more thousand dollars were spent in connection with these cases, healthy people were better able to have treatment at home.
