FATHERS, MAKE COMPANIONS OF YOUR BOYS

By Martin G. Brumbaugh
One of the best men I ever knew gave to this country three splendid sons, loyal, capable and conscientious. I once asked him how he managed to do it. He said: "I have always made my boys my companions." In the intimate comradeship of father and son there arose the occasion to teach the "boys" what it is to be a really fine American and a Christian gentleman. The father wise procedure made three eminent citizens of his sons.

The strength of a nation lies in its spiritual forces, not in its material gains, and the great agencies that conserve spiritual ideals are the home, the church and the school. Unfortunately the home, where most of this should be done, really does the least. All parents holding love for children and country will endeavor to perform their most important duty of maintaining and imparting high ideals, for in the coming days as never before we must give intelligent guidance to our children.

My own father, after church, on Sunday afternoons, often accompanied his three boys to the mountain or forests. There in the cool and silence he gave us many suggestions that have ripened into inestimable good in the years that have come and gone since he can no longer walk with us. We do not see him, but we do feel his presence and gratefully follow his fine teachings.

I urge all fathers to have personal and intimate converse with their sons, and this can be done from the time they are tiny fellows. Impress lofty ideals of duty to God and country. Teach the value of the great cardinal virtues of courtesy, reliability and humility, without which life is a mockery.—Bureau of Education.

WHERE STUTTERING PAID

"L-look here," said the stutterer at the horse sale. "that's a n-nice horse, m-m-m-m-m-m-m-m-m-m! How much d-do you want for it?" The owner looked his animal over lovingly. "And a beauty he is, sir, he urged: "a horse I can thoroughly recommend. But you must make the offer." "Well," said the stutterer. "I'll g-g-give you f-f-f-f-f-f-f-f-f-forty pounds?" "Done!" said the dealer. "G-g-good!" closed the stutterer. "I was t-trying to say f-f-fifty."
