THE COOK'S CORNER

ORANGE BREAD IS GOOD FOR THE TEA HOUR

Serve orange bread, spread with butter or cream cheese for tea some day soon, and watch your guests devour it. Here's the recipe: 1 cup sugar, 3 cups flour, 1/2 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, beaten, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1-2 cup candied citron, 1/2 cup candied orange peel, 1 cup milk.

ORANGE AND MARASCHINO MOLD WORTH TRYING

Orange and Maraschino Mold is a year-round favorite. To make it, dissolve a package of lemon or orange gelatin in one pint of warm water. Cut six maraschino cherries in eighths and arrange in the bottom of a mold.

MIXED MUSTARD PICKLES

One quart silver-skinned onions, peeled and left whole, 4 cups diced celery, 1 quart cauliflower flowers,

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

Don't Pity Yourself Too Much if You Are Married to a Go-Getter Husband—He Has a Career and Your Well-Being to Look Out for and Must Keep at His Job

Dear Miss Dix—I have been married a year and a half to a young man who has no vice except his devotion to business. He is in business with his father, owning a part interest himself.

Everything goes by comparison. The tens of thousands of women who are married to lazy and shiftless men who spend their time lolling around the house, or in poolrooms, or swapping yarns and drinks with other loafers around bars...

The tens of thousands of women who are married to men who have walked the streets until their feet were sore trying to find jobs; who have experienced the anxiety that eats the heart out wondering where his next meal was coming from...

Still, of course, there is something to be said for your side of the case. A woman doesn't want a husband who has become nothing but a machine. She doesn't want one who gives his every thought to his business.

Of course, the ideal husband is the one who steers the middle course and who divides his time between his work and companionship with his wife, who brings home the bacon with one hand and plays the ukulele with the other, so to speak.

Many a man, and especially one who is running his own business or who follows a profession, cannot control his hours of work, nor proportion the thought and energy he must put in it.

The young doctor cannot refuse a call because his wife wants him to take her to the theatre. The young lawyer can't spend his evening chatting with his wife when he has an important brief to prepare.

Any young wife who pities herself because she is married to a go-getter is certainly a trouble bound. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—Does heredity count more than environment? Two boys are in love with me and want to marry me. One has a bad reputation, drinks, is considered a pagan, but comes from a very fine family, is well educated and has had every advantage.

But what in the world makes you think that a boy who has had the ambition and the pluck and character to raise himself above his family, and to put himself through college by his own efforts, is bound to go wrong because he happens to come of shiftless people?

People don't always "take after" their parents and follow in their footsteps. Half of the go-getters in the world are the sons of lazy, loafing fathers. They saw so much of the hardships and privations of poverty when they were children that they fought tooth and nail until they got out of it themselves.

Some of the most meticulous housekeepers I have ever known were the daughters of mothers who were lazy slovens who never swept a floor or cooked a decent meal, and there is no surer way to make tightwads than for children to grow up in a house where everything is wasted and where the bill-collector is always pounding on the door.

In my opinion a boy who comes from an humble family, but who has already made something of himself, is a far better matrimonial bet than the lad who comes from a good family and who is already singing into the gutter.

1 quart diced cucumber, 1 quart chopped, peeled onions, 2 cups shredded green peppers, 1 cup shredded red pepper (sweet), Mix all together, cover with boiling salted water, and cook until just tender, then drain well. Now bring 3 pints cider vinegar to boiling point. Make a mixture of 2 teaspoons mustard, 1-2 ounce turmeric, 1-3 cup corn starch, and enough water to make a thin paste.

BOOKS / ART / MUSIC

(By F. R. H.)

The new H. V. Morton volume "In the Steps of St. Paul" has been announced ready for publication "about September 30th" . . . On October 1st "White Banners" by Lloyd C. Douglas appeared . . . Hugh Walpole's "A Prayer For My Son," a novel of contemporary England, is advertised for October 14th . . . "Mary Lavelle" by Kate O'Brien for October 23rd . . . "The War Goes On" by Sholem Asche for October 26th . . . "The Fortunes of Captain Blood" for October 27th . . . And, for October 30th, "Westward From Rio," a tramp trip across South America by Heath Bowman and Stirling Dickinson, authors of "Mexican Odyssey."

Some interesting and rather unusual Fall publications include, "Divide the Desolation" by Kathryn MacFarlane, the novelized version of the life of Emily Bronte, with the title taken from a sentence on the first page of Emily Bronte's masterpiece "Wuthering Heights" — Mr Heathcliff and I are such a suitable pair to divide the desolation between us . . . "Sonnets From the Portuguese" by Elizabeth Barrett Browning, illustrated in colour by Willy Pogany . . . "Blind Angel", biography of her father by Pearl S. Buck, the companion volume to "The Exile" the story of her Mother's life . . . "More Poems" by A. E. Housman whose "A Shropshire Lad", published in 1896 was one of the most beloved and celebrated poems of the past half century . . . A. E. Housman lived in deep seclusion, and it was said of him—"He has written his classic, which so few poets do, and then called it a day . . . He published only one other slight volume, "Last Poems," in 1922, and this final volume "More Poems" from a collection of unpublished material discovered in Cambridge after his death in April 1935, is to be published on October 15th . . . "The Maltese Cat" by Rudyard Kipling, illustrated by Lionel Edwards, famous painter of horses, advertised as the ideal gift book of the season . . . and "Eggs and Baker" by John Masefield, his latest story of the English countryside, in the last half of the nineteenth century.

From a London Letter to the New York Times comes the report that John Masefield, the Poet Laureate has been filmed for the movies! And the statement is followed by the query "What would Tennyson have said?" The picture, one of special literary interest, is to be entitled "Preface to Life," and it will trace the development of writing as a means of expression, from ancient cave drawings to the actual process of writing, printing and selling books to-day. One of its scenes is to be laid in the British Museum.

In the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, "the greatest exhibition of Japanese Art ever held in the Occident" opened last month, in connection with the Harvard Tercentenary. Reading descriptions of the exhibits and of Japan's little known but superb sculpture in dry lacquer, bronze and wood, of the perfection of her paintings and of the harmony of her decorative art, brought to mind the frequently termed "Noble apologia" of a well known genius and one of her greatest colour print artists. In Hokusai's Preface to his "Hundred Views of Fuji" he wrote: "From the age of six I had a mania for drawing the forms of things. By the time I was fifty I had published an infinity of designs; but all I have produced before the age of seventy is not worth taking into account. At seventy-three I have learned a little about the real structure of nature, of animals, plants, trees, birds fishes and insects. In consequence when I am eighty, I shall have made still more progress; at ninety I shall penetrate the mystery of things; at a hundred I shall certainly have reached a marvelous stage; and when I am a hundred and ten, everything I do, be it but a dot or a line, will be alive. I beg those who live as long as I do to see if I do not keep my word."

Written at the age of seventy-five by me, once Hokusai, to-day Gwakiwo Rofin, the old man mad about drawing." Hokusai died on May 10, 1849 in his ninetieth year, and his last words were—"If Heaven had only granted me even five more years I could have become a real painter."

A recent and much talked of publication is "Landscape With Figures" the remarkable first book of Lionel Wiggam, the young American poet of twenty who is still attending University—and paying his own way. It contains the following poem—

Return From European Vacation

The Duke and Duchess of Kent are shown here on their arrival in England by airliner from Zurich after a vacation on the continent.

The HOUSEWIFE and HER ACTIVITIES

HAPPY DAY

Take a little gleam of sunshine, A little drop of rain, A little spray of roses Around the window-pane. A little trick of smiling, A little word of cheer, A little song for singing, A sympathetic tear, A little scrap of bird-song, A little child at play— Just mix them all together To make a happy day. —Dorothy Whitton.

SUCCESS

The pathway to success is in serving humanity. By no other means is it possible, and this truth is so plain and patent that even very simple folk recognize it.

THE JERUSALEM ARTICHOKE

Many of you are familiar with the artichoke, generally the kind called the Jerusalem artichoke. Very often they are just referred to as artichokes, although the artichoke proper is an entirely different thing.

The artichoke belongs to the thistle family, and it is the globe, lar flower head which provides the eatable matter. The Jerusalem artichoke is really a species of sunflower and, of course, it is the tubers at the root which provide the eatable part. Perhaps you wonder how Jerusalem got mixed with it. The word has simply grown from the Italian word for sunflower—grasso. It became associated with the artichoke because of a supposed resemblance to the flower of the real artichoke.

Thoughts In matters of conscience first thoughts are best; in matters of prudence last thoughts are best. —Robert Hall.

SELF-DENIAL

One secret act of self-denial, one sacrifice of inclination of duty, is worth all the mere good thoughts, warm feelings, passionate prayers in which idle people indulge themselves.—J. H. Newman.

Autumn Fashions For Chic Dressers

There's flattery and newness in this plaid wool frock, with collar and cuffs of velvet.

The full shoulder sleeves create a wide shoulder-line. The slender skirt has a moderate flared hem. It's just about the smartest and most useful dress you could own for school and college.

For another more dressy version, deep violet-blue velvet is adorable with a parade of tiny self-covered buttons from neck to hem. Make the collar and cuffs of self-fabric.

I gained 10 pounds . . . and everybody says my complexion is really grand!

MANY young girls shoot up in height, yet stay as thin as a rail. Miss Mary B. was like that until recently. She says: "I was awfully tall and thin for my age so Mother got me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and now I have gained about 10 lbs. And everybody says my complexion is really grand."

When young people are growing, or when adults are underweight, nature must have the proper materials or the body won't gain a pound. Very often the body building material required is iron. As soon as Mary B. began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, her name on request.

Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills regularly for a while, and if you don't feel better, stronger and healthier, your money will be returned to you.
