He Expects His Salesmen to Rely On Him for Direction

... but overlooks the necessity of seeking experienced advice in his personal affairs!

Like many men he pays more attention to his business affairs than to his personal estate. If he were to call in the help of our experienced officers, he would have a safe course plotted for the conduct of his estate—avoiding taxation excesses and the uncertain waves of changing values—both now and in the future. In this way he could be sure that his estate "strategy" would achieve its intended purpose.
