Prince of Wales Competent Nurse

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Miss Beryl ... actress, one of the three women injured Thursday when their automobile collided with a car in which the Prince of Wales was riding, told the Daily Express today that the Prince was a competent nurse.

A reporter interviewed her in a private ward of Windsor Hospital in which the Prince engaged for her. She was fragrant with roses and her hair was styled in the latest fashion. Her forehead was a big plaster.

"I saw the Prince carrying my sister, who had fainted, into the clubhouse of the golf club where the collision occurred," she said.

"Her face was covered with blood. The next thing I remember was the Prince bathing my forehead, and so competently, too. He stayed at the clubhouse bathing our wounds and talking to us for an hour until we were brought to the hospital."

"He seemed the only person really calm. Everybody else seemed dreadfully worried."

Miss Daphne Riggs, the sister, was the most painfully hurt. The Prince was unharmed.

Spectacular Tennis At S'Side

The following are the champions of Prince Edward Island in the closed Tournament completed last Friday afternoon at Summerside.

- Ladies singles: Miss Z. Linkletter, Summerside.
- Men's singles, Mr. Stuart Dickson, Charlottetown.
- Ladies doubles, Miss E. Bourke, Charlottetown and Mrs. (Dr.) Howatt, Summerside.
- Mens doubles, Messrs Gordon White and Gilbert Houston, Charlottetown.
- Mixed doubles, Mrs. (Dr.) Howatt and Mr. Stuart Dickson.

The final games in each event were thrilling; that tennis is rapidly coming to its own in Prince Edward Island is very evident. Miss Linkletter in defeating Miss Bourke displayed rare form as indeed she had to. The score was 6-2, 1-6, 6-4. For one so young in years as the new lady champion, she will, without a doubt, be heard from in future open tournaments. Stuart Dickson proved the dark horse of the Tournament. Though considered dangerous he was not conceded a finalist until he downed Mr. Gordon White in the first round. He then continued his onward way through Allan Stewart and Gilbert to meet "Red" Doucet who fought his way to finals in the other half of the schedule. He won over Doucet in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 in a match which, though spectacular, was not so hard fought as the semi-finals with Houston. Perhaps the best match of the tournament was the Mixed Doubles final between Mrs. Howatt and Dickson on the one side and Miss Evelyn Jenkins and Allan Stewart on the other, which the former team won 6-3, 3-6, 8-6. The end of the second set saw both teams even in point of games won and lost and one set each. The deciding set was exciting to say the least. At one time the losers were one game up, the score reading 6-5 in their favor—just one game from victory—but that game went to the other side, making the score 6 all. Struggling dull games, then continued to mark progress of the winners to ultimate victory at 8-6. The Charlottetown Club is sorry to lose such a fine player and good sport as Miss Evelyn Jenkins, who left for Ottawa Saturday morning to assume a new position awaiting her there, Messrs. White and Houston were due to win in men's doubles. They won over Lockhart and McDonald, Summerside, in straight sets, but had to display fine tennis to do so.

The prizes for each event in this tournament were presented by Justice Saunders, who was an interested spectator at the final battles. His Lordship commented on the rapid rise of tennis standards here as evidenced by the matches played this season. From His Lordship, who was himself a good tennis player and who still plays an occasional game, his continued interest is very helpful and encouraging to the Provincial Association.

HOUSEWIFE ENTITLED TO A HOLIDAY

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 3.—(By The Canadian Press)—The Gazette says editorially: "A London magistrate has registered another triumph for women and the women's cause. He has decided that a housewife is entitled to a holiday 'just like any other worker.' A mother with three children appeared before him at the Marylebone police court recently, told him that she had the opportunity of a fortnight's holiday in the country with her children, and complained that her husband objected and refused to sanction her departure. What was she to do? The magistrate, with judicial wisdom and manly humanity towards women, immediately ruled it to be unreasonable that a husband should seek to prevent his wife having a holiday. He counselled the petitioner to go and take the holiday 'and its consequences.'"

"The magistrate is right and the husband is wrong. Why should there not be vacations for house-

SUGGESTS CHAIR FOR NURSING

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 3.—(By The Canadian Press)—The establishment of a chair of nursing at the University of Manitoba, was urged here recently by Miss Mabel F. Gray, Assistant Professor of Nursing at the University of British Columbia, in an address at the refresher course for graduate nurses. In order to prepare capable teachers and nurses for research work it was necessary to have more than a hospital school, Miss Gray said, and nursing should receive professional recognition through affiliation with university faculties as is the case with medicine, law, theology, engineering, journalism and commerce.

The university is necessary to permit the nurse, the pivot of public health, to become more effective through better preparation for specialized work," Miss Gray said. Miss Gray paid tribute to the University of Manitoba, as the first in Canada to extend aid to the profession. With the passing of the Nurse Registration Act in 1913, the council of the university assumed responsibility for the maintenance of a high standard in nursing. "Courses for graduate nurses were first established at Teachers' college, Columbia University, in 1899," she said. "Since that time, combined academic and professional courses have been established in 45 universities, seven of which are in Canada. Chairs of nursing have been most commonly established in the faculty of medicine, applied science or public health."

"Drastic changes in methods of nursing were predicted, following the survey of nursing conditions in Canada, just completed. It appeared likely that centres of nursing education would be a result. The importance of Winnipeg as such a centre was evident," she said. "In the interests of public welfare, the Nurses' Association of Manitoba should work affiliation with the present facilities of the Manitoba Medical college and the university itself."

wives? A week or two weeks' enjoyment in the country, in camp on some pleasant lake or river, free of the obligations of the household, and particularly the kitchen, indifferent whether the jelly will jell or the biscuits rise, but confident of the strange pleasure of being called to dinner and to eat a meal that 'you hadn't even heard of.' What could be more delightful, and who merits such delight more than the average housewife?"

Poor Work in Corner Handcapped Stribling

Fights can be won only by the participants and in the ring—with the exception of course, of the type of contest (?) made famous during Premo Carnera's "tank tour"—but men closely connected with boxing maintain that the attention fighters receive in their corners often plays an important part in the final outcome.

An excellent example of poor work by seconds handicapping a boxer was provided in the recent Young Stribling-Max Schmeling heavy-weight championship fight. While most men concede that it is unlikely that Stribling could have whipped Schmeling, no matter who was in his corner, there are many who believe the Georgian would have made a much better showing, and possibly won the fight, had he been properly handled.

"Pa" Stribling and Nate Lewis, Chicago Stadium matchmaker, were the contender's seconds, and while Lewis is regarded as one of the finest corner men in the game, the elder Stribling appeared to be a handi-capper rather than an aid to his son.

"Pa" was in full charge, directing Stribling's tactics and being responsible for the fighters' welfare. His inability to handle either assignment was shown by the fact that he had the fighter using his widely criticized "clutching" style of offense, and by the fact that he (Pa) was unable to stop the blood from a slight cut over Stribling's eye throughout the entire fight.

Treating Cuts Important Duty of Seconds

Stopping the flow of blood from cuts is one of the most important duties for a second and Stribling's cut appeared to be one which could have been patched up in short order by a capable second. "Pa" however, was so busy getting his medical supplies from "Ma" Stribling, who was seated near the ring, and in giving Willie advice that he never once gave the cut proper attention and Stribling came out for almost every round with blood dripping from his eye.

"Pa" was so excited throughout the contest that he appeared to be annoying his son rather than aiding him. It frequently has been proved that relatives are of little use to fighters as seconds. In the Stribling case, boxing men declare that "Pa" and "Ma" always have been a handi-capper. Whenever "Pa" and "Ma" has been in his corner Stribling has been overly cautious.

Men interested in Stribling's success believe that Pa Striblings don't get hurt advice would be the only thing which could prevent Stribling from defeating Schmeling and made strenuous efforts to have the elder Stribling give up his role as a second. They finally succeeded in convincing "Pa" that Lewis would be a valuable aid in the corner but could not persuade him to stay out of his son's corner.

Jimmy Bronson, who seconded Gene Tunney in many important bouts and is a top-notch at handi-capping fighters, was a candidate for a job in Stribling's corner and still believes that he and Lewis might have guided the Georgian to victory.

Bronson's offer of aid, however, was poorly received by the elder Stribling. "Bronson has never done anything for us," he said. "Why should I use him? He's just looking for the glory."

Thus "Pa's" fear that he might be deprived of whatever "glory" there is in seconding a fighter to the world's championship cost Young Stribling whatever chance he may have had of victory.

Planting Caragana Seedling

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 3.—(By The Canadian Press) His attention drawn to the proposed extensive planting of caragana seed by the Provincial government of the Prairie Provinces Chief Forester C. Piche of the Department of Lands and Forests of the Province of Quebec stated that this was a new idea in this province and the use of the seed has been encouraged for some years.

"We distribute over 100,000 seedlings of caragana each year in different parts of the Province. They are grown at our Beaulieu Nurseries," said Mr. Piche. "Caragana is a fine sturdy shrub which it forms a thick hedge—10 times over twelve feet high and drought resisting and preserves the moisture in the soil. Its effect have been most beneficial to farmers in some districts."
