Address on Dental Hygiene at Kensington

Dr. Harry Thompson, field Secretary of the Dental Hygiene Council of Canada was in Kensington March 6th. In the afternoon he addressed the school children in two groups, Dr. Thomson talked to the children in such an interesting manner that even the small ones forgot to be noisy for an hour. His address on Dental Hygiene made a deep impression on the children judging by the reports carried home by them. In the evening a large number of adults were treated to an instructive address by the genial Doctor. This lecture was part of an educational campaign conducted by the Provincial Dept. of Health. Dr. Keeping Chief Health Officer of the Province, who accompanied, Dr. Thomson, also addressed the meeting and explained the various activities of the Dept. of Health. Dr. Thomson's wide experience and expert knowledge of his subject coupled with a keen, sense of humor kept his audience enthralled throughout his address. Some great philosopher has said "Its the truth that hurts" but Dr. Thomson has the happy faculty of driving home the unpleasant truth in such a way that much of the sting is removed. He told his hearers that 97% of the Anglo-saxon race have dental decay which can be prevented through proper diet and care of the teeth, that dental decay causes many diseases in other parts of the body, that people neglect their teeth more than any other part of their bodies that the teeth are practically the only part of the body which nature does not restore. These facts and many others so aptly described by the learned lecturer show plainly the need for such a campaign in this province. The learned doctor stressed the neccessity of a properly balanced ration in order to provide the necessary ingredients to grow good teeth. He instanced the almost perfect teeth of the Moari (Mowrie+—New Zealand natives who live entirely on fruit and vegetables.

He explained the good teeth of the esquimaux by their consumption of large amounts of raw meat and fish—also by heavy chewing required to masticate those comestibles.

He stressed quite strongly the need of "exercise" for the teeth—being embedded as they are in a resilient cusinion in the jaw—hence the logic of the dictum of the famous Dr. Osler some years ago that every mouthful of food should get thirty two chews.

He deprecated the high percentage of decay in the teeth of the Anglo Saxon race—comparing it unfavorably with teeth conditions of the people on the continent of Europe, and attributed it to the use of refined foods. We are becoming like pap fed children. We should eat more whole wheat bread raw vegetables, and raw fruits. In regard to oatmeal he said that a survey was taken of dental conditions in the city of Glasgow, which showed a high percentage of decay. The conclusion was arrived at that the ones having bad teeth ate too much oatmeal—which forms an acid which neutralizes the ingredients required to give proper nutrition to the teeth. Stereoptican views were shown of cross sections of different teeth which was illummative and instructive. Prenatal influence on teeth was particularly stressed.

The department of Health and Education is to be congratulated for its zeal and energy in fostering and supporting the Dental Hygiene educational campaign in this Province. The good effect will last for generations. It was also fortunate in having such an outstanding exponent as Dr. Thomson. A hearty vote of thanks was moved by Dr. Lockhart, seconded and contributed to by James Pendergast and James Saunders. Major Laird presided in his usual capable manner.

It is a good sign of the times that the Anglo Saxon race are paying more attention to care of the teeth and to the important part that dentristry plays in the health of the nation. The discovery of focal infection was a direct result of dental research It was dentristry—not medicine—that stimulated research in food values and vitamin content. It was a dentist, who by his minute analysis of the human blood learned the secret and value of Calcium. It was Wells—a dentist—who discovered and first demonstrated Nitrous Oxide. It was Morton—a dentist—who first produced and used ether. It is dentists today who are teaching the world the use of prophylaxis. They have accomplished much to show the world how to attain perfection in health.—K.

INTERESTING WEDDING AT SUMMERSIDE

Miss Constance McArthur United In Marriage to Mr. David Stewart.

The marriage took place this morning at 6.30 of Miss Constance, daughter of Senator Creelman MacArthur, Summerside, to Mr. J. David Stewart, son of the late Hon. J. D. Stewart, Premier of Prince Edward Island, and Mrs. Stewart, of Ottawa.

The wedding was solemnized at the bride's home in the presence of her family and a few immediate friends. Rev. J. B. Wilson officiated at the ceremony. Mrs. Harold Schurman played the Wedding March.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a chartreuse wool travelling suit. A hat of the same material and brown accessories completed the ensemble. Her bouquet was brier cliff roses. The dining room where breakfast was served was prettily arranged with daffodils and lighted candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart left on the early morning train for Halifax, where they will embark on the S.S. Lady Drake for Bermuda to spend their honeymoon.

Upon their return they will reside in Summerside.

The Guardian joins in happiest felicitations.—S.

OPPOSITION

to a point of order. There were no speeches—no political speeches—made at the luncheon."

Mr. MacDonald: "Were there any speeches made?"

(Mr. LePage did not reply.)

Mr. Campbell to the Rescue

Mr. T. A. Campbell: "Under what section of the Draft Address is this being discussed?"

Mr. Speaker: "The hon. member from Tignish should be the last to rise to a question of order on that point. The Opposition members have wandered all over the country in their remarks on the address, they have been given every latitude.

Mr. Campbell: "Whether I should be the first or last to make protest, I insist on rising to a point of order."

Mr. Speaker: "I rule against it."

Mr. MacDonald: "It is evident that the hon. members can't take it! (Applause.) As I said before, they seem to have nothing to talk about except Dominion politics. Since they have chosen that subject, I purpose, with your permission, Mr. Speaker, to talk a little Dominion politics, leading up to a certain point as the hon. member from Rustico said in excusing his remarks."

Nails Tariff Misstatement

Continuing, Mr. MacDonald said it would appear that the Opposition had a special grievance against the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. They had alleged that he was responsible for the high tariffs against Canada imposed by the United States. This statement he refuted by showing that it was under the Mackenzie King administration that the Fordney-McCumber duties were imposed on our farm products entering that country. Faced on coming into power with these obstacles to Canada's trade with the neighboring republic, Premier Bennett had looked elsewhere for markets, and by negotiating the Empire trade agreements in 1932 obtained preferences on a wide variety of our farm and other products, both with Great Britain and the other Empire countries. Subsequently the United States was forced to come to Canada, seeking to reopen the trade channels which her own high tariffs had closed, and negotiations were now under way between Washington and Ottawa with a view to obtaining a reciprocal trade agreement.

In an effort to offset Conservative successes in obtaining subsidy increases from Ottawa, the member from Rustico had stated that Mr. McIntyre had obtained $90,000 from the Dominion Government in the last year of the Liberal provincial administration. This amount, Mr. MacDonald pointed out, was only for unemployment relief; it was not an annual grant, such as the $125,000 obtained by the Stewart Government under the Duncan award, and the $150,000 additional increase obtained by the MacMillan Government through the White Commission. The Liberal provincial record was a barren one so far as subsidy increase was concerned, and Mr. Mackenzie King had given the reason on the floor of the House of Commons, when he stated that for some reason or other, the implementation of the Duncan Commission recommendation for subsidy settlement had not been pressed. (Applause.)

Oyster Fishery Problem

Dealing with the fishery industry, Mr. MacDonald referred to two "captains" of the East River oyster fishery who were in competition with each other. One of them, a new man in the field, was paying higher prices than the other, and the latter had gone to Montreal and succeeded in destroying his competitor's connections and putting him out of business. Mr. MacDonald did not profess to speak with the authority on this subject which the Liberal ex-Minister of Public Works possessed. He did wish to point out, however, that the fishermen, owing to the fact that they do not own their own equipment, are at the mercy of the packers. That is why they are in such financial difficulties today.

Mr. MacDonald had taken up with Ottawa the matter of having a thorough investigation to ascertain whether the East River oyster waters are free or otherwise of contamination which would make the oysters injurious to public health. He hoped a favorable report would be received, and that the areas would not have to be closed, as the industry was an important one to our fishermen.

The experimental asphalt roadwork undertaken by the Government last fall was commended by Mr. MacDonald, who also expressed satisfaction that a start had been made on the trans-Canada highway.

The claim had been advanced by the Opposition that the Old Age Pensions Act was passed in this Legislature by the Liberal Government. This, said Mr. MacDonald, was true; but it had been passed on the eve of the last election, and it was left for the Conservative Government to put the legislation into effect. As a result, many poor people have benefited substantially. (Applause.)

Deals With LePage Arguments

The member from Rustico, continued Mr. MacDonald, had claimed that because the brick-work on the old Prince of Wales College had been covered with ice a few hours after the fire, the bricks were undamaged.

Mr. LePage: "The heat hadn't affected them, or they wouldn't have been covered with ice two hours after the fire."

Mr. MacDonald: "I think the hon. member from Bradalbane (Mr. Wigmore) gave a good answer when he asked if anyone had ever seen bricks charred by fire that had not afterwards crumbled, by reason of frost and moisture penetrating. What I cannot understand is how the member from Rustico could see the bricks if the ice was covering them!" (Laughter and applause.)

The Opposition member had also claimed that the west wing of Falconwood Hospital was in good preservation after the fire. This statement Mr. MacDonald contrasted with the expert opinion which the Government had received on the subject, and on which they had acted in demolishing the wing as being unsafe.

The Rustico member had also dealt at some length with economics, and had advocated taking wealth away from the rich and giving it to the poor. Mr. MacDonald did not know whether the member was a Communist or not, but he had spoken along Communistic lines. He did not agree with such remarks, though he believed that the abuses under capitalism should be remedied. He cited conditions in Russia and Mexico, where anti-capitalistic revolts had resulted in worse abuses than those they had replaced, and where the leaders have become multi-millionaires.

Mr. LePage's "Information"

Certain remarks by Mr. LePage regarding prohibition enforcement also came in for analysis by Mr. MacDonald, who quoted the Rustico member as claiming that at Blooming Point 300 kegs of liquor had been landed by one vessel last summer, and that he, Mr. LePage, "could tell you the fellow that did it." Why, then, asked Mr. MacDonald, had not this information been passed on to the authorities?

Mr. LePage: "I got the information for you and I gave it to the Attorney General."

Mr. MacDonald: "You gave it when all the rum was gone. It was too late then."

Mr. LePage: "I wasn't looking for the rum. It was landed there, that was all."

Mr. MacDonald: "How did you know there were 300 kegs landed? You must be on the inside track." (Laughter.)

Mr. LePage: "Yes."

Mr. MacDonald: "You know so much about this liquor business, about every keg that was landed."

Mr. LePage: "Sure."

Mr. MacDonald: "And who got it!"

Mr. LePage: "Your Government had the same information."

Mr. MacDonald: "How do you know?"

Mr. LePage: "I know the Attorney General has access to the information."

Hon. Mr. MacPhee: "Did I understand you to say that you gave me this information?"

Mr. LePage: "I gave you the information in the House."

Mr. MacDonald: "When you were making your speech?" (Laughter.)

Hon. Mr. MacPhee: "You don't call anything you said in the House 'information', do you?" (Increased laughter).

Mr. LePage: "The Attorney General should have taken it as information and acted upon it."

Hon. Mr. MacPhee: "I would be very radically astray if I did!" (Laughter).

Mr. MacDonald: "I don't think you gave the man's name. That is the information we are looking for, and that is the information which, as a good citizen, you should have given. (Applause). I know the member is a sincere prohibitionist, but as a good citizen, knowing the rum was landed and knowing the man's name, it was his duty to go to the Attorney General and give the information."

Mr. LePage: "Well, you can see it is not there now. It was two or three months ago."

Mr. MacDonald: "Oh!"

Mr. LePage: "It was landed in the last week of November. It's all drunk by this time."

Mr. MacDonald: "I was very pained to hear the hon. member reflect in the way he did on the Prohibition Commissioners of this Province, Mr. Black, Mr. Simpson and Mr. MacDonald. I may tell him that these gentlemen are of the finest type of citizens and neither he nor any one can cast a slight on their reputations." (Applause).

Mr. LePage: "Mr. Simpson is the only prohibitionist."

Mr. MacDonald: "A prohibitionist in fact as well as in name."

Mr. LePage: "They should be all prohibitionists."

LIBERAL BOOTLEGGER APPOINTED

Mr. MacDonald: "When my hon. friend was in the Government he appointed a known bootlegger as a prohibition inspector. What does he say to that! (Excitement).

Mr. LePage: "I never appointed no man that was a bootlegger that I knew and the hon. gentleman has to take that statement back because I never—"

Mr. MacDonald: "I will qualify it to this extent, that the Government of which you were a member had appointed, from your own district, a known bootlegger; and I would take it that the appointment was recommended by you."

Mr. LePage: "Not recommended by me!" (Laughter).

Hon. Mr. MacPhee: "You were irresponsible?"

Mr. MacDonald: "He was a known bootlegger, anyway."

Mr. LePage: "He was not a bootlegger when he was working for us." (Laughter).

Mr. MacDonald: "He must have been learning his trade then." (Increased laughter).

Mr. LePage: "The Government don't appoint those men at all. He was appointed by the Commission—"

Voices: "Your Commission?"

Mr. LePage: "—and if the Commission appointed a man of that kind it is not my fault."

Mr. MacDonald: "The Provincial Police: who were they appointed by? Certainly they were appointed by your Government." (Applause).

Mr. Lea: "He was appointed to the Police but he was not appointed a Prohibition officer."

Mr. MacDonald: "That is the sincerity of the Liberal Government at that time, and now they try to cast a slur on the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the finest body of men in Canada." (Applause).

Mr. LePage: "No slur; is all true."

Mr. MacDonald: "It is member's interpretation of truth, that's all. I see that a resolution was passed in Sydney, Cape Breton, the other day, asking that the R.C.M.P. be maintained. That does not look as if the people there have the same opinion about the Mounted Police as the Rustico member has."

Mr. McIntyre: "It is a wild place over there."

Mr. MacDonald: "All the more reason why they should have good men."

The Car Ferry Piers

Continuing, Mr. MacDonald referred to the Opposition claim that the Liberals had built the new car ferry steamer. "What would be the use of the car ferry," he asked amid applause, "if the piers had not been built by the Conservatives?"

Mr. LePage: "I never mentioned the car ferry.

Mr. MacDonald: "I took it down here."

Mr. LePage: "It doesn't make any difference about you taking it down."

Mr. MacDonald: "Nor does it make any difference who made the statement; it was made from that side of the House. I am pointing out that if the piers had not been there the car ferry would be no use to this Province."

The splendid work accomplished by the Women's Institutes was next referred to by Mr. MacDonald, who commended the Institutes very warmly.

Answering Liberal arguments that they had introduced the Domiciled Companies Act, he pointed out that the companies would have come here in any case, as the taxes here were lower than in Toronto, where the head offices are chiefly located.

(Mr. Lea maintained this was not so, and that a former Conservative Premier had opposed the legislation.)

The Marketing Act

Discussing the Marketing Act, Mr. MacDonald deplored the tendency on the part of the Opposition to blame the Marketing Board for the potato situation. Present low prices had been conrasted with other years, as if the Board were responsible, whereas there had been a slight increase in price since the marketing scheme was established. "I do not believe," he added, "that the Marketing Board, when the prices are so low as they are this year, can be of such value as when the prices are higher, for this reason: that when prices are high there is a tendency to flood the market. The Marketing Board could then come in and prevent this condition. However, I believe that if it were not for the Marketing Board, we would not be receiving the advance of one or two cents a bushel that has been obtained."

The Dominion Farm Loan Act was commended by the speaker as a measure which should prove of great benefit to our farmers. Interest rates to farmers, he emphasized, are altogether too high. He did not see why a farmer should be charged seven per cent. interest when the Banks were getting the money at two percent. He believed the Banks were partly instrumental in causing the present financial difficulties, and that in such times as these they should be more ready to co-operate in assisting our farmers especially. (Applause).

Fortune Comes But Too Late

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

RIMBEY, Alta., March 15—Fortune came to 61-year-old Thomas Wilson too late and today a little nondescript dog, his companion for years, stood guard over his master's body at a funeral parlor here.

A few days ago Wilson received word he had inherited $1,500 from a relative in England. Planning to return to the old country, he walked to Leedale post office, 10-miles from his homestead shack, to make arrangements for his passage. He died on his way home from exhaustion and exposure. Wilson's body was found huddled by the roadside, within two miles of his shack.

A veteran of the Great War, Wilson was the son of an imperial army office. He will be given a military funeral by members of the Canadian Legion.
