HE PERLS AS YOUNG AS EVER

Mr. Chester Loomis Took Dodd's Kidney Pills.

And from a Useful Man he Became as Smart as a Boy.

ORLANDO, Fla., Sept. 23 (Special).—Mr. Chester Loomis, an old and respected farmer living in this section, is spreading broadcast the good news that Dodd's Kidney Pills are a sure cure for the lame back and kidney disease so common among old people. Mr. Loomis says:

"I am 76 years of age and start and active as a boy and I give Dodd's Kidney Pills all the credit for it. "Before I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills I was so used up I could hardly ride in a buggy and I could not do any work of any kind. Everybody thought I would no longer live long. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful remedy. "The kidneys of the young may be wrong but the kidneys of the old must be wrong. Dodd's Kidney Pills make all wrong kidneys right. That is why they are the old folks' greatest friend."

THE CANADIAN MAPLE.

The time approaches when the Canadian forests will present a splendid panorama of rich color to the admiring eyes of all lovers of beauty. Ours is the country of greatest forests and where this great spectacle is presented on the grandest scale. Our tree-crowned valleys, hills and mountains are measured by millions of square miles, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific the traveler by rail sees the splendid picture of rich autumn tints spread before his eyes.

To many the fading leaf carries with it the sad, if salutary lesson of the brevity of human life. "We all do fade as a leaf," was the reflection it brought to the mind of one of the sacred writers. My days are in the yellow leaf; The flowers and fruits of love are gone; The worm, the canker and the grief Are mine alone.

So wrote Lord Byron, dying at 37 after a brilliant but ill-spent career. A healthier view is to look upon the fading for its leaves as we look upon the splendor of a glorious sunset, the presage of a bright and happy morrow. The leaf dies, but the tree lives on. The day often dies in splendor, and we count this a happy augury. It is thus with the well-spent life, to which at its close a few clouds may even give an added lustre. The best lives often give a fitting fulfillment of the wish sometimes expressed: "May your life be like the maple leaf growing more beautiful as it fades."

The maple tree belongs not alone to Canada; it grows in the north temperate zone around the world, in Europe, Asia and in far-off Japan. But Canada alone has made it a national emblem. And in its sturdy and stately growth, its beauty of form, its sugary sap—a sweet lifeblood than is possessed by other trees—it forms a fitting figure to represent this vigorous, stalwart, hopeful and God-fearing and loyal young nation of the north. It seems to symbolise fittingly the upright life and those inner qualities of truth and loyalty which are characteristic of Canadian manhood at its best.

It may possibly have been a solitary maple tree which Moses saw when he kept the flocks of Jethro in Midian, heard the miraculous voice calling his name and received the great commission to deliver Israel from Egyptian bondage. In saying this we detract nothing from the miracle which was undoubtedly very real. Moses was attracted by the sight of a tree "burning and not consumed," and he turned aside to view "this great sight." Had he passed by carelessly what an impressive incident would have been lost to the world! The flaming maple may at least teach us a lesson of reverence, while it always must appeal to our sense of the beautiful. It is the best known representative of the tree that Moses saw, and owes its color to the same Divine hand.

It is worth while sometimes to turn aside from the beaten path as Moses did to see the "great sight" which nature displays in earth and sky. It is worth while also to listen for voices in the silence. To the reverent in spirit the vision of one of our own maples in its autumn transition from green to gold and crimson, may speak both to the eye, and to the ear, if the ear is attuned to hear the eloquent message. And the voice will be the voice of The Great I Am.

Captain Bernier, whose ambition was to discover the North Pole, has accepted the less brilliant commission of sailing master on the ship sent by the Dominion Government to establish Canadian authority on the shores of Hudson's Bay. This sort of disappointment has overtaken many other men who attempted to follow Emerson's advice and hitch their wagon to a star. But Captain Bernier has the consolation of knowing that, if he cannot win fame by leading an expedition in search of the Pole, he will be engaged in the more practical and patriotic work of serving his country in a way to produce more directly useful results. Lieutenant Peary has announced that he will make his final effort to reach the Pole next year, and everybody will wish his persistence may be crowned with success. Of course Canadians would be better pleased were the Pole to be discovered by a Canadian, for the claim has been made that it and the aurora borealis form the northern boundary of the Dominion. However the magnetic Pole is in Canadian territory, and we may rest reasonably content with its possession.—Witness.

CANADA'S EXPORT GRAIN TRADE.

The proposition that Canadian grain must eventually find an outlet through Pacific Coast ports, to a greater or lesser extent, has come in for fitful consideration, especially to the people of the West who look forward with pleasure to this advent of increased trade in their cities and towns. In this connection it is interesting to note an article in the Canadian Trade Review on "Canada's Grain Export Trade."

Last year, in a season of seven months, says the Review, the port of Montreal received 1,400,000 tons of ocean tonnage, or an average of 200,000 tons per month. During autumn weeks, however, the average is much heavier than during midsummer, owing to the call for shipping for new Canadian and American grains then seeing a market.

With an extra month of open water in the autumn, therefore, it would be safe to count upon an immediate increase of at least 250,000 tons of ocean shipping, provided, of course, that marine insurance rates did not advance to a prohibitive figure. Thus the port of Montreal would cut materially into the trade of Boston and Portland, which are now chiefly depended upon after the season of navigation on the St. Lawrence comes to an end.

In this connection the following table of grain shipments for the various ports for the year 1903 will be of interest:

Port	Total
New York	38,500,000
New Orleans	25,112,000
Montreal	24,648,000
Baltimore	21,735,000
Galveston	21,469,000
Philadelphia	13,148,000
Boston	13,064,000
Portland	11,343,000

From this table it will be seen that during 1903 the port of Montreal, in seven months' trade, stands third in the ports of the continent as a grain shipper, as compared with 12 months for all other ports. With another month added, and this the best four weeks for grain shipping in the entire year, it would be extremely easy for the Canadian port to take first rank without any great addition to the fleets of vessels now coming to the port.

The Trade Review remarks that an English firm, Fleming & Ferguson, are building for the Canadian Government an ice-breaker, which our despatches intimated was launched several days ago, to be delivered the coming November.

It is the Government's intention to try the experiment of breaking up the heavy ice which forms in the St. Lawrence just above Quebec, for it is believed that navigation can thus be kept open from three to four weeks later in the autumn, and at least two weeks earlier in the spring than ordinarily. If found feasible, other ice breakers will be constructed and placed in the river at various points between Quebec and Montreal.

In reference to the letter of Inquirer, published in another column, dealing with the Sunday trips of the steamer Lunenburg from this port it may be stated that The Guardian did not insert the advertisement of which Inquirer makes mention, although asked to do so. A protest was also raised in these columns against this repeated violation of the Sabbath Day and a strong resolution was passed at the annual meeting of the P. E. I. branch of the Dominion Lord's Day Alliance but up to the present time apparently no action has been taken in the matter.

HAD NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Could not Sleep—Had Severe Headaches and was Very Weak.

Mrs. Willis Taylor, Hensley Street, Charlottetown, P. E. I., States—"I suffered from nervous prostration, could not sleep and frequently had attacks of nervous headaches, in fact my whole system was run down and my health was in anything but a satisfactory condition. Since having used three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I can say that I never tried any medicine that did me so much good. It has built up my system, strength and the nerves and enabled me to sleep and rest well. It is now a considerable time since I had a headache and I can truthfully recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a splendid preparation. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or E. Mansson, Bess & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations: the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, is on every box.
