CP Staff Man Appointed To New York Job

J. F. SANDERSON RETURNS FROM LONDON TO BE SPECIAL WRITER ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS AND COVER WASHINGTON SCENE.

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—(C. P.)—Appointment of J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press parliamentary correspondent in London, as special writer on foreign affairs in the New York bureau, was announced today by J. A. McNeil, CP general manager.

Sanderson, who has been in London since July 1938, is expected to arrive in Canada shortly. He will visit his wife and three children, who left England last summer and are at St. Mary's, before taking up his post in New York. The Canadian Press political and foreign affairs expert brings to his new position a wide and varied experience in newspaper work, culminated by 2 1/2 important years at the Empire's capital in covering the British scene to Canadians. He arrived in London as the events that led to war were shaping themselves on the Continent, and reported the history-making Munich conference of September, 1938. Gaining a wide circle of authoritative news sources in London, Sanderson wrote the drama of Britain's patient efforts to avert war and British reaction to Hitler's moves in Europe. After the conflict broke out, his byline won wider prominence on Canadian front pages as he interpreted the rapidly-developing war picture and charted events from his intimate knowledge of Britain's politics.

ALSO REPORTS WASHINGTON

Sanderson's career fitted him well for the post he held in London and the equally important position he will occupy in New York, where his beat will also include Washington. Born in 1904 at St. Mary's, Ontario, son of P. G. Sanderson, now M. P. for Perth South, he was educated at Ridley College, St. Catharines, Ont., and started newspaper work at the age of 21 with the London Advertiser.

After four years of reporting there, Sanderson joined The Canadian Press in 1931, covering the Ontario legislature before moving to the wide field at Ottawa. He was appointed Assistant Superintendent of the Ottawa bureau shortly after he aided in coverage of the Imperial Economic Conference in 1932 and his summaries of parliamentary debates and political campaigns were outstanding over the next few years.

Sanderson was selected in 1935 to cover the entry into office of the Alberta Social Credit government in Alberta and went to Edmonton for six months in 1936-37 to report the schism in the Social Credit cabinet and its repercussions, winning wide commendation for his unbiased reports of a complicated and contentious political development. When war first broke out, Sanderson sent his family to the English countryside where they remained until the invasion of the Low Countries. He was in London during most of the German air attacks of the last six months but news stories reaching Canada have reported him in danger only once. When incendiary bombs rained on the roof of his hotel he awakened to watch them extinguished and then, the story said, "yawned and went back to bed."

HOBOES OVER IN AMHERST

An Amherst report says:—Hoboes are again making their quarters in Amherst and the police are on their toes trying to chase this type of genitor out of the town. A trio of huns were reported around town from various quarters Monday night, and while two of the men were ordinary, everyday pan handlers, a third proved to be a veritable nuisance to householders and others.

Edward Perry, St. Louis, P. E. I. who has caused trouble in Amherst on past occasions was picked up by Police Officers Miller and Heppard, after a number of complaints had been received from different localities. Perry, according to report endeavored to force his way into different homes in his demands for meals.

As the home of Kay Baker on Upper Victoria he received a rather surprising reception as Mr. Baker promptly gave him the "burn's rush" and split the semi-intoxicated man onto the street. And then his big

Mr. Erwin Andrew, Southport, spent the weekend at his home here.

Mrs. M. McLeod left recently for North River where she will spend the winter months.

Mr. George Dickleson was a visitor to Summerside last week.

The friends of Master Leth Dickleson will regret to learn that he had the misfortune of breaking his ankle while driving with his brother Ray on Friday afternoon. He was sitting on the side of the sleigh when the accident occurred. Dr. Stevenson was immediately sent for and the patient was sent to the P.E.I. Hospital where a X-ray was taken at latest reports he was resting quite comfortably.

The New Glasgow Women's Institute held their January meeting at the home of Miss Elsie Laird on Monday evening of last week, with ten members and three visitors present. The President Miss Laird presided. The meeting opened with singing the Ode and repeating the Creed in unison. Roll call was answered by "What I would like to do to improve the School." Minutes of the December meeting were read and approved. Sick Committee reported a number of visits paid to the sick and shut-ins. No report was heard from School Comm. It was decided to have School cleaned in the near future. The Secretary reported a collection from Institute members of $3.00 to be forwarded to Orphanage. The Questionnaire on Education was in charge of Mrs. Herbert Stevenson, in the absence of Mrs. W. J. McLeod, Convener, and papers on this subject were read by Mrs. Revel Dickleson, and Miss Inez Stevenson. Bills for children's Christmas treat presented and ordered paid. Red Cross work was distributed to members. The members expressed their regrets of losing a valued member Mrs. M. McLeod who moved to another community for the winter months. Mrs. Harland Hill invited the members to her home for the February meeting roll call to be answered with: "My favorite dinner menu." Refreshments Comm.: Mrs. W. "Well?" she asked.

"Do you want to know the truth?"

"The whole truth?"

"I thought it would take you a month to learn what you already know." He jumped off, handed her his reins to hold, tore down a high being pole and laid it like a bar between two magney blanks. "Made to order," he commented as he mounted. "Watch me, then do exactly the same. Just stick on and leave the rest to Rayo. Even if he should peck, which he won't, he can pick himself up a lot better than you can life."

She jumped the bar—once with a gasp of astonishment at her success, then ten times more with steadily increasing confidence and improving style. She would have been content to keep on for the rest of the day had not Dirk taken his revenge.

"If you don't let up," he remarked dryly, "you're going to find out there are more ways than one of killing a horse."

After an afternoon spent in grooming the horses for sheer love of the work he came to dinner aglow from what he called an earned bath. Already he regretted having brought no change beyond a single lounge suit but tonight Arnaldo save for shoulders exaggerated beyond nature and a wasp-like waist, was dressed in like manner. Joyce had put on black—not the semi-evening frock of her first and last appearance at El Tenebroso, but it had an unusual simplicity of line that gave her an almost sculptural appearance.

Changing her clothes had changed her mood. Gracious and ready with her answers she yet was so distraught to give an impression of inner silliness. Though she avoided looking directly at Dirk and Adan she was thinking of them, but thinking more of herself. What had come over her last night? Which person was she—the woman of no age who had been kissed and had kissed back, or the girl who had set shoulders on the parapet with a companion who whom she had poured out her heart as though she talked to another self? Were there fibres within her that responded to music alone and other things, or was she merely a girl who had been soothed by the sibilant harmony of moon, planet and star? She wondered.

Dirk was engrossed in a mastery discussion of agrarianism between Don Jorge and Arnaldo. Fresh from the carnival, Adan was packed to the girls with theory and regarded the parceling out of all the land in the republic as an ultimate panacea for every ill. Don Jorge, rooted in the soil, aware of the divergence as close to the peon as he was to his light-fitting charro breeches, admitted the cure only to damn it with a qualifying phrase—"in a thousand years."

"You can't overlearn education the way you want a manky horse," he exploded. "You'd have to have a mildly educated peon, but first catch your educated executive—if you can. It isn't enough for a ruler to be honest, altruistic and stuffed with beneficent theories. Unless he's greater than God he can't bridge the gulf of ignorance between a peon and a tractor, nor encourage gramma grass on a hundred hectares to give that peon's babies milk, nor change the crop of wheat lands into lush bottoms grained with garden truck. You agrarians run around with a footrule yelling, 'Behold the measure of all things! You can measure a horse's ear with a footrule, but not a peon. Our compadres, dumb as they are, can see this. Do you know what they're saying?"

"No," said Adan smilingly, for he loved discussion for the talk's sake alone. "Tell me."

"They're heard what happened in the north and they're giving it out they'll do the same here."

"Crop the ears of agrarians who set foot on La Barranca. They'll do it too, for though the back log of fundamental knowledge, He doesn't have to starve to death to see starvation on the way any more than he had to learn to read and write before he could make up his mind the three model houses put up by my master and friend, Cutler Sewell, were no good."

Joyce looked at him. "Why weren't they? I've always wondered."

Because your father's education led him into the belief three rooms are better than one, while the peon's backlog of knowledge has taught him one room is infinitely better than three. Since the sun of the warmth of his kitchen fire, his milk goat, his wife, six children and a couple of pigs constitute, at no expense, exactly the sort of central heating system which is showing making England a livable country."

They laughed, rose and separated: he was already late, there was no need tonight to make the night.

How does a girl, lacking long social training and apparently innocent of sinness, leave one man in the lurch and walk off with another without either of them knowing how it happened? Dirk paused to ask Don Jorge a single unimportant question, but when he stepped out on the balcony Joyce and Adan were nowhere to be seen. He walked to the right hopefully until turning the angle opened a long empty vista. He glanced into Joyce's boudoir and passed the open door of the drawing room. Then he retraced his steps and strove to the opposite corner only to behold more emptiness. Abruptly he knew the truth.

Certainly as if he had watched Joyce lead and walk off with another passage toward a certain spiral stair. His heart contracted with such violence it caused him to halt in his tracks in more than one place. Where was he headed? Where had he already arrived?

His deduction had been correct: Joyce had taken Adan to the roof. As they emerged into a transience which would have been blinding had it not been dimmed by the impalpable moonlight of the night, she turned toward her companion with a caught breath. His face was amiable and alive but apparently his eyes were blind. She felt dismay and then an impulse to laugh a loud at herself. She restrained it, the sly by a feeling of sadness. The necessity of his evasion—her—founder her. Was it possible he found neither moon nor stars nor that distant double torch of snow rising must say something—must, must
