P. E. I. FOXMAN INTERVIEWED ON FUR PROSPECTS

(Mr. E. H. Rayner Reviews the Situation)

Mr. E. H. Rayner, President and Manager of E. H. Rayner, Limited, Montreal, has been visiting his native province for a week and returned Saturday afternoon.

When questioned regarding the situation in the fur markets of the world and the prospects for the coming season Mr. Rayner expressed himself as follows:—People living on Prince Edward Island, under present world wide business conditions, do not realize how many reasons they have for being thankful as compared with people in other sections of the country, especially the inhabitants of large cities.

It is generally conceded by leading economists that business depression throughout the United States is the worst within living memory.

The number of unemployed in the United States is generally conceded to be not less than five million people with the probability that the number is close to seven million. In England the number of unemployed has already passed the two million mark, while in Germany the number exceeds three million with prospects anything but encouraging. Unemployment in Italy is mounting into large figures; and France, which has been until recently the most prosperous country in Europe, and had to import labor from neighbouring countries, is now face to face with the problem of providing for the jobless workers in her own country.

The vast population and resources of Russia are being pitted against the more civilized countries of the world with an effort to glut world markets with their products in order to establish foreign credits for the Soviet and to foment international discontent in order to further its policy of world revolution.

It is against such conditions and such competition that Canadian Agriculturists, Industrialists and Fur Breeders, must contend and compete for success and prosperity; and the battle promises to be long and hard.

Canadian Wheat Growers, who refused through their marketing organizations $1.45 a bushel for wheat a little more than a year ago are now looking for buyers at approximately 80 cents a bushel.

The problem facing the Canadian Fur Farmer today is, what are we going to get for our furs? In attempting to answer this question, there is no sense in deluding fur farmers with optimism that has no foundation in fact. The fur trade throughout the world has suffered heavily during the last twelve months and many of the old landmarks in the fur business have been wiped out by failure, while other large fur houses with international branches have suffered losses running into millions of dollars.

The buying power of the fur trade has been reduced to a point that has no comparison in our life time, and the only hope for the fur trade during the coming season lies in the manner in which the furs from our ranches and forests are placed upon the market. Fur dealers and manufacturers are forced under present conditions to pursue a policy of hand to mouth buying until prices for furs are once more stabilized and their financial position improved.

To meet these conditions, a policy of gradual selling must be pursued. In my judgment the placing of a tremendous quantity of skins on any one market during the coming season will result in such slaughter of prices as fur shippers have never experienced. On the other hand, if the demand of fur markets of the world are catered to by gradually supplying such quantities of skins as can be absorbed by the limited buying power of the fur industry, a fair average price will be obtained throughout the season and the fur trade will be encouraged to push furs that are reasonably priced and which they know can be secured in quantities from time to time as demands require.

In the case of silver foxes, houses throughout this continent are discussing the enormous quantity of skins that will be on the market the coming year and what disposition can be made of them under present conditions. I hold-over of skins from last year not large and there will be a demand for fox-pelts at prices commensurate with prevailing business conditions. We believe that Canadian Fur Producers will be well advised to begin selling at open market prices at the early sales and feed the market gradually over a period of at least nine months.

I cannot conclude without expressing my opinion that Canadian couples as good a position, if not the best financial position, in the world today. We have a young country with unlimited natural resources, a population with plenty of energy and ability to recover quickly from business depression. We must face competition with courage and intelligent recognition of the supply and demand and must realize that we cannot force other countries to pay high prices for our products when they can secure them from other sources their requirements the same articles at lower figures.

No one can tell what prices will be until fur buyers from the four corners of the world assemble at the Fur Sale on this continent on December 15th and demonstrate in open competition at what prices they will take our offering of furs. As general business conditions improve the fur trade will be a gradual improvement in the fur trade; but any attempt to force the market or holding high prices will in my judgment be the same result as we have witnessed in the marketing of Canadian Wheat. We must not forget that the United States and a number of European countries are producing large quantities of silver fox pelts and we must market our fox skins in competition with theirs.
