Chapter 2

"Dora! Hey, wait a minute!" the voice called, and the girl stopped obediently and waited.
She always stopped when called, and she always obeyed. She had been brought up so that she did everything anyone asked of her.
The second girl caught up to her, and they went on together. She was Dora's cousin, Gladys Nicholson, in whose house Dora was living.
There was never a greater contrast between two girls than existed here. In the deepening twilight Gladys seemed twice as big as Dora. But it was not until they entered the huge, old-fashioned house at the corner of a cross street, that the full contrast could be noted. Gladys, at 21, looked years younger than Gladys at 19. Dora weighed scarcely more than 100 pounds, Gladys had matured to 140 or nearly that.
Dora's hair, when she took off her hat, was a soft, limp, very much mussed up mass around her head, the sort of hair that is the despair of its owner. Gladys had dark hair too, but it was thick, and coarse and curly almost to the point of being kinky. Dora ran a comb through her hair, which parted in the living ends, but did nothing more for its fitness made it settle down again simply on her head.
Gladys ran a comb through hers, when she had pulled off her hat, and it raised itself obediently into a beautiful round pompadour—the style that winter, in Norris City.
Dora had dark brown eyes of a most appealing softness, surrounded by thick short curling lashes. Gladys had large gray eyes, which protruded quite a bit. But she was proud of that—it brings them out, she confessed once, and admitted her thick short black lashes which also had a habit of curling back.
Dora looked like a very young girl who was only half developed. Her figure was composed of little angles, partly formed curves, she had funny little awkwardnesses about her way of walking and her own hands. Gladys was well developed—over-developed, some would say, large hipped, with a laced-in waist. She had dimples in the flesh of her cheeks, and a sunny soft smile. Dora's hands were small and the bones showed when she

So much for two girls who had lived together most of the time for many years, and who had not a taste nor a characteristic in common.
They left their things in the hall and went back to the kitchen where Gladys' mother, Aunt Maude, was getting supper ready. She took the two girls in with a glance.
"Oh, you're for the things, Dora? Gladys, go to Grandma's room and give her that medicine. It's just time."
Swiftly she unpacked the basket, putting away provisions, while she directed Dora in setting the table.
"I don't know why your father hasn't got back to fix the heater," she complained, rapidly paring potatoes and putting them on to boil. "He's never on time—and that fire will go out."
"I'll fix it," Dora volunteered, and taking silence as consent, she went down the cellar and raised heavy shovels of coal that hurt her back a bit, to feed the gigantic furnace mouth. She shook away at the dampers, to stir up the sluggish fire bed, in spite of some warning called from above about not "wasting coal."
For if the fire went low and the house was cold, it meant only one complaint against her father—the heater.
When she came up, and went on with the numerous other tasks connected with the evening meal, she found that her uncle was in. Just as the meal was ready, her father appeared.
"Late as usual," Aunt Maude added. "Where have you been? There was nothing special to keep you at the farm to-day—Saturday."
"I know—only it was so pretty out this afternoon, I tramped to the top of Knob Hill," he apologized. "I forgot how soon it gets dark—I had to walk in the dark."
"That's like you," Aunt Maude commented briefly—her favorite comment by the way and one of her favorite disappointments. The frail little grandmamma came down and at 6 o'clock they sat down to the evening meal.
This was the family—Grandma White, who was Maude's mother, the buxom, tiresome Maude herself, her husband, Peter Nicholson, and this healthy, husky child of two, either nervous or imaginative.
And with them, though not really of the family, were Dora and her father Jim Nicholson, as great a contrast to his brother Peter as the girl was to her cousin.
Gladys made an announcement. "Ma, I've asked some folks for a party tonight—'til's Saturday. Can Dora make the refreshments?"

GIN PILLS
FOR THE KIDNEYS
THE WORLD'S BEST REMEDY FOR ALL KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES

Report Many Cases Of Rheumatism Now
Says we must keep feet dry; avoid exposure and eat less meat

Star of the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and occasionally take a spoonful of pills to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin also serve as a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather, the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work. They become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jod Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water, and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jod Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

WITH their keen instinct for all that contributes to the health of the family, Canadian women were quick to grasp the idea of Simmons Beds—built for sleep.

Sound, refreshing sleep. Every nerve and muscle relaxed. Sleep undisturbed by creak or rattle.

Quick, too, to see the necessity for Twin Beds in every room shared by two persons. One sleeper does not disturb the other or communicate colds or other infections.

When you look at Simmons Beds have your dealer show you Simmons Mattresses, too.

Built for sleep of pure, clean, new cotton. No "renovated" materials. And sealed dust-proof and germ-proof in the Simmons carton roll.

Canada has no Pure Bedding Laws—but Simmons Limited has!

Simmons Limited makes this unqualified statement to the merchant—
"Cut open any Simmons Mattress that comes into your store. If you do not find it up to specifications or better—ship back every item of Simmons merchandise, and never send us another order."

If Hair is Turning Gray, Use Sage Tea

HERE'S GRANDMOTHER RECIPE TO DARKEN AND BEAUTIFY FADED HAIR

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Woyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Woyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" now because it darkens so naturally and so quickly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

Do not suffer from itching, itching, itching. Piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and afford lasting benefit. See a box of dealers, or J. T. Gill, Toronto. Sample box free if you mention this paper, and enclose 25 cent postage.

NOTICE

To owners of Frost & Wood, Crown saw plows, I have recently been allowed a patent on my invention for repairing those saws where the collar is worn out of the hub. As the season is now approaching, it would be well to examine your wheels and see if they need repairs, if so I can repair them that you can get more wear out of them than when new for one dollar and seventy-five cents each, just about one-third the cost of a new wheel. I have been using my device for over two years and it has given perfect satisfaction.

Any parties sending me six or more wheels for repairs, I will pay the return freight on them.
