

Important Business Addition To Summerside

Imposing Structure Erected In Business Section Of Town

The opening of the new Summerside branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia is an important event in the business history of the town. Of brick construction located on Water Street just at the end of Summer Street it is a worthy addition to the business

WILLIAM HAYWARD, Manager

section having replaced a wooden building that was demolished to make way for the new bank. The building is 75 by 40 feet and is 22 feet high. A new feature of this building is a large 16 by 15 foot section of the front surrounding the door which is all glass. This section is recessed and the curved sides are of Indian limestone. One enters first into a vestibule which is also all glass and then directly into the main lobby of the bank. The interior is done in a horse-shoe design and all the woodwork is of light oak which gives a very rich appearance. Immediately to the left on entering is the office of the manager, Mr. William Hayward. The remainder of the left side is taken up with the accountants' counter which is 24 feet

STEWART MULKINS, Accountant

In length. Mr. Stewart Mulkins is the chief accountant and the whole staff consists of 16 members. There are four teller's cages, three of which will be in use immediately. The floor in the customers' space is of terrazzo tile and twenty-four recessed fluorescent fixtures provide the lighting. A new feature for banks in Summerside is the accommodation provided for safety deposit box customers. At the rear of the building are three cubicles where a deposit box customer can take his box and look over his documents in privacy. There is also a small conference room where a group of persons may meet to peruse documents which are kept in a safety deposit box. For instance a customer might like to take in his lawyer to go over certain papers and this room is provided for such purposes.

There are four vaults in the building, two on the main floor and two directly under these in the basement. The cash vault in which the safety deposit boxes are also kept has been built with the intention of making it burglar proof. The walls and ceiling are a solid one foot thickness of steel and reinforced concrete. Two separate combinations open the vault which are, of course held by two different members of the staff. To get into the safe there are two more combinations and then one is faced by three inner doors into three separate compartments each of which is safeguarded by two combinations. This vault is 15 by 8 feet and the others are 15 by 9 feet the difference being the extra thickness of the walls in the cash vault. In the basement besides the two extra storage vaults are lavatories and a staff kitchen in which all glass and then directly into the main lobby of the bank. The interior is done in a horse-shoe design and all the woodwork is of light oak which gives a very rich appearance. Immediately to the left on entering is the office of the manager, Mr. William Hayward. The remainder of the left side is taken up with the accountants' counter which is 24 feet

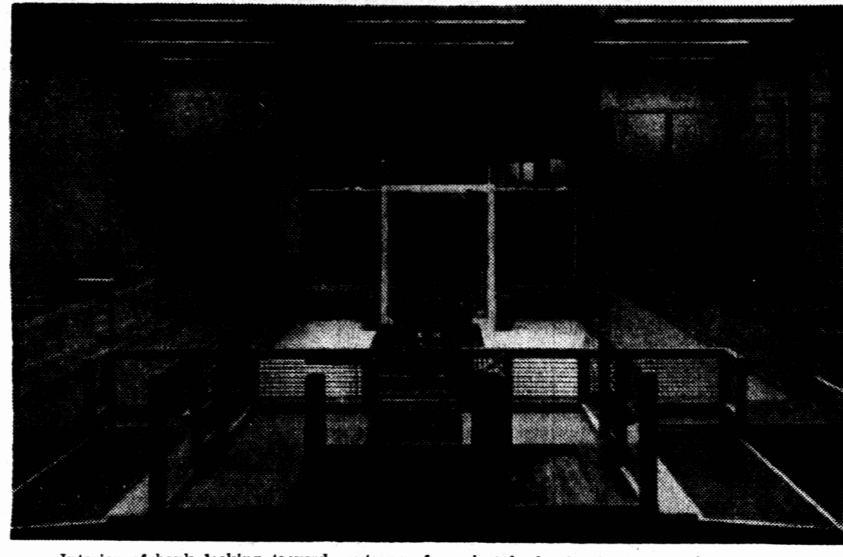

All electrical installations were done by Wright and Bell Ltd. and the plumbing and heating is the work of Palmer and Williams Co. Ltd. The sit-down desks were purchased from Smallman's Ltd. and the steel shelving for the vaults were purchased from Brace, McKay Co. Ltd.—S.

THE POET

In the darkness he sings of the dawn,
In the desert he sings of a rose,
Or of limpid and laughing water
That through green meadows flows.

He flings a Romany ballad
Out through his prison bars
And, deaf, he sings of nightingales
Or, blind, he sings of stars.

And hopeless and old and forsaken,
At last with falling breath
A song of faith and youth and love
He sings at the gates of death.
