The Woman Who Loved and Earned

BY JANE PHELPS
A Modern Story of Home and Business

A SURPRISE CHAPTER 84.

Robert was at home. He sat by the window, but I could see he had not been watching for me, but had been engrossed by his thoughts. "Come on, Robert!" I cried gayly. "We will hurry with our dinner—then I have a surprise for you." He got up immediately, but showed no interest. Neither did he ask any questions.

"We had dinner at a nearby restaurant. When we returned to the house, I said:

"Help me to pack, Robert. I am going to take a vacation."

"You need it. Where will you go?" His tone was so cool, so indifferent, it brought the tears to my eyes.

"Not far! And you are going with me."

"Don't talk nonsense, Gerry!" He shrugged, his shoulders impatiently as he turned away and walked over to the window. "You know very well I can take no vacation."

"I don't want you to! You'll have to hustle all the harder to give me mine." I remembered what Mary had said. I would make him feel the responsibility.

"Kindly tell me what you are talking about, and what you intend to do?" I had dragged a heavy suit case from the closet. "That would be all we need take. I could get the rest of our things the next day. It would be all I would have to do."

"Robert, we are going to be babies in the wood. Mary is going to lend us the woods. We are the babies. If you get chronic indigestion, don't blame me. I'll try not to poison you, but that's all I can promise."

"You mean—" A gleam of interest had come into his eyes.

"I mean that Mary Ryan can't let Gardner come often enough to suit him because she is alone. She offered to swap her flat for our quarters for a month. I left Madame this afternoon. We'll have another honey-moon, dear." I was so near crying I had to keep on talking to hide my feeling from him.

"Honest, Gerry? You're not fooling?" There was a lilt in his voice I had not heard in weeks. Then in the old-time tone: "But his too late now. If we could have done this when I was with Caiding, we could have had a heap of fun—had the Weeds and Murphy's for eats, and had a good time generally. Now we can't."

"We will afford it some way." Now that I had decided, now that I had given way to Mary's opinion, I began to feel as if it were a game I was playing.

"I don't see how."

"I said no more, but packed what we needed. Mary and Gardner were to remain at the flat until we got there, so that Mary could introduce us to the superintendent. She had said:

"He's got a good tenant now and he knows it. He might object to a change if I didn't say you was all right."

The little flat looked very pleasant and homelike when we reached it. Mary had cleaned until everything shone. It was very tiny, very cheap. But even I felt the homey atmosphere as soon as we entered.

A gray cloth was on the kitchen table, a plate of red-cheeked apples as a centerpiece. In her improvised window ice box Mary had half a dozen eggs, some slices of bacon, and a pat of butter. The bread tin held half a loaf of bread! For toast, she explained.

"But I supposed we'd have to go out to breakfast!" I exclaimed, delighted that Mary had been so thoughtful.

"My treat!" she replied.

"You're a dear, Mary! Isn't she Gardner?" I had seen Gardner but seldom since he and Mary had become engaged. But now I had none.

Lucky by Comapison

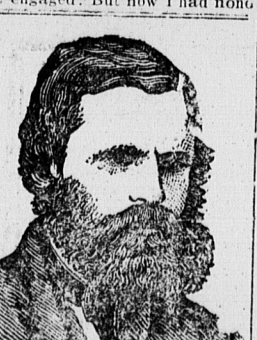

The Rev. F. W. McDonald in his volume of reminiscences tells an adventure that befell him in a house where he was being entertained while "on circuit."

The household (writes the author) was a hospitable one, but the weather was warm, and my bedroom was stuffy; so in the morning I tried to open the window.

It was, I found, no easy job, and when at last I succeeded in forcing the catch, the sash, which had neither cord nor weight to hold it, fell like the knife of a guillotine, lacerating my fingers severely.

"What is the matter with you this morning, Mr. McDonald?" said my hostess, when I came down to breakfast with my hand bound up; whereupon I told her of my misadventure.

"And indeed you're not the first it has served that way," was her genial reply. "There was a gentleman here a while ago, and it nearly took his fingers off."

The Late Dr. J. C. SHARP.

SHARP'S BALSAM

of Horchound and Anise Seed

gave relief to those suffering with colds, etc., seventy years ago—long before most of the "cold cures" now on the market were even thought of.

Sharp's Balsam was the old standby—the reliable family remedy of our grandparents, and it is equally effective today.

MR. CAMPBELL'S EXPERIENCE
J. C. Campbell, a prominent barrister of St. John in 1852, writes:
"One of my children suffered for years with a severe cough. The usual remedies were applied without effect. I obtained some Sharp's Balsam and after the use of about eight ounces this extraordinary medicine the cough stopped completely."

Ask for this famous old remedy when you need such medicine. Beware of cheap and general stores everywhere—25¢.

YOU WILL NOT GET THE "FLU"

If You Build Up Your Run-Down Condition

It Attacks People Who Are All Worn Out, Anemic, Devalitized and Weak

Strong People Never Get Influenza

During every epidemic it is always the weak, run-down, overworked, devalitized men, women and children who so quickly fall a prey to the ravages of disease.

When, therefore, an epidemic is prevalent why not use a little precaution and build up the tired out, run-down overworked, devalitized members of your family by giving them VINOL.

There is nothing that acts so quickly as a tonic reconstructor. It makes red corpuscles, enriches the blood, quickens the circulation, sharpens the appetite, promotes sound sleep, and imparts strength, vitality and energy to every organ and muscle in the body.

Your physician recommends VINOL and your druggist agrees to return your money if it fails to benefit.

For all run-down, nervous, anemic conditions, weak women, overworked men, feeble old people and the children there is no remedy like VINOL.

Lost in the Woods

By F. H. Sweet

Few persons become lost in the woods when the sun is shining, but on a cloudy day, or in a snow-storm, it is easy to go astray. A familiar piece of woodland will look strange when the trees are overladen with snow and their branches hang close to the ground.

It often happens that you find yourself in the woods without a compass. Since you will probably have a fairly accurate idea as to what hour of the day it is, you can easily lay out your course for home or camp if you can find the position of the sun.

Find a place where the light is even, that is, not in the shadow of a large tree. Then place a pin or a sharp stick, point down, upon your thumb-nail or other polished object. A dim shadow will fall away from the pin. At any time before the sunset the pointed end of the shadow will show where the sun is, no matter how heavily clouded over it may be, or how thickly the snow may be falling.

Young Heroes at Oxford

The returning hero, fresh from battlefields, will no longer rush to the cricket fields and the river at Oxford with the zest of young barbarians at their play, observes a writer in the Nation (London). To one who may wear the ribbon of the Military Cross or the D. S. O., the position of his college boat in the regatta can no longer seem the one matter of life and death, and even the halo of a goal shines with diminished glory.

So, too, in lesser pursuits. How shall he dwell upon the squabbles of compartments in ancient Greece when his mind is busy with the headmaster when they have not taken the trouble to prepare a line of the passage. It makes no difference that they are more than 50 and the headmaster has long been dead. The horror of the situation remains appalling, and the dream of far more than a century of Freud's imaginary perversions.

The feeling of the soldier returning to the class and lecture room will be much the same, with a sense of futility added. For, indeed, it is impossible to go back to the first little victims play regardless of their doom, but not men who have known what doom can do.

150-275	18 cents
275 up,	16 cents

Brood sows, any weight, 14 cents all good quality, well fattened.

Delivery may be made on any day except Saturday.

Light hogs, under 150 lbs., are of very little use for packing purposes, and as the chief profit from feeding comes in the last few weeks of finishing, it is respectfully suggested that farmers hold any small hogs, under 150 lbs., until of weight and quality more profitable for all concerned. But should it be necessary to dispose of any such under-weights they will be received at market value, proportionate to above prices.

We also buy at various points throughout the Island and full information can be obtained from our local representatives.
