REPORTED WRECK OF A SCHOONER

Charlottetown at present is between doubts and fears regarding the fate of a schooner which was reported on Saturday to have been wrecked off Canoe Cove in a storm then raging. The report was made by a man named Jerrold who lives at the cook-house on the shore. He informed Mr. McFayden, of the firm of McFadyen Bros., who immediately got into communication with Capt. Taylor of the Marine Office, Charlottetown. On receiving Mr. McFadyen's report, Capt. Taylor ordered the D. G. S. Brant to proceed to once to the assistance of the wrecked vessel.

The story of the wreck as told by the man Jerrold is that the schooner,a two-sparred top-masted craft, of average size, which appeared to be laden, was heading east, and she seemed to be in difficulties with her steering as if something had gone wrong with her rudder and those on board had lost control of her. Those who were watching her from the shore declare that the vessel suddenly brought her head up in the wind, and in the next few moments she heeled right over. Where this occurred was about four miles from shore, and those who watched the vessel from the land were unable to see anything of her crew, and to their horror they lost sight of the vessel herself a couple of hours afterwards. She had completely disappeared.

Meanwhile the steamer Brant had been directed to go out to the scene of the wreck. It was about 11 o'clock when the vessel was first seen from the shore and it was noon when the news came through to Charlottetown. It happened that the Brant at that time was engaged coaling; she had filled her bunkers on one side and it was not possible for her to go out to sea in safety with only one half of her bunkers filled. So, the job of coaling was completed and at two o'clock, with the life-boat crew on board and the life-boat in tow behind, the Brant set out for the Cove. She got up to that vicinity but there was no sign of any vessel about, even though Capt. Walker scoured the horizon on all sides with his binoculars. A heavy sea was running at the time and on account of the life-boat getting into difficulties the Brant had to turn back into Charlottetown sooner than perhaps she would have done. She arrived in port about five o'clock in the afternoon. That she brought the life-boat back in safety was due to Capt. Walker's good seamanship, as twice on the way out and once coming back the boat had filled and turned turtle. On the second occasion, in fact, the two lines parted, at some risk of the life-boat being lost; but the Brant steamed back and after succeeding in securing her hauled her up by the use of the hawser and derrick. It was a fortunate circumstance that the life boat crew were not in her when she was being towed, as some times is the case. Or, said the Captain, Mr. White, to a Guardian reporter on Saturday afternoon," we would all have been drowned." He condemned the life-boat as being useless for her purpose, and strongly urged the acquisition of a more suitable and seaworthy boat.

Yesterday morning the Brant made another trip out to Canoe Cove to find out whatever she could about the reported wreck. It was hoped that she might fall in with some of the wreckage that would lead to the identity of the lost vessel being established, but on this occasion also ner quest was unfruitful. After cruising around Canoe Cove for an hour or so and discovering nothing, she put back to port; arriving here about 10 o'clock. On this occasion the Brant took out the life boat crew also but the life-boat used was that belonging to the Minto, it being undesirable to take out the other life boat; and though yesterday the weather was rougher than on Saturday, the Minto's life'boat behaved splendidly and gave no trouble whatever.

Up to the present there has been absolutely no confirmation of the report received from Canoe Cove on Saturday, although all sorts of rumors are afloat as to the identity of the vessel, her cargo, etc.; one rumor even going so far as to state that four bodies had been washed ashore, but this is not true and up to the present considerable doubt exists about the entire affair. Several well known nautical men are inclined to the belief that there was no wreck at all; there was a snow storm raging at the time and they say that it is possible that the schooner might just have been lost to view in the snow squall, instead of going down as stated. They are inclined to the opinion that in the weather that prevailed on Saturday morning hardly any schooner would have risked a passage across the Straits, but would have kept to the shelter of the harbor. In addition to that Capt. Taylor yesterday was in communication with Crapaud and was informed from that quarter that the vessel was not seen to pass that point on Saturday. The Marine Department is doing all in its power to get at the bottom of the matter, and this morning the Brant will make another trip out to Canoe Cove.

A HURRICANE STRIKES QUEBEC

NO SESSION TILL JANUARY

(Special To The Guardian.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 2—It is now certain that there will be no session until January and there is a complete lull in political matters. Cabinet proposals are well concealed so the public cannot tell what is going on.

It is not likely there will be any progress with naval defence as the government realizes the futility of introducing any measure, so long as the Senate is in a position to destroy it.

The Opposition is determined to block any measure the Government may produce, as well as any government attempt to improve the highways. The Redistribution Bill will be introduced but it is expected the Senate will kill it.

Any attempt to revise the tariff on lines proposed by the Tariff Commission will, it is believed, meet a similar fate. In fact the control of the Senate by Sir Wilfrid Laurier will rob the coming session of much of its effectiveness but may be the means eventually of ridding the country of that useless Legislative body. However there may be many matters of interest and much fighting if Laurier continues his wreck or rule policy.

In reference to the Premier's leaving Ottawa, there is no truth in the report that his health is gravely impaired.

SLEEPING GIRL CLUCKS LIKE HEN

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 1—The case of little Anna Samaroff at the children's hospital has baffled not only the nurses but physicians who attend that institution. In the day time Anna is just as hale and hearty as can be, but before she has been asleep five minutes she is "clucking" like a hen.

Hour after hour Anna, apparently sleeping peacefully, will be heard uttering indescribable sounds, which are best conveyed as a monotonous "cluck, cluck, cluck." The night nurse whose attention was first drawn to Anna's peculiarity, reported the matter to Miss Nanoier, superintendent of the children's hospital, and it was then brought to the attention of the house physicians.

For several nights following this discovery a careful watch was maintained over Anna and every night the monotonous "clucking" would be repeated before the girl had been asleep five minutes.

She does not say the word "cluck" but actually makes the same sound in her throat that a hen makes. Her mother was questioned upon her last visit to the hospital as to whether she could give any reason why Anna might have had this habit "thrust upon her," Mrs. Samaroff could remember no circumstances that would lead to such a mysterious habit and stated that she had not observed the clucking noise until after her daughter had been returned home from the county hospital where she had been sent to have a broken leg treated.

BY ELECTIONS IN GREAT BRITAIN

(Canadian Press)

LONDON, Nov. 2.—In the United Kingdom there is a minature general election for five vacant seats in the House of Commons, following caused by the recent judical appointments and consequent change in the Cabinet.

The government is naturally quite anxious, for in four of the contests it is on the defensive and there is a lot of dissatisfaction aided by labor and social nominations who always draw votes from the liberals.

The greatest interest centres in reading, the great Sir Rufus Isaacs, gave up to become Lord Chief Justice. It is thought that captain Leslie Wilson, Unionist, will defeat G. Peadbody Gorch., Liberal. In Keighlay another constituency, Stanley O. Buscmaster, seeks re-election as Solicitor General. In two other Scotch constituencies, Wick Burgh, Robert Munroe is Liberal candidate with no Unionist yet nominated.

In Lonlighgowshire, Mr. Pratt is the Liberal Candidate against Unionist James Kidd. There will be no contest in the Northern division of county Cork where John Guiney is nominated.

MCGILL STARTS FOREST PROTECTS LABORATORIES

MONTREAL, Nov. 1—McGill University now has the distinction of being one of the two universities on the North American continent to have a department of forest products laboratories. The next department came into existence Tuesday, in the old medical building. This is only a nucleus of what may be a mighty factor in the development of the timber resources of Canada.

The laboratories constitute a branch of the Government Forestry Service under the co-management of the university and the Dominion Government. A. A. McIntyre, B. A., B. Sc., is in charge of the department. His assistants are: W. Boyd Campbell, B.Sc., who will take charge of the class in timber physics, and R. W. Sterns, B.A., B.Sc., son of Mr. A. W. Sterns, Charlottetown, who has timber tests. The number of professors will be increased during the year.

The new superintendent has recently returned from Madison, Wis., where the University of Wisconsin, maintains a department. He remained several months there, gathering information which might be of use to the Government and the university in connection with this department. During the winter he will visit England, Norway, Sweden, Germany and France for the same purpose.

The timber waste in Canada is said to be fully 25 per cent. After the wood is put into service, too, its period of usefulness is greatly lessened because it is not properly protected from decay-producing organisms.

The purposes of the laboratory are as follows:

PURPOSES OF COURSE

To secure authoritative information on the characteristic, mechanical and physical properties of commercial woods, and products secured from them.

To study and develop the fundamental principals underlying the preservative treatment of wood.

To develop practical ways and means of using wood which, under present conditions is being wasted.

To serve as a public bureau of information.

The work will serve the country in many ways, and will eventually become one of the important faculties of the university. It will be taken up in the following departments: pulp and paper, wood preservation, timber tests of mechanical properties wood distillatioh, timber physics chemistry of wood and wood products, and pathology and agencies destructive to wood. Tests will be made to determine the effect of methods of seasoning, preserving and fire-proofing.

Far a time, part of the old Medical building of McGill will be used in conjunction with the university laboratories, but it is thought that the Government, together with the university, will eventually erect either a separate building of the new faculty or an addition to one of the present building.

Tonight a gale is springing up and it is probable that the vessel and cargo will be a total loss.

STRIKERS HOLD UP STREET CARS

(Canadian Press)

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 2.—The Indianapolis Traction Terminal Co., whose men went on strike Friday, attempted to run cars to-day but gave up when notified by the police that they were unable to stop bloodshed.

Jos. Johnson, a striking motorman, was shot and wounded by a policeman who fired into a crowd that surged around the first scab car out. Two cars were taken from the barnes each filled with policemen but the crowd surged around them so close that they were unable to move.

Governor Ralston, in a statement to-night, charged the city authorities with not doing their duty and failing to provide police protection. He refused the request of Mayor Shank to call out the state militia and declared that the Mayor had full authority sufficient to run the cars. Downtown streets remained packed with people all day and the police made little effort to disperse them. Four turned in their badges when ordered to accompany the cars. Several policemen were hit with bricks and all the windows in the barns were broken with rocks. One strikebreaker was killed by his own men who were firing on the crowds from the upper windows of the car barns.

WHAT HALIFAX WILL HAVE IN HOCKEY WAY.

HALIFAX, Nov. 1.—The little old M.P.H.A. (Maritime Provinces Hockey Association) is just now getting its full share of the calcium light. It is occupying space in the journals the whole country over, and while everything is up in the air, that is just what is keeping the association prominent. As far as is known now there may be a league and then again there may not.

Right here in Halifax the situation is up higher than a kite and those in the know have "mum" for their watchword. You can take it from us, however, that Halifax will have pro. hockey this winter and pretty classy hockey, too.

Whether the M.P.H.A. puts itself under the Hockey Commission or not, there will be several good Upper Canadian hockey men down in these parts this winter.

The fact of the matter is that the Upper Province magnates are just a trifle scared that the M.P.H.A. may make it easy for the players by bidding for their services at a higher figure than the new agreement makes it necessary for the club owners to go. It might be well to keep the Upper Canadians guessing for a while and then we might land some stars.

However, all this is likely to be settled when the meeting of the M.P.H.A. is held, which must be held before very long. There is a persistent rumor that President Lithgow, who has fathered the league ever since its infancy, will retire, though earnest efforts are being made to keep him in the gubernatorial chair. The applicat ons of new clubs for admittance will come up at this meeting. Glace Bay is knocving at the door and will in all probability take Moncton's place in the league. Amherst is perhaps ready to enter a team and possibly Truro, though the latter town scarcely measures up to the size of town necessary to support a first-class professional team.

Halifax is pretty certain to have the same two teams as last year, that is to say, the same names. There will probably be no great shake-up in the Socials' team, but the Crescents will have quite a changed line-up.

A strong effort should be made to get the Macnamaras back. They are the popular boys round here, and the Dynamite Twins bucked up the Crescents' team in great shape in the 1912 season.

Whether they are booked for Toronto is a question. Anyway, reports were current last season and they had some foundation in truth, of slick dealing on the part of their club owner, which prevented them appearing here last year and which would justify them in making a break if the inducements held out were sufficient.

RITUAL MURDER TRIAL STILL ON

(Canadian Press)

KIEV, Nov. 2.—Counsel for the defence in the Ritual murder case succeeded in having the prosecution refused permission to read minutes of the evidence taken in the previous cases where the Ritual murder was charged. Theological witnesses were on the stand to-day to testify as to the parts of the Jewish Ritual where the murder was permitted but the questions asked were of such abstruce nature that little evidence was adduced.

SCHOONER'S CREW PICKED UP

(Canadian Press.)

BOSTON, Nov. 2—The crew of the Nova Scotia schooner, Gypsum Emperor, which was dismasted in a storm were picked up by the Hamburg American liner Barcelona, according to a wireless received today.

The Gypsum Emperor was bound for Halifax from New York with coal. She was built in Parrsboro in 1892 and was owned by Captain Thos. Martin of Philadelphia. She was 609 tons, burthen and carried a crew of six men.

Except a message from the Captain to his wife saying the vessel was lost and all hands saved, little is known of the wreck.

A message from the steamer Berlin of the North German Lloyds, bound for the Mediterranean, reported the Gypsum Emperor a menace to navigation. The Berlin passed the abandoned schooner waterlogged.

TO BE TRIED FOR CHILD MURDER

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 1.—A great deal of interest is manifested throughout the State in the case of Mrs. Ida Leckwold whose trial, upon the charge of having poisoned her daughter, Viola, nine years of age, is to begin here next Monday. in view of the fact that Mrs. Leckwold has confessed her crime, the case against her is quite clear and devoid of mystery, but it is the general opinion that in the course of the trial important evidence will be obtained that will throw light upon the death of five other children of the prisoner, who died under peculiar circumstances in the last eight years. It will be pleaded in Mrs. Leckwood's defense that she was infatuated with William Norman, a barber, considerably younger than she and that it was upon his suggestion that Mrs. Leckwold poisoned her daughter and tried to poison her husband and her other children.
