

BRITISH PRESSMEN

(Continued from page 1.) have already appeared in The Guardian, but some additional particulars will be found below: W. M. Alexander of the Aberdeen Free Press, is a Master of Arts of Aberdeen University. The Free Press has printed many illuminating articles on the resources and attractions of Canada. Robert H. H. Baird, J. P., a prominent citizen of Belfast, is a son of the late W. S. Baird, of the firm of W. & G. Baird, one of the large publishing houses in the United Kingdom, and publishers of the Belfast Evening Telegraph. It has a very large circulation throughout Ireland, with an issue of twenty editions daily. R. H. Baird is now the sole manager of the firm. John F. Chapter, news editor of the widely read Westminster Gazette, has seen service on other English newspapers, has spent his life at journalistic work and has an extended reputation as an interviewer and descriptive writer. Wilfrid J. Einton, B.A., represents the Western Mail, is a graduate of a Welsh University, a native of Cardiff and has long taken a deep interest in Canada. Charles D. Leach of Tit Bits is a Londoner who has filled many important posts in journalism and has met and interviewed many of the world's celebrities. Thomas Moles, manager of the Irish Post, is reputed one of the ablest Irish journalists of the day. In early life he was much interested in sports and still maintains a connection with them. Henry C. Paxton represents the Norfolk News Company's papers, has had considerable experience as a writer on special subjects and enjoys the distinction of having had the freedom of the City of London presented to him. John Roberts represents the North Wales Times and is known as a writer on agricultural as well as other subjects. He is a keen observer of the farming capabilities of any land he visits. Edgar Rowan of the London Daily Chronicle, is a member of a staff of editors and correspondents whose views are widely quoted on both sides of the Atlantic. Other members of the party are Wilfrid Rutherford, representing the Financial News, and C. W. Stamer of the Sheffield Daily Independent. It is confidently hoped that the visit of so many capable and influential journalists from the Old Land may result in making Canada, and especially the Maritime Provinces, better known to a very wide circle of readers among whom their respective journals circulate. The party set yesterday afternoon by the steamer Brant for Pictou, and will proceed thence to Truro, Halifax, Digby and St. John.

FORCED TO IT.

She—And you are a strict vegetarian? He—O, yes. "What made you a vegetarian?" "O, I've been running a country newspaper for twenty-five years."

PROOF POSITIVE.

The following incident happened in the Seattle branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and is related by a former member of the staff at that city:—

In the bank we were always called upon to exchange American money for Canadian, because visiting Canadians and others who were bothered by having trouble in negotiating Canadian currency in the stores found it more expedient to have their "wad" exchanged and made "spendable." There isn't the same trouble now since the banks no longer charge a commission for these exchanges, but at that time we often disgusted certain of the transient public by our inflexible regard for the "clearing house rule" which regulated the exchange tariff on Canadian bank notes. This, however, is merely a prelude to a humorous incident.

A man came into the office one day, he was an Irishman, and he appeared to be somewhat excited; he asked to see the manager and was shown in to the manager's room; then he began to talk, quickly in a semi-coherent manner. He wanted to know if anyone had been in the bank during the last few minutes and changed some Canadian bank bills. He said that he had sent some on the street not long before, and that he thought whoever found them would want to get them changed into American money, as he had intended doing, and he could hardly contain

THE OTHER SIDE.

"I see you employ a number of old men." "I do." "How old are they?" "Too old to be interested in canoeing or mandolins, or race horses, or girls, or tennis. That makes 'em fine for work."

DEATH OF E. J. HODGSON

John Brecken, Charlottetown, and she predeceased him. No children were born to them. In November, 1910, after having been Judge for nineteen years, he tendered his resignation and retired on superannuation. For many years he was Law Agent for the Dominion Government. He was a fluent speaker and possessed of great versatility. He was a close personal friend of Sir John A. Macdonald, who on several occasions was the guest of Judge Hodgson in this city. The remains will be removed to St. Peter's Church today, and may be viewed there between the hours of three and five p. m. The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning, with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 7.45, and the burial office at 9.30. Mr. Hodgson has left strict instructions to his executors that no floral designs are to be used at his funeral, as he intensely disliked the custom. This does not include bouquets of flowers which may be sent to the hospitals instead of being allowed to decay on the grave.

A BAD HABIT.

Gibbs—What an aggravating habit Jones has of answering a question by asking another. Dibbs—Yes, I've noticed that. Last night I asked him if he'd loan me $5, and he replied by asking me if I took him for a darned fool.

HOW COULD SHE?

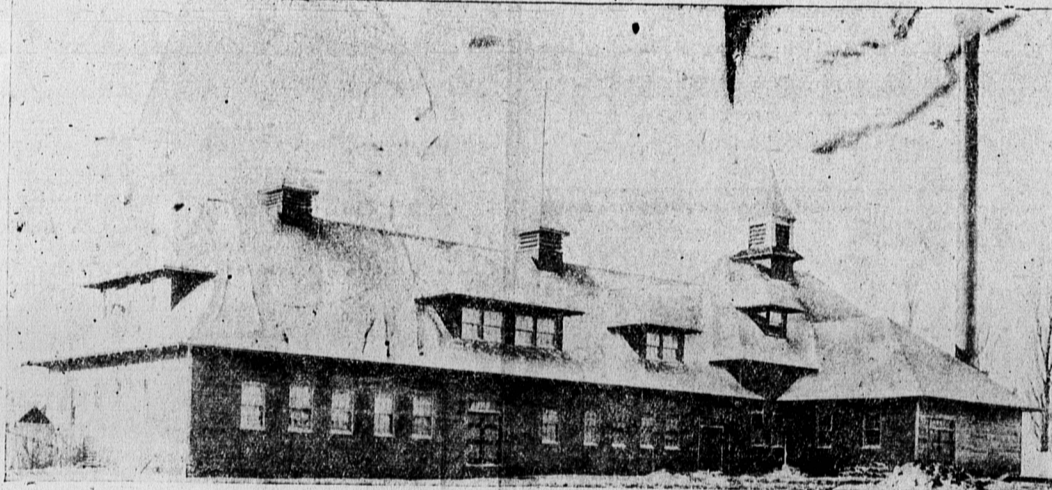

Mrs. Holmes—Mrs. Bangs threw a saucepan at her husband because he sat on her new hat. I could never do a thing like that. Mr. Holmes—Ah, no! Because you love me so dearly, pet? Mrs. Holmes—No, because I haven't a new hat.

THE REBUKE COURTEOUS.

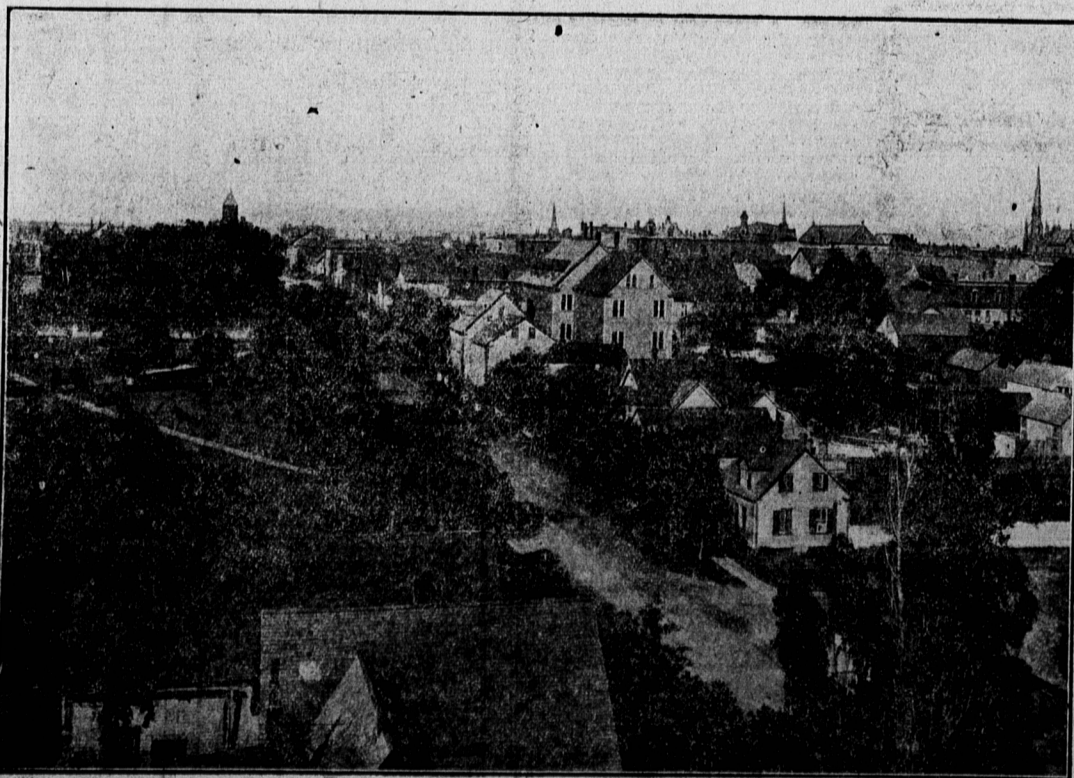

Jones—I say, I heard an awfully funny thing the other day. (Proceeds to recite mild and mildewed chestnut at great length.) Jim—Ah! That reminds me of a man I once met in Nyanaland. Jones—(without interest)—What about him? Jim—Oh, nothing; only he'd never heard that story of yours before.

tion of fever round about, the millions evidently accounting for the mosquito larvae. It should be added that near Frankfort, in Germany, there has been discovered another small fish called the "blue-eyed," which feeds on mosquito larvae. At the request of the Italian government consignments of them have been sent to the Campagna, where malarial fever is a scourge. The British authorities have suggested that these useful fish be given a trial in the malarial districts of Africa. Some specimens have been taken to England and imported into malarial districts with happy results.
