

BROADCASTING THURSDAY EVENING

Rev. A. A. MacLeod, Field Secretary and Organizer P. E. I. Temperance Alliance, will speak on THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR from Station CFCY, Charlottetown, Thursday, at 7:30 P.M. Tune in.

Many Attempts will be Made To Misrepresent Premier Stewart's Policy for Better Temperance Legislation

When Premier Stewart first announced his policy for Government control and an improved Temperance Law he said that if his words were not written down in black and white they were sure to be misrepresented. So he read the statement which he had carefully prepared beforehand.

PREMIER STEWART SAID:

"The intent of the Prohibition Act is that no person in this Province shall consume any alcoholic liquid except for medical purposes. We naturally ask ourselves the question, has the Act accomplished its purpose? If it has, there can be no fault found."

"I am thoroughly in accord with the teaching in our homes and schools of the results of research work disclosing the nature and effect of injurious practices both of eating and drinking. I will not assert that this Act during the time it has been in force has not accomplished good work. I am simply asking myself—has this Act, during the time it has been in force brought the people of this Province appreciably nearer the intended goal—the banishment of intoxicating liquor as a beverage? After very careful and close observation taken from what might be termed a vantage point; after long and impartial consideration, so far as I am concerned, I am driven to answer the question in the negative."

AND PREMIER STEWART SAID AGAIN:

"I have been asked by very many people—Are you going to adopt a wet or dry policy? There could not be a greater misnomer. I do not know of any public man in this Province who would advocate a wet-policy. I am putting forward what I really and sincerely believe to be a more practicable and workable temperance law, a law which by placing faith and confidence in the great body of our people, invites their co-operation for a better enforcement."

"Surely no one will contend that we have or have had a dry condition in this Province. I do not suggest that the proposed change will bring about a condition of universal total abstinence but I do believe that it will result in a better situation and that it will prevent from getting liquor, those who misuse it."

"Let me repeat emphatically, this is not a change towards temperance. It is not a liquor law. It is a law which by recognizing and attempting to deal with conditions as we have them, will make for greater law observance, temperance and sobriety."

PREVENTING ATTACKS OF EPILEPSY

I have spoken before about the relationship that seems to exist between the intestine and epilepsy.

I spoke of one physician who had been able to keep a patient free from these epileptic attacks for a period of fifteen months, by the simple method of washing out his stomach twice weekly.

Also that one hospital reported the "cure" of 55 cases by the surgical removal of a portion of the large intestine. The subsequent history was that many of these cases, after months or years, began to have attacks again.

From London comes a report of some severe cases that were cured by the removal of a part of intestine, always including the appendix.

But the operations were performed less than two years ago. However one of the points learned from these cases is that the majority showed a "dropping" of the intestine.

What does this mean? That at the lowest hanging portion of a loop of intestine there is likely to be almost a stoppage of the movement of the intestinal contents.

This is called stasis. Now although epilepsy is a brain ailment, some one has well said that stasis, constipation, is the match that starts the fire and brings on the attacks.

No one has yet been able to tell the exact cause of epilepsy, and no cure has yet been discovered although certain drugs do lessen the number and severity of the attacks.

However when we remember that operations which shorten the length of the large intestine (which is the reservoir of the waste matter of the body), have had a beneficial effect in nearly every case for a time at least, it is certainly worth thinking about.

What is the suggestion? That wearing an abdominal belt which would help to hold the intestines up in position, together with abdominal exercises such as bending and twisting, should prevent the dropping of the intestine, with the stasis or stoppage at lowest hanging portion of the loop.

It is almost magic the way IRONIZED YEAST transforms thin, run down, pasty-faced folks into well-filled-out, clear-skinned, vigorous people. Those who have been benefited could tell you for their letters tell us how a one course treatment of IRONIZED YEAST gave 5 to 15 pounds of firm flesh, cleared the skin, improved digestion and bowel action. He did not hear the songs of birds, The whisper of the trees; The yellow fields, the surging streams He was not one with these. He did not pause to watch, enthralled, The skies of gold and blue, The yellow dawns were but the sign To rise and toil anew.

Yet in the twilight of his years He often sighed and dreamed The gold that he had garnered up Was not the thing it seemed. It had not brought him joy, nor love, nor brought content! Too late, he found that life had passed, And that his youth was spent.

Night Life On The Broad Atlantic (By British United Press)

PARIS, April 20. —Because London and New York are showing hesitation in coming to Montmartre, Montmartre is going to London and New York—once a week, as far as America is concerned, and sometimes more frequently.

The directors of the French line of steamers from Havre to New York have arranged that in certain of their ships the bars must be closed down at eleven o'clock every night, and that at midnight "Montmartre" opens.

The Atlantic branch of "Montmartre" is a saloon gaily decorated with coloured paper streamers and all the usual fittings of a Montmartre cabaret. Champagne only is served, but the price—fifty francs a bottle—is certainly less than many of the real Montmartre cabarets charge.

That Disgusting Sniffle—You Have Catarrh Tells How to Stop Hawking and Spitting, and Drive Out Catarrhal Colds.

Thousands testify every year that nothing will help the throat like Catarrhzone. Mr. Everett L. Wasman, of Connellspport, writes:—"About five years ago I took a cold in the head, and Catarrh set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to use some medicine. After trying several things I heard of "Catarrhzone," and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhzone to all who have Catarrh, etc."

Satisfaction is guaranteed to all who use Catarrhzone. Get it from your druggist. Two months treatment, one dollar; small size, 50c.

MADAME LA TOUR The story of Madame La Tour is one of the most colorful and romantic in the annals of Acadia. That story is too long to tell here, but in the pages of Parkman and in the little book of Mabel Burkholder in the Ryerson Canadian History Readers, may be read the tale of her heroism and her tragic end amid the tangled rivalries that distracted those early years of maritime Canada. Charles de La Tour, her husband, had built a fort and trading post at the mouth of the St. John River, in the present province of New Brunswick. His claim to possession of this territory was disputed by a rival trader, De Charnisay. Each had secured grants of land and the monopoly of trade with the Indians from the French crown, and the situation was complicated by the overlapping of their domains, the intrigues of their respective supporters at the French court, and the claim of England to the territory involved. The conflict continued for years, with alternate successes and defeats for each party. In the spring of 1645 La Tour went to Boston to beg aid from Massachusetts against his rival, in exchange for a share in his trade and territory. He left his wife in charge of the fort, which was defended by a garrison of only fifty men. Charnisay, hearing of this, attacked the post. In the first encounter, Madame La Tour beat him off with the loss of 20 men killed and 13 wounded. Reinforced, he again attacked. Inspired by Madame La Tour, the defenders held out against repeated assaults, night and day, until toward evening of the fourth day, Easter Sunday, De Charnisay's men succeeded in making a breach in the palisade and entered the fort. After further desperate resistance, Madame La Tour finally surrendered, on promise that the lives of her men should be spared. De Charnisay broke faith and hanged all the survivors except one man, whom he allowed to live on condition of acting as hangman to his companions, and Madame La Tour, who was compelled to witness their execution with a rope round her own neck. Broken-hearted, she fell ill, and died within three weeks of the surrender. Somewhere within the precincts of the present city of St. John probably rests the body of the heroine of Fort La Tour. The picture gives an idea of the arms and costumes of the period. At close quarters the fight probably was carried on with pistols, swords and 16-foot pikes. Some of the combatants would wear steel helmets and breastplates, while others would be clad in wide skirted coats of buff leather, without sleeves. Madame La Tour's costume doubtless would consist of a close-fitting bodice tapering to the waist, with short
