WOMEN'S WAR SERVICE REGISTRATION-Advice has been received that Miss Margaret P. Hyndman, K.C., of Toronto, will arrive in Charlottetown in a few days in connection with the work of the Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women for war service. This organization was commenced before war was declared, and it has done an extraordinary amount of work, not only in getting the women of the country registered for emergency and war work, but also in influencing the policy of the government. Miss Hyndman is a member of the legal profession of Ontario, and has been in the Bar in 1926 and is a member of the well-known firm of Weir, Hyndman and Kemp. Miss Hyndman's effort in organizing the women of this province for registration and war service will be welcomed and appreciated.

PERSONALS Mrs. John Lappin left yesterday on return to her home in Sydney after a visit to friends and relatives in this city.

Mrs. D. D. Scannell of Jamaica Plain, Mass., arrived in Charlottetown last night via plane from Moncton to spend a few days at her old home in Georgetown. She will leave on return next Wednesday.

STOP ARMING JAPAN Mr. Caldwell's demand, in Parliament that Canada stop arming Japan against Great Britain is one with which many people will have the greatest sympathy. There has been a great source of uneasiness for years that Canada and the United States were both making the same mistake: permitting a flow of scrap iron and other material to Japan and thus assisting a dangerous aggressor nation.

Sympathies generally have been with China rather than Japan, but possible the assistance has made the violence of Japanese operations against the Chinese. The United States, despite all sorts of Administration effort, has been a great source of supply for Japan, sending metal, aircraft, machine guns, and other materials overseas. Unhappily, considerable supplies have been flowing from Canada as well.

Today that flow of supplies appears more alarming than ever. Japan is showing increasing signs of arrogance towards Great Britain. Like the Italian, Japan is ready to spring on Great Britain when she thinks the British are fully engaged with attackers elsewhere. Should Japan attack, or attempt to take any advantage of British difficulties it would be a sorry thing to find that large quantities of her war material were of Canadian origin.

OTTAWA, Aug. 2-(CP)-Canada's artistic "book of remembrance," listing in gold writing the names of the Canadian forces who died during the last war, will be completed by March 31, 1941, Defence Minister Ralston said today in the House of Commons. A sum of $6,500 has been set aside in this year's estimates for the work.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 2-(CP)-Construction of new elevators and annexes was being rushed all over the western Canada wheat belt as the new crop year opened today. Bancroft has a population of little more than 900.

OTTAWA, Aug. 2-(CP)-Prospects of extension of operations of the farmers' creditors arrangement in Manitoba, appeared slim tonight at Senator John Haig (Con. Manitoba) reported to the Senate that its conferees had been unable to reach an agreement with a House committee on the bill to amend the act. House and Senate failed to agree upon a Senate amendment which would have permitted appeal to courts of appeal in all three prairie provinces from the decisions of boards of review. The act is now in force in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 2-(AP)-Governor Herbert H. Lehman, saying "we have no time to lose in preparing ourselves," created today a state council of national defence in an unprecedented peace time move. CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 2-Performance watched by 2,000 spectators proved fatal for two men today in a demolition contest. Goering is reputed to have the most elaborate wardrobe of any man in the Reich.

Today he appeared in his new regalia. On his golden knotted epaulettes of his Reichsmarschal's uniform he wore a burlesque spread eagle clutching the Swastika, imposed on the crossed gold batons of his former rank of air marshal.

In place of the ordinary field marshal's baton, now carried by a dozen other men, the Reichsmarschal will have an exclusive swastika-tipped orb.

Awakened Woman

By Elinore Barry

CHAPTER I

Even before she opened her eyes, Joyce was aware of being in a strange place. For the moment, however, she was too drowsy to make any effort to move. A dull ache throbbled in her head. A Her whole body felt heavy, weighed down by an insistent lassitude.

Then other sensations asserted themselves. Her fingers, moving languidly, sent her drowsy brain the message of some sort of cool silken material under their sensitive tips.

She kept her eyes shut while she tried to think things out. She remembered an exactly how she was in a taxi going to the Hotel Blackstone in Chicago. It was sleeping and in the traffic another machine skidded suddenly and crashed into them.

And then they had brought her where? It didn't smell in the least like a hospital. And the bed was softer than any cot she had ever felt. Suddenly she was afraid to open her eyes. Completely awake now, she lay tingling with curiosity, filled at the same time with a foreboding of some strange, frightening revelation to come.

Where could she be? At last she could stand the uncertainty no longer. Without thought she opened her eyes and stared straight ahead of her. Her first look showed a cluster of large oranges hanging like golden balls in the sun, shine against a background of cloudless blue sky.

Oranges! She had never seen oranges actually growing. Still, without moving she rolled her eyes from one side to the other. They traveled up the bed to her hands, lying inert on the satin cover. Suddenly she became aware of their significance that they set her heart to pumping and paralyzed her muscles.

She could never tell which shook her was the first to register the circle of tiny diamonds on the third finger of her left hand; the rumpled condition of the other side of the bed; or the cheerful masculine whistling coming from somewhere in the house close behind her!

A hot wave flooded her face and neck. But gradually her heart quieted down. She relaxed, and tried to bring her whirling brain back to normal. "It's the most incredible thing I've ever heard of," she thought, desperately, fighting against a feeling of faintness. "It must be a dream! ... I land in Chicago in November; get in a taxi and, snowy afternoon; get in a taxi and, snowy something bumps into the taxi and I wake up the next morning and find that it's summertime, and that I'm married!"

How could it have happened? The whistle seemed to come a little nearer. Joyce clutched at the bedclothes in a sudden panic of terror. If it were not a dream now, this instant, then what had happened while she was unconscious?

Suddenly a telephone bell rang. The whistling stopped abruptly. She heard the click of the receiver being lifted. Then "Yes" in a deep, pleasant voice. She listened tensely. "Oh, Laurine? Hello! ... She's still asleep, I think. No, Doc says it's nothing serious, but it sure was lucky I wasn't worse. What? ... Yes, I asked her last month not to ride that brute, but you know how she is. ... I'm leaving in a few minutes. ... Come over sometime today and see how she is, will you? I hate to go off like this but I'm just going to have time to make the date. It's some thing I can't sidestep. ... Yeah? Well, tell Paul to be a good boy while I'm away. So long, Laurine. See you all in 'bout two-three weeks."

Click. Steps across the floor. The sound of steps approaching the bed sent her pulse hammering. Curiosity and fear mingled in her feelings as she looked up. She was so frightened that it did not occur to her to pretend to be asleep.

She saw a man, who might be thirty, thirty-five, ruddy, blue eyes and blue tie. ... tan face and tan suit. ... light brown hair, combed back smoothly. ... rather wide across the jaw, short nose. ... mouth cut in clean curves like a girl's.

Nothing villainous in the man's appearance. "Hello, honey! How do you feel this morning?" He was smiling down at her with complete kindness.

Joyce swallowed hard, unable to answer. Under the sheet she clenched her hands trying to still the trembling of her body. A worried look dimmed the smile on the man's face. He sat down on the side of the bed and leaned toward her, putting his hands on her shoulders.

"Why, what's the matter, dear? Head pretty bad? Oh, I say, did I hurt you? You poor kid!"

He drew back a little. Joyce had involuntarily flinched when his hands touched her. The thought flashed into Joyce's confused mind that if he fancied she was a child, he might after all not go away. And she might have time to recover from the shock and decide what to do. She must be left alone. She would have to speak; everything depended on her making this effort.

"Oh, I'm all right," she stammered hardly above a whisper. A look of relief came into the man's face above her head. "You're not a scare, Frills," he exclaimed. "Sure you're all right? Doc's coming over today to take another look at you. Better stay in bed and get a rest. If you're really all right, I got to dash to the city to get my train for Chicago. But I won't go if you're not. You don't seem just right."

"Oh, no, really, I'm all right," she said hastily. "I just have a headache. It'll be all right."

"You're sure? Goodbye, honey. Take care of yourself. You can always reach me at the Blackstone, you know. I'll expect to hear from you."

He leaned over her face and kissed her. After he had kissed her twice, while Joyce tried furiously to recall the bush she felt burning her face, he added hesitatingly, "Look here, Frills, I wish you'd go a little easy while I'm away, will you. I'll be worried about you all the time. I think you're pulling any more reckless stunts, you know. And."

"Oh, no, don't worry about me!" Interrupted Joyce, wishing he would stop kissing her and go away. "I'm going to feel like being very quiet for a while."

This sort of answer was evidently unexpected. Joyce decided with an unexpected surprise in his face mingled with relief. In speaking before, his voice had revealed a note of apprehension, as if he were afraid of the way his words would be received. "What sort of disposition can I have had?" she wondered. "He said once more, and kissing me again, he stood up, 'I've got to hop off, I'll wire today from somewhere along the line.'"

Joyce lay and listened to his steps receding inside the house. Then she drew a long breath and sat up suddenly. "So that's my ... my husband! He has a very nice voice, and I don't feel exactly afraid of him. I think he's got a - a kind, pleasant look on his face."

What did it mean? Gradually her sense of dizzy panic gave way to puzzled curiosity. Lying there in the sweet scented sunshine her mind grew clearer and she tried to fathom the situation unemotionally. But it was no use; the pieces didn't fit; she had nothing to go on.
