—MODERN IMPROVEMENTS FOR HISTORIC VILLAGE — The old and historic village of St. Eleanors, once the county town of Prince County has taken on a modern aspect in the past few weeks. A new paved highway has been laid down, being a continuation of the highway from Summerside and extends right through to Miscouche. The electric light line from Summerside now extends to St. Eleanors, brightening up the old cross roads at St. Eleanors corner. The village could now be classed as a suburb of Summerside and with the general movement of town's people to residences a little further out St. Eleanors will no doubt grow and once again become a lively centre. It was not so long ago that St. Eleanors was the centre of activity for Prince County with shipbuilding going on and the village humming with business of one kind and another. The Court House was situated near the cross roads and on court days there was a lively stir in the village. St. Eleanor's Hall, A profusion of flowers and Japanese umbrellas made a pretty effect. The tea tables laden with good things were set under the trees and as the weather man held off the rain everyone had a good time, in the evening dancing was enjoyed by young and old. Mrs. Crosby received some pretty compliments on the success of the affair and particularly on her lovely flowers.—S

—WEDDING BELLS — A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Peters Church, Freeland, on Tuesday evening, August 30th at 5 o'clock, when Miss Jean Armstrong Rayner, daughter of the late Armstrong Rayner and Mrs. Nelson Palmer of Conway, became the bride of Ray Clarence Dystant son of Mrs. Dystant of Ellerslie and the late Walter Dystant. Rev. A. H. Hart Davis, rector, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large congregation of relatives and friends. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion by the girl friends of the bride, the bridal party standing under an arch of late summer flowers and ferns. The ushers were Messrs. Eldon Grigg and Walter MacNevin. Miss Amy Bryan played the wedding music, while the choir sang appropriate hymns. Mr. Erland Ramsay of Conway sang very sweetly, during the signing of the register, "O Promise Me." The bride was very charming in a navy blue tailored suit with navy hat and accessories, with a corsage bouquet of American beauty roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Eldon Grigg. The groom was supported by his brother, Wilfred Dystant of Halifax. After the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's mother for about 75 invited guests. Previous to her marriage the bride was given a shower in the hall at Conway, when she received many lovely things from a large circle of relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Dystant will make their home in Ellerslie. The Guardian joins their many friends in heartiest congratulations.—S

Newspapermen Are Guests At Expo

TORONTO, Sept. 2—(CP)—Freedom for the press was the Canadian National Exhibition's theme today as members of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association, other journalist and reporters were guests of the fair. Press badges—for once—were good at most of the pay-as-you-enter attractions.

W. F. Prendergast, oil company executive and former newspaperman, told luncheon guests of the C. N. E. directors they must use fair policies if they were to protect their freedom of the press. "You might do more harm with one false news report or one unfair editorial than you could do with the most powerful firearm that you could conceal about your persons," he warned.

The Fair's usual attractions continued to hold sway on press day with amateur and professional champion sculling races holding the sports spotlight. In the livestock show judging of dairy cattle concluded and sheep and swine competitions started. A show of poultry and pet stock opened in the coliseum.

To Honor Memory Of French Explorer

WINNIPEG, Sept. 2—(CP)—Government and civc representatives joined today with distinguished visitors in preparing for the weekend celebrations marking the 200th anniversary of the arrival of the famous French explorer and fur trader, La Verendrye, at the forks of the Assiniboine and Red rivers.

A pageant depicting the scenes of the days of La Verendrye with 70 singers, dancers and musicians will be held a the civic auditorium Saturday night. On Monday a giant parade of floats and bands will be held with an old-time fair and buffalo barbecue in the grounds in St. Boniface, twin city of Winnipeg at the forks of the Assiniboine and Red.

Need Financial Assistance To Assure Race

HALIFAX, Sept. 2—(CP)—Financial problems tonight cast a shadow across Nova Scotia preparations for the international schooner races off Boston next month after Captain Angus Walters of Lunenburg, N. S., skipper of the champion Bluenose, said he had abandoned attempts to obtain a grant from the Provincial Government.

"The Government thought enough of her to put her picture on a coin and a stamp, and on the floor of the federal building in Halifax," Captain Walters said over a cigar which suffered much in the monologue. "Hasn't she advertised the province enough in her time to deserve a little assistance?"

"Bluenose has got some engines in her," the skipper continued before a press conference which assumed the aspects of a public meeting as Captain Walters delivery trickled through the shrouds of his graceful schooner. "If the engines don't come out of her, I'd rather see another man race her and stay ashore myself. They weigh her down three inches in the stern, and she was never any good with ballast in the bow."

Price of installation and removal of the vessel's twin diesels was placel at about $1,500. Grants of $2,500 from the Dominion Government and $8,000 from the United States organization sponsoring the races were already spent on repairs to the hull, new rigging and canvas.

"Now it's up to the public. If they want to see her race with those engines in her hull, all right. If they don't, it's up to them," he said. "I think we have a 100 per cent better chance of winning if we have the engines out."

Gertrude L. Thebaud, Bluenose's rival from Gloucester, Mass., also carried an engine, but it is a single unit placed low down in the hull, while Bluenose's twin installation is far enough out on each side to make its weight felt when she keels over.

Farm And Fishery

deserved to lose its protection. When he was in a position to direct so, any industry that practiced exploitation would have its tariff taken off.

Price Control Needed

Dr. Manion also touched new ground when he declared in favor of "something in the way of price control" to reduce the spread between what farmers and other primary producers received for their products and what the Canadian consumer pays.

"In the past we have had to bring about more efficient production by research", said Dr. Manion, "but now I believe that what we require is not only the market for our goods, but fair prices and something in the way of stability of prices.

"There are far too great spreads in prices and there is far too great a spread between the producer and consumers, not only on land but also among the fishermen. There is injury to both the producer and consumer in that condition."

Reform of the capitalistic system under democracy was his policy said the leader. That was the middle-of-the-road course between reactionaries who would stand still and the doctrines of Communists and Fascists who would destroy economic and political liberties in the pursuit of their economic illusions.

"I believe in evolution, not revolution. I want to reform this system."

Great Britain after 80 years of free trade abandoned it in favor of a protective tariff, said Dr. Manion. Today she was one of the most highly protected nations in the world "with great advantage to herself."

Protection gave work and wages to Canadians. It diversified opportunity for urban workers. To farmers it gave assured markets in the urban centres near them. Ninety per cent of Canada's agricultural products, excluding wheat, were consumed in Canada and such a market deserved protection.

The Main Object

"The main object of protection is not to raise the prices of protected goods but to hold the market," he said. "If it raises the price too high, it seems to me that is proof that the industry producing the goods so affected is not a fit one for protection.

There were few free traders in Canada. No political party ever showed any faith in it by practicing it "although one talks about it when it is out of office, but never puts it into practice when it has the opportunity."

"There are times I feel that in this Canada of ours we should adopt the compulsory vote," said Dr. Manion. Difficulties of organization made a leader's task hard. If there were corruption in elections, it would be lessened by the compulsory vote though Dr. Manion did not believe corruption is as widespread as sometimes it is said to be.

The seeking for self-sufficiency by the nations had set up a world conflict of races, classes and economic units, said Dr. Manion. He feared for the future of the white races if their present madness of hostility to each other continued. Envious eyes are cast on Canada.

"This is a fearful picture when you look around the world today," he declared. Democracy was on top only in the English speaking nations, France and a few smaller countries.

People today saw hungry and ill-clad citizens. They knew war put productive and destructive machinery in top gear and wondered why peace couldn't do the same thing. It was his aim as leader of the National Conservative party to bring fulfillment of the people's hope for security and comfort.

No Hope For Reactionaries

"We should in these days of christianity and democracy practice more the teachings of both," he said.

Canada has her laissez-faire reactionaries, smug in their complacency who wanted the Conservative Party to stand still. On the other extreme were Fascists and Communists who would smash the whole economic and political system. Jails and exile would replace freedom of speech and assembly.

"I want to take the middle road of reform to preserve what is good in this system and throw away what is bad," he said. "I believe in evolution not revolution. I want to reform this system." Dr. Manion insisted that was the true Conservative attitude. Times changed and men must change with them.

Anxious For Reform

At least half Canada's industrialists were anxious for reform in the economic system to give fairer play to the workers. The other half must be brought to realize it.

"If we are going to maintain Canada as part of the British Commonwealth, maintain our liberties and out political system, we must begin by stamping out unemployment, by removing this fear psychology. That gives rise to Communism and other 'isms," he said.

In taking on that aim, the Conservative Party could well be called the people's party. Work and wages for the people and opportunity for youth must be achieved. They would take long, but they must come about.

Forty years ago a youth in Canada had a better chance than one today. Ills then were material and physical. Today they are mental. Many youths are demoralized and depressed by unemployment. Thrift and energy are no guarantee of the future of today's youth.

"Forty years ago a youth was almost sure he could get ahead. Today he cannot even get work."

Dr. Manion believed 90 per cent of the unemployed wanted nothing more than an opportunity to gain a decent living.

Agriculture is the basic industry of Canada's national progress, said Dr. Manion. Britain ruined her agriculture in 1840 by free trade and has suffered ever since. Today Canada's rural population was decreasing. The independence, pride and security of the farmers was not as attractive as it once was.

"I regret I couldn't induce one of my own three sons to go on the farm," he said. Even today men would meet no greater hardship than did their forbears in hewing farms from the wilderness.

The Primary Aim

A primary aim of national policy should be every reasonable assistance possible to agriculture.

"What we require is not only markets, but fair prices and something in the way of stability in prices," he said. The producer-consumer price spread should be lessened.

"I believe there should be something in the way of a price control to reduce that spread." Dr. Manion asserted.

The National Conservative Convention revitalized the party, said Dr. Manion. Youth had played a big part in it and today's youth was an informed section of the public.

"My best information today is that the party is on its toes as it has not been since 1929," said Dr. Manion.

"I want to express to you my very deep appreciation of the magnificent support which I received from the delegates frm Prince Edward Island at the National Conservative Convention." Dr. Manion said. While I got many votes from all the Provinces, I do believe sincerely that the most solid vote I received was from the Province of Prince Edward Island and I am very proud of it." he declared amid enthusiastic applause.

PRACTICALITY

"Did you hear? The vicar's wife is getting up a dance for the aged poor," said Mrs. Frimpson. "Bah! she ought to have more sense," Mrs. Jones replied. "She ought to know a good feed would be more suitable for 'em!"

HEARS REPORT

eye left observers guessing today what would be the consequences of the conference between the Reichsfuehrer and his Sudeten German lieutenant.

Yesterday Field Marshal Goering Propaganda Minister Goebbels and Rudolf Hess, deputy Nazi Party leader, joined in the Hitler-Henlein conference. Today's meeting was exclusively Hitler's and Henlein's.

The threads of British interest in mediating a solution of the German-Czechoslovak quarrel met in Berchtesgaden.

Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, who saw British Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson yesterday at Sonnerberg, visited Berghof briefly, then left by air for Berlin. He had said he intended to stay at Berchtesgaden four or five days for mountain climbing.

Sir Nevile had seen the Foreign Minister fresh from London where last Tuesday the British Cabinet was believed to have drafted a message of caution to the Berlin Government or to Hitler personally.

ISSUE COMMUNIQUE

The communique on Henlein's visit said:

"Henlein came upon the wish of Viscount Runciman (unofficial British mediator in the crisis) to give the Fuehrer a report on the present status of the negotiations with the Praha Government.

"The Fuehrer took cognizance with interest of the explanation. There resulted a complete accord in their judgment of the situation.

"Konrad Henlein left Berghof this afternoon after talking with the Fuehrer."

Visits Coincided

Von Ribbentrop and Henlein were at Berghof at the same time but the Foreign Minister was not called into the conference between Hitler and Henlein.

The whole tenor of the German press indicated that Hitler had no intention to compromise with the Praha Government in the minority dispute.

Compromise would mean only a temporary solution, it was said, and it would hold up the possibility of friendship negotiations with Great Britain and France.

As one Nazi commentator, usually excellently informed, stated "There are enough problems to talk over with Britain and France. We do not want to see Europe in a continuous state of turmoil. There is much room for fruitful discussion with Britain and France.

"But wherever we turn the Czech problem stares us in the face. This cannot endure forever. There are more important issues than Czechoslovakia."

same type of planes—bombers.

Mr. Drury, who is president of the plane-making Canadian Car and Foundry Company, said the company's directors were not yet in a position to estimate the amount of the British Government's original orders. That would be decided, he said, in London.

In addition to the company itself, Mr. Drury said, the plan contemplates the setting-up of a board to maintain liaison between the Canadian organization and the British Government. Members of this board will be Sir Charles Gordon, president of the Bank of Montreal; Morris W. Wilson, President of the Royal Bank of Canada, and A. B. Purvis, President of Canadian Industries Limited. All are from Montreal.

Directors of the company, Mr. Drury said, will include:

L. J. Belnap, Montreal, president of the Consolidated Paper Company;

George Cottrelle, Toronto, a director of the Canadian Bank of Commerce;

R. J. Magor, Montreal, president of National Steel Company;

Hubert Pasmore, Montreal, president of Fairchild Aircraft;

Capt. W. J. Sanderson, Toronto, president of Fleet Aircraft;

W. H. McIntyre, Ottawa, vice-president of Ottawa Car Manufacturing Company.

One other director will make up the nine, but Mr. Drury said he had not yet been chosen definitely.
