FORTUNE'S FOOL

BY RAFAEL SABATINI
ILLUSTRATED BY R. W. SATTERFIELD

© RAFAEL SABATINI 1923. RELEASED BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

"Well, well," he said at length, having consulted an entry. "The English Lass is fitting at Portsmouth for the voyage, and should be ready, I am informed, in two weeks from now. But there are ever delays at present, and it is odds that in no case would she be ready in less than three weeks. I'll see to it that she is not ready under a month."

Impetuously the Colonel held out both hands to the Duke.

"What a friend you are!" he cried.

Albermarle wrung them hard.

"You're damnably like your father, God rest him!" said he. Then, almost brusquely: "Away with you, now, and good-luck to you. I'll not ask you to stay to see her grace at present, since you're pressed. You shall kiss her hands before you sail. Be off!"

Holles took his leave. At the door he suddenly checked, and, turning displayed a rueful countenance.

"Although I have the Kings commission in my pocket and hold an important office in his service, I haven't a shilling in the world," he said. "Not a shilling."

Albermarle responded instantly by producing a purse from which he counted twenty pounds. There was no sign of parsimonious reluctance about his offer now.

"As a loan, of course," said Holles, gathering up the yellow coins.

"No, no," Albermarle corrected him. "An advance. Take no further thought for it. The Treasury shall refund me the money at once."

CHAPTER XXIX

The Miracle

Away from Whitehall, where the ground was green with thriving glass, when Colonel Holles at speed. He sat his face toward Islington once more, and swung along with great strides, carrying in his breast a heart more blithe than he had known for many a year. Blind and deaf to all about him, his mind sped ahead of his limbs to the goal for which he made.

It was four weeks since he had seen Nancy, and those in that house of rest where he had spent the period of his sequestration could tell him nothing of her since they held no direct intercourse with those who had their being in the pest-houses. In a month much may betide. Evil might have befallen her, or she might have departed thence.

You conceive, then, the dread anxiety in which he came, breathless, hot, and weary from the speed he had made, to the open fields and at last of the stout, spiked gates of that pleasant homestead that had been put to the uses of a lazaret. Here a stern and surly guardian denied him passage.

"You cannot enter, sir. What do you seek?"

"Happiness, my friend," said the Colonel, completing the other's conviction that he was mad. But his demand that the gate should be unbarred for him held an authority that was not lightly to be denied.

"You understand, sir," the gatekeeper asked him, "that, once you enter here, you may not go back whence you come for twenty-eight days, at least?"

"I understand," said Holles, "and I come prepared to pay the price."

The gatekeeper shrugged. "Ye're warned," he said, and raised the bar, thus removing, as he thought, all obstacles that kept a fool from his folly.

Colonel Holles entered. The gates clashed behind him, and he took his way briskly, almost at a run, down the long avenue in the dappled shade of the beech trees and elms that bordered it, making straight for the nearest of the red-brick outhouses, which was the one which he himself had occupied during his sickness.

A broadly built, elderly woman perceived his approach from the doorway, and, after staring at him a moment in surprise and consternation, started forward to meet him, calling to him to stand. But he came on heedless and breathless until they weer face to face.

"How come you in, you foolish man?" she cried.

"You don't know me, Mrs. Barlow?" he asked her.

"Save us! It's Colonel Holles!" And almost without pause she went on in a voice of distress: "But you were to have left the house of rset today. Whatever can have brought you back here to undo all again."

Reprehensible Action of Minister Of Agriculture

WHO STEALS MY GOOD NAME

Those who know Dr. F. Torrance, and those who know W. R. Motherwell, will know how to regard the inuendoes against the former indulged in by the latter in Parliament on Friday. Those who know Dr. Torrance know him as a gentleman of culture, as a splendid type of Canadian citizen, as a public official who has rendered fine service to the country. But the wrong and the harm about what W. R. Motherwell said in Parliament Friday night is that there are hundreds of thousands of Canadians who don't know Mr. Motherwell and who don't know Dr. Torrance. With these, the words of a man who is Minister of Agriculture will carry a weight to which, in reality, they are not entitled; with the consequence that a stigma is attached to an honorable name in a way that is outrageous, and which disgraces Parliament.

One hesitates to know what to say of a man who, shielding himself behind the privilege of Parliament, uses an anonymous letter to assassinate the character of another. Or perhaps it would be better to say that one would hesitate to know what to say if one didn't know the characteristics of Mr. W. R. Motherwell. But the disgraceful attack made upon Dr. Torrance reflects upon more than Mr. Motherwell: it reflects upon Parliament. The House of Commons ought to be jealous of its privileges and its honor: it will abuse those privileges and it will besmirch that honor if it permits Mr. Motherwell's conduct to go unrebuked and unchallenged.

About a month ago a Member of the British House of Lords—a Conservative Peer—made a similar attack upon Sir Alfred Cope, a British Civil Servant. It was an attack without foundation in evidence; and immediately Lord Curzon and Lord Birkenhead, Conservative colleagues of the offending peer, served notice upon him that unless he was prepared to give proof of his assertions and repeat them outside the privilege of Parliament, the honor of the House of Lords demanded that he withdraw what he had said. An apology immediately followed.

Dr. Torrance, an able official, has been deprived of his post in the public service and subjected to disgraceful attack upon the basis of that most cowardly of things, an anonymous letter. In addition, his character has been assailed by inuendo under the privileges of the Commons, in a most unmanly way.

Parliament owes it to itself to frown upon such a thing. The Journal cannot believe that Premier King, who knows Parliament's traditions, and who respects them, and who, above all is a gentleman, can permit a member of his Ministry to indulge in such conduct. He would do a service to Parliament, and he would repair a grave injustice, if he publicly rebuked Mr. Motherwell, or at least compelled him to take responsibility for or prove the accusations that he has made.—Ottawa Journal.

Maritime Religious Educational Council

The Sydney Record recently records the following item regarding week-day religious education in the North Sydney schools during the past three months.

"Teacher's View"

One of the principals says: "I think it is a great advantage to any school and only wish that it had always been a part of our school work. I wish every school would adopt it." According to another teacher it is helping to correct the idea that religion is to be thought of on Sunday merely, and is encouraging the pupils to practise the principals of Christianity daily. The Sunday School teachers say it helps in their work, and the children are better informed when they meet in their respective Sunday School classes. The teachers are showing a fine spirit in giving their time and services without remuneration, as one teacher states, "We, as teachers, find that it is an opportunity to do something in the 'Master's Service."

There seems to be little doubt that it is the beginning of larger things along the lines of week-day religious education.

A series of district Sunday School Conventions were recently completed in Charlotte County, N. B. These were under the leadership of Rev. Waldo C. Machum held at Hollingdam, St. David's Ridge, St. Stephen, St. George, Maces Bay, Black Harbour, Bocabec and Scotch Ridge. Officers were elected in the various districts as follows:

St. Croix—Dumbarton, Pres. Mrs. Nelson Graham, Rollingdam; Secy-Treas. Mrs. W. E. Armstrong, Waweig; St. Davids, Mrs. Fred Young, Ledge Dufferin and Mrs. Howard Beach, Honeydale; St. Stephen, Geo. W. Boyd and Dr. Percy M. Clarke; St. George, H. V. Dewar and Miss Mabel Seelye, Musquash; Lepreaux, D. H. Mawhinney and Mrs. R. T. Hawhinney, Mace's Bay; Pennfield, A. C. Poole and Mrs. Dan. Justason, Pennfield; St. Patrick, Mrs. M. Hanson; and Mrs. James MacMillan, Bocabec; St. James, Rev. T. H. Whelpley, Scotch Ridge and Mrs. Thos. McMorran Oak Hill

A fine interest was manifested particularly in Missions in the Sunday School, graded Lessons, and Teacher Traning and Religious Education literature, a good supply of which was procured by the workers.

Among those participating in the program were Rev. O. B. Wall of Waweig, Miss Agnes Boyd, St. David's Hill, Pastor J. A. Griffiths, and Rev. A. D. McLeod, Oak Bay, Rev. Geo. Young, Milltown, Rev. W. W. Malcolm, St. Stephen, Rev. E. J. Kerr, St. George, Pastor Gordon Beckett, Pennfield, Rev. T. H. Whelpley, Scotch Ridge and Rev. Levi Jewett, of Oak Hill.

Charlotte County is making a very satisfactory showing to date in its financial support of the M. R. E. C. and will undoubtedly go over the top of its alocation as usual.

WIDE AWAKE MOUNT STEWART STAGES A PRETTY PLAY.

The play "Fisherman's Luck" was staged in The Foresters Hall at Mount Stewart, by The Mount Stewart Athletic Association on the night of May the 9th.

The following were the list of characters:

Tom Manley (a poor fisherman) James Atkin's.

William Farran (alias Squire Hammond,) Frank Jardine.

James Hammond, (Farron's son) Raymond Smallwood.

David Morris (Uncle Davie), Lane Pigot.

Silas Kidder, (stage-struck), Ira Douglass.

Rev. George Medhurst, Ross McCarthy.

Rose Prescott,(Hammond's ward) Edith Pigot.

Mrs. Manley, (Tom's Mother), Ernestine Grant.

Ruth Manley (Tom's sister), Bessie Egan.

Little Nellie (a waif of the ocean) Mamie McIntyre.

Two little girls, Edna Egan, and Helen MacDonald very sweetly acted an Angel scene in the play.

Great credit is due the characters who by their painstaking and strenuous effor,ts caused the play to be a decided success, which was manifested by the hearty applause from an audiance which filled the large hall to its capacity.

Special mention might be made of several of the caste, Miss Pigot, the heroine, Mr. Atkin's as the hero, Mr. Smallwood taking the part of the villain and Mr. Douglass who acted the role of the commedian, all did their parts exceptionally well.

The intermissions were interspersed with songs and step dancing.

After the curtain fell the local auctioneer Mr. Smallwood auctioned the pies and candy. The quick and generous bidding of our boys, who are noted for their liberality on such occasins, made it possible for our President to announce at the last regular meeting of our Association the sum of seventy dollars to reimburse our funds.

The remainder of the evening was spent in tripping the light fantastic to the musical strains of the piano and violin under the capable direction of Messrs. Birt.

It may be in order here to state it is the intention of the Association to organize a tennis club immediately. And with our well known baseball team which has won many hard fought battles in the past and with the present line-up we predict a record second to none of any Island team in the coming season.

It is not too much to conjecture that the pride of our town's-people shall be stirred in the season of 1924 and that they shall unanimously voice the sentiments of the poet in his immortal lines.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own my native land,
While wandering frm a foreign strand.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION TO MISS IRENE COTTON

On the eve of her departure to Skowhegan, Maine, to take up nursing in Hospital in that town she was waited on by her friends at the home of her mother Mrs. Catherine Cotton and presented with a club bag and the following address.

Dear Irene, we, your friends and neighbours, having heard of your departure from our midst to Uncle Same's land, take this opportunity of showing our appreciation of your goodwill in our community.

Whatever the call you were always willing to give of your time and means, and your helpful advice was always beneficial. You have faithfully fulfilled your duties in the home and community in which you live and we know in the new sphere in which you are about to enter you will prove equally successful.

Should we be stricken with any of the ills and afflictions to which mankind is subject we hope in the near future you will be with us to nurse us back to health and strength again. Please accept this gift as a remembrance of your home friends.

BEECHAM'S PILLS
for Sick Headaches

Health and Happiness Are Your Birthright
If you are in less than perfect health—
If you suffer from any of the symptoms detailed below—, then this message brings encouragement and hope to you.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM:

Distress or pain in the pit of the stomach (especially about two hours after eating); Chronic Dyspepsia; Spells of Indigestion; Sour Stomach; Heart Burn; Feeling like a heavy weight drawn around the waist; Difficult, uneasy, distressful, or painful digestion; Biliousness or Bilious Colic Spells; pain in the right side or between or under the shoulder blades; Shifting, Shooting, Biting, Boring, Burning sensations, or pains in right side, or around the waist line below ribs or under shoulder blades. (In some cases pains are felt more in the left side.) Intercostal Neuralgia; spells of sick headache; Colic; Constipation (in a few cases Diarrhoea) Blues; Piles; Yellow, Sallow, Blotched or Itchy Skin; bad complexion; Gas on Stomach or in Bowels; Fermentation of food generating poisonous gases in the Stomach and Bowels, and absorbed through the blood, causing Anaemia, Pallor, Sallow Skin, Poor Blood, loss of memory, energy; Vitality all gone; Gloomy, depressed feeling; irritability; languor; constant desire to sigh; poor circulation; cold hands and feet; gas in Stomach crowding the heart, causing palpitation, fluttering, irregular or nervous heart; bad taste; coated tongue; light or clay colored stools; nervous weakness; general or special debility; dizzy spells; Yellow Jaundice; vertigo; dull, heavy feeling in the head; Sleep sometimes disturbed by dreams or nightmares; Emaciation (although some seem to gain weight. Consequently the old saying among the Doctors, "Fair, Fat, Forty and Gall Stones.")

Most folks who have Gall-Trouble in the earlier stages or later cases of Gall Stones, don't know what ails them, this is owing to the vague and the misleading character of the symptoms. Consequently they spend large amounts of money and take most every kind of medicine they learn of to relieve something they have not got. They doom themselves to one disappointment after another and eventually lose faith in all medicine. They take all kinds of medicine which does them no good because it fails to reach all the Liver-Gall cause of their suffering, misery or distress. Great harm can come from this practice of doctoring symptoms.

Gall-Trouble is hard to recognize because the symptoms are so indirect and misleading; 90% of the people who have Gall Stones do not even suspect it until they have attacks of Gall Stone Colic, and these attacks come on only after the Gall Stone condition has been long present. (Liver trouble that has been long neglected) and in many cases the typical Gall Stone Colic is never experienced as the Gall Stones lie quiet for years, or for life, and never attempt the passage through the Gall Duct. If the Gall Stone condition were sooner treated relief could, of course, be much easier and more quickly accomplished. That is why we urge Liver and Stomach Sufferers to treat themselves NOW. The full story of Marlatt's Specific is told in literature which will be sent to you free on request.
