LADY SOWERSSET ON DIVORCE

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Commenting on the majority report of the divorce commission, which makes divorce easier, Lady Henry Somerset says: "I hold there can be no such thing as a divorce between two people who have been married in a religious sense, and have made vows before God that they will live together for better or for worse."

"It is a very terrible evil, of course for an individual to have to live with another under certain circumstances, but it is a great safeguard for the life of the nation. There is a great mass of unhappiness, misery, and sorrow where the circumstances are such as are made the ground of a demand for further laxity in the marriage tie; but it is a very great evil to open the door any wider, and to lessen the ideal of married life, especially among the poorer people, with whom, on the whole, it has been maintained in a very fine way indeed."

"As to drunkenness," said the lady, "I am afraid it is not decreasing among women. Among men I believe it is, notably among commercial travelers, where one now finds numbers of teetotalers. Certainly among women the drug habit is increasing. But taking the view I do of divorce, temporary separation for a period of a year or two may help us very greatly in our work at Guy's."

"The proposal to permit divorce for 'incurable insanity' is a very serious one. But it is nothing of the kind. A person who is classed as an imbecile can, and very often does, recover his or her self-respect. And the person who recovers can regain control of will and faculties. In some instances of course, the condition is so bad that the brain is impaired, and then the case has to be treated as one of insanity."

"I wish those who advocate divorce for incurable insanity would pass some law by and by, which I pray they will do."

Healthy Women Scarce

Is The Verdict of Scientific Investigation. How many women do you know who are perfectly well, strong and healthy as a woman should be? They may not be sick enough to lie in bed—but they are run-down, thin, nervous, tired and demoralized.

Women are so active nowadays, and so much is expected of them, that from headache, backache, nervousness and indigestion. Such women need Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil which will create an appetite, tone up the digestive organs, make pure blood and create strength.

SUCCESSFUL SERVICE.—The W. B. M. A. S. of the Tryon Baptist Church held their annual thank offering service on Thursday evening, Nov. 28th. The church was well filled. The program, which was well rendered, was somewhat shorter than usual due in part to sickness and to the unpleasant state of the roads and the evening. An exercise by the children of the Mission Band and the selections of song by the young men were especially appreciated. An offering of $55.00 or $60.00 was realized.

the judge, was whether the evidence of Blanchard had shown that the proceedings had formed an item in a debtor or creditor account. The complainant had refused to say one way or another.

"The action against Bagnall was brought under section 2355 of the criminal code," said Judge Gunn, Sub-section 2 read as follows:—If it be part of the said terms that the money or other thing received or the proceeds thereof shall form an item in a debtor or creditor account between the person receiving the same and the person to whom he is to account or pay the same and that such last-mentioned person shall rely on the personal liability of the other as his debtor in respect thereof in such account shall be a sufficient accounting for the money or proceeds or part thereof so entered, and subsection 3, "In such case no fraudulent conversion of the amount accounted for shall be deemed to have taken place."

Further, the judge reviewed the history of the Bagnalls in Ottawa.

"Less than three years ago Bagnall & Co., were carrying on a stock brokerage business in Ottawa," continued the judge. "Harry Bagnall was working in that office and also had some experience in the business previous to that. Then the firm failed, leaving sorrowing creditors with a loss of $100,000. W. E. Bagnall then left the city. Subsequently the accused entered into business himself, depending on the sympathy that might be aroused over his father's failure to get him business. It is shown that although Flower & Co., had been employed by his firm his father was really his agent, but the father was hiding under the power of attorney. This power left him able to deal with the funds of Harry Bagnall & Co., as the accused himself would. For some time business proceeded in this way." Continuing, the judge dealt with the manner in which the money was sent to New York under power of the father.

"The money," stated the judge, "was fully in the hands of the accused's father, who was pursuing a course that was neither honest or practical. Soon he took money for his own use. The accused knew of this, finding it out over one year ago."

"Whether or not the $20,000 which he has lost for his customers, was paid out of the money lost prior to his discovery of his father's wrongdoing, is not shown in the evidence, but it is my opinion that most of the money came into his hands after the discovery."

Further, the judge said, that after his father's failure those who had lost money stood behind the accused to reestablish him. He then took money from his friends which he knew he could not recover. He then pointed out the list of creditors, saying that they included senators, members of Parliament and shrewd business men.

"In one case a young lady clerk, who had saved $2,500, entrusted it to the accused, and he truns around with the knowledge that he had of his father's action and lets him do them," said the judge. "It is clear that the money did not come into the hands of the accused, because his father stole it on the way."

He then declared that the only evidence to go on was that of Blanchard, and he had refused to answer whether the proceedings had formed an item in a debtor and creditor account.

"The evidence falls short of establishing the one point I think should be discovered before I could be justified in convicting the accused," continued the judge. "Could a jury with this evidence before them reach any other decision on this point? I am not satisfied with the evidence."

It is not known whether any other of the clients who lost money through their dealing with Harry Bagnall will take action against him.

TO BECOME SCHOOL TEACHERS

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Complaints continue to be made here about the dearth of teachers for elementary schools. The number of young entrants to the profession has steadily declined in London from 1,181 in the year 1908 to 365 this year; while if boys alone are taken, the number had declined from 263 to thirty. In all London only thirty boys could be got this year to enter teaching as a profession. The sub-committee of the London County Council which reported the matter said that some part of the decline was due to the unemployed teachers' agitation of a few years back, but they seemed inclined to attribute most of it to the period of good trade which the country has recently been passing.

The real reason is, of course, the pay. A married male teacher in London with a family has a pretty tight struggle unless he ekes out his salary by teaching in the evening schools or doing other extra work.

CHILD MUST PLAY.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—Play is the great educator, making the child enjoy his studies, said Dr. Paul Luttinger, noted apostle of the National Educational League, in an interview preceding his address in Coronation Hall.

Dr. Luttinger does not believe in repression or restraint of children. He would adopt the school curriculum to meet individual needs and peculiarities. If a child shows no aptitude for arithmetic at eight years then we wait until he is ten, meanwhile preparing the ground.

In the new education there would be no examinations. Promotion would depend upon the teacher's judgment. As an outrage of this idea, Dr. Luttinger advocates a people's university where the masses can be taught the humanities. In the opinion of the chief of the new movement, social unrest would be alleviated considerably by a people's university system.

SCORES PROFESSION

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—"The profession of medicine in the United States, on the whole, is working positive injury to humanity," is the opinion of Dr. Leo B. Woodcock, of Scranton, Pa., a McGill graduate, who for the past ten years has been practicing in Scranton, Penna. Disgusted with what he calls the baneful influence of the profession he has relinquished it, and has returned to his native land.

"One hears a great deal of fake remedies," said the doctor, "but the fakes and quackery practiced in the medical profession proper across the line are far more inimical to society than the regular methods of the quack. Here is a case in point. Five years ago I was called upon to act as a consulting physician in what was to me obviously a case of heart disease. The three doctors who acted with me tried to get me to agree to their diagnosis of appendicitis. Their idea was to operate and divide the flat fee among us. They argued that the patient would die anyway, and if the heart trouble was left to take its course, there would be no money in it for us."
