A Sweetheart at Thirty

THE STORY OF A WOMAN'S TRANSFORMATION

By Marion Rubincam

OUR NEW PLANS

Chapter 37

Violet's college term began, and with her new work and the examinations she had to take to make up for the deficiencies of our High School, the girl had little time for anything else. She left early in the morning, after we had our egg and rolls and tea, promising to buy herself a nourishing lunch during the day. And she came home late in the afternoon having done some of her work in the library on the college grounds. Then while I fixed supper, she told of the day's adventures, and while we ate I related all I had done. Mrs. Tupper at first did not like us to have our meals in this room but after a time she agreed to it.

"Nice people is always nice," she said, using her favourite explanation. So long as the smell of cooking meat is in the air, I guess it's all right, I had an actress once, here in this room. She asked to make coffee. Said she was a coffee fiend, I guess she was. She said she hardly ate a thing they all say that. She weighed 300, I guess she was a coffee fiend. And a fried ham fiend. And a pan cake fiend. I guess she must have cooked 10 course dinners here. So I had to forbid any cooking in the rooms that is. Smells so."

She rattled on making a pretence at dusting. And presently she began giving me the details of the last operation she had, and then offered to let me wash clothes in her laundry.

"The West Side is wonderful," I said to Violet one evening as I fixed a salad—salad being my favourite and healthy and needing no cooking we ate many of them. "I'm going down there and hunt a flat." I went on scooping salad dressing from a small jar, with a flat piece of wood for a spoon.

"It would be nice to taste a home-made cake again and have rare roast beef for dinner." Her eyes looked wistfully into space. Violet was young and had the healthy appetite of the country bred girl.

So day after day I wandered up and down the streets from Fourth Street south, and over almost to the river. There were clean places, dirty places, some without light, but finally one that I loved. It was the top floor of a funny old fashioned three story brick house. The ceilings were low, but as those in the farm-house had been low too, we liked that.

The wall paper was atrocious in design—it was red roses large as cauliflower heads—but I thought I could paint the walls. The wood-work was dark brown—but I was going to make it white. The main thing was that it gave us a small front room with two windows a bed and last, a still smaller room with a wall thrown across to make a kitchenette on one side and a bath on the other.

The woman who owned the house had had her third floor done over this way to make an apartment of it, and she wanted $25 a month. I took it gladly, and even signed a lease—the first time in my life I had ever put my name to a legal paper.

"Well write home and tell Mother to send us in some of the furniture from the garret," Violet said.

QUEER HAWAIIAN NAMES

The natives of Hawaii are singularly picturesque in their choice of names. Mr. Schissors, The Thief, The Ghost, The Fool, The Man Who Washes His Dimples, Mrs. Oyster, The Weary Lizard, The Husband of Kaneia (a male dog), The Great Kettle, The First Nose, The Atlantic Ocean, The Stomach, Poor Pussy, Mrs. Turkey, The Tenth Heaven, are all names that have appeared in the city directory.

They are often careless of the gender or appropriateness of the names they take. A householder on Beretania street, Honolulu, is called The Pretty Woman (Wahine Maikai); a male infant was lately christened Mrs. Thompson; one little girl is named Samson; another, The Man, Susan (Kokema) is a boy; so are Polly Sarah, Janet and Henry Ann. A pretty little maid has been named by her fond parents The Pig Str (Hale Pua). For some unknown reason or for no reason at all—one boy is named The Rat Eater (Kamea Oie Ole).

The Rev. Dr. Coan of Hawaii possessed the love of his flock. One morning a child was presented for baptism whose name was given by the parents, Makia; when the ceremony was finished the parents assured the doctor that they had named the baby for him.

"But my name is not Michael," said the doctor, supposing Mikia to be aimed thereat.

"We always hear your wife call you Mikia," answered the mother. She had mistaken Mrs. Coan's familiar "my dear" for her husband's given name.

An old servant in Dr. Wight's family at Kohala caused her grandchild to be baptised in church. The Doctor (Kauka); that was its only name. By way of compliment to the

P. O. Box 123, PARSONS, N.S.
"I suffered with Rheumatism for five years, having it so badly at times I was unable to get up. I tried medicines I saw advertised, and was treated by doctors but the Rheumatism always came back. In 1916, I saw in an advertisement that 'Fruit-a-lives' would stop Rheumatism and took a box, and got relief; then took 'Fruit-a-lives' right along for about six months and I have never felt my Rheumatism since."

early physicians, many children were named after their drugs, as Joseph Squills, Miss Rhubarb, The Emetic, The Doctor Who Peeps in at a Door.

Names uncomplimentary, or even disgusting, are willingly borne by their owners; others convey a pleasing and grateful sentiment. Among the latter are the Arch of Heaven (Ka Ria Lan), The River of Twiligh (Ka Wia Linla), The Delicate Wreath (Ka Lei ma Lili). Breakfast Tastes So Much Better CARNATION Milk makes breakfast a wonderful meal. Like cream on your cereal or fruit and wonderful in tea or coffee. If you drink milk, add water to Carnation.

It's just pure, cows' milk with about 60% of the water taken out by evaporation. Sealed in the container and sterilized. Nothing is added. You can use it for all milk uses. Keep the pantry well-stocked. Carnation keeps for several months in the can and for several days after opening. Order milk the convenient way—with your groceries. The grocer is the Carnation Milkman. Ask him to send you several tall (16 oz.) cans or a case of 48 cans.

Learn how it will add flavor whenever milk is used. Enjoy the new Carnation recipes—100 tested recipes all brought together in a beautifully illustrated book. It's free. Write for it. Try this Carnation recipe.

FRENCH TOAST.

2 eggs, 1/2 teaspoonful salt, 1/2 cup water, 1/4 cup Carnation Milk, stale bread cut in slices. Beat the eggs slightly, add salt and milk diluted with the water. Dip the bread in the mixture. Grease a frying pan and when hot place slices of bread in it and brown on one side, then turn and brown on the other side. This recipe serves six people.
