That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

DISTURBANCES OF LOWER BOWEL OFTEN DUE TO EMOTIONAL UPSETMENT

When the word constipation is mentioned the first thought with many is to take more 'roughage' in the food as this roughage will irritate the bowel and cause its muscular coats to contract and squeeze the wastes downward and out of the body. And, as a matter of fact, rough foods—fruits and vegetables— is the best single treatment for the ordinary case of constipation due to soft foods and lack of exercise.

There is, however, a type of constipation which alternates with diarrhoea in which these rough foods are so irritating that they cause spasm or partial closure of the bowel and constipation is the result. Following the spasm and constipation there is diarrhoea in which the wastes are covered with mucous. These individuals are always 'aware' of their lower bowel or colon and the condition is called colitis. In order not to irritate the lining of the bowel, these colitis patients are often given soft liquid foods with daily doses of paraffin oil to lubricate wastes and enable them to pass readily throughout the length of the bowel.

It has been found that the individuals who suffer with colitis are not usually the lazy type but are active, high-strung, and emotional. And just as the emotions can cause stomach, heart, gall bladder, and bloodvessel spasm, so also are they to blame for most cases of colitis. It is therefore only a small part of the treatment to prescribe diets in these cases. The important part of the treatment is to try to have them understand that it is their fears, their anxieties, their worry about their own or their family's health that is causing the constipation, diarrhoea dull pain, and irritable abdomen.

Drs. Charles W. Mayo and E. G. Wakefield, Mayo Clinic, tell us that "the cure of these disturbances of the lower bowel (not due to organic disease) is not by a rearrangement of the diet but in attempts to control the social conditions causing the upsetments. In order to get rid of these disorders the defects in education, morality, religion, and even physical heredity have to be corrected."

In other words, these disturbances of the lower bowel or colon, can only be corrected when these individuals recognize that they have not adjusted themselves properly to their circumstances and to life. And to the extent to which they adjust themselves and acquire poise and calmness, just as the same extent will their symptoms disappear.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 6 —(CP)— Easier outside markets and continued absence of support caused Winnipeg wheat fuutres prices to move slightly lower in dull trading today. Mills showed only minor interest and export sales of Canadian wheat appeared to be at a minimum.

Final quotations were 1-2 cent lower, with May at 62 1-4, July 63 and Oct. 63 1-4 cents.

Liverpool closed 3-8d down. Chicago finished a shade under Saturday's close while Buenos Aires remained about unchanged. Cash wheat put in another featureless session.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6 —(AP)— There was sufficient buying in a moderate trade today to hold wheat prices here within fractions of Saturday's close, despite lower world markets.

Wheat closed 7-8-3-8 lower, May 68 3-8-1-4, July 66 3-8; corn 1-8-3-8 off, May 49 3-4-5-8, July 50 3-4; oats unchanged to 1-8 off, May 28 3-8.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 6 —(CP)— Closing future quotations wheat— May 62 1-4b, July 63, Oct. 63 1-4b. Oats —May 29 1-4b, July 28 5-8a, Oct. 26 3-8a. Barley —May 37 1-2b, July 36 3-4b.

DICTATOR-RULED RUMANIA BELIEVES WAR MEANS SHE WILL BE DESTROYED

Carol's Kingdom Is Strange Mixture of Modern and Ancient

BY MELANIE L. PFLAUM
NEA Service Special Correspondent

BUCHAREST, Feb. — Closer political relations with Germany are not popular in Rumania, but her people seem to approve any policy that will bring peace.

"Germany buys our wheat and our oil," they say. "Why not closer relations with her? If war breaks out we will be the battleground between Germany and Russia. Rumania will be destroyed whichever side wins."

Among students, always a focal point of political discussion in any small European country, nationalism is strong, but not militarism. They feel that Rumania has everything to lose in any war, nothing to gain.

Here in Rumania is the strange spectacle of a king-dictator ruling in Fascist fashion, tossing into jail Iron Guard conspirators who are Fascists, too, but generally considered a more authentic German breed.

King Carol sits on the lid of a one-party dictatorship, and you can find many who say that his only political object is to keep his seat on the throne. Whatever policy assures this is his policy.

GERMANY HOLDS POTENT HAND

Thus England and Germany, rivals for Carol's favor, will succeed in proportion as they are able to assure Carol's security on the throne.

And here Germany has strong cards to play. She bought about 35 percent of all Rumania's exports last year, and the proportion is growing. French and British cultural influence is still strong.

It is a mark of distinction for a Rumanian family to be able to employ an English governess for the children. And Bucharest is like a little Paris, with the girls imitating the hairdress and costumes of Danielle Darrieux and Simone Simon. But these influences seem to be slowly yielding to the fact that Germany can and does buy the exportable goods of the country, a practical tie which no sentiment can wash out.

According to the Rumanian government, there is no unemployment in the country.

Agricultural co-operatives have been encouraged, and despite periodic scandals in their administration, the peasants seem to be far better off than those of Hungary.

People in Bucharest support a lively night life along Parisian lines, but the spirit is different from that in Budapest. A clerk in Bucharest may make about $80 a month. He can't live on that, and he doesn't try.

So he usually holds two or more jobs. Government employes often work as language translators or teachers; school teachers are often public accountants or notaries on the side. A man who is a bricklayer by day may be a cabinetmaker by night.

CITIES UP TO-DATE, COUNTRY ANTIQUE

In Budapest they run into debt and let the tradesmen worry. In Bucharest they simply get a couple of other jobs to eke out what they have. Prices are high— a pair of shoes, $12— while wages are lower than in the United States. Petty graft and bribery are rampant.

Bucharest is a modern city. Were it not for the Byzantine churches, you could be in Cincinnati or Detroit. But to go from the Capital into the provinces' is a journey not in space but in time. It is 500 years from Bucharest to a typical country village.

Here men still wear a loose white shirt over tight-fitting trousers of white cotton tucked into embroidered stockings, and a colored scarf about the waist.

The women wear loose white cotton embroidered blouses, and on feast days the glistening tiara which was once the attribute of nobility, but which in the days of the Turks was imitated by the peasants, and is now part of the national dress. There are dances and ceremonials that go back to the pagan days of the Roman occupation.

One night we stayed in the house of a peasant who entertained us regally when we lost our way. We were given what must have been the only bed in the house, and a dinner of thick-vegetable soup, sour dark bread, radishes, wine, and for dessert, nuts roasted before the fire.

All attempts at payment were refused. Instead, "Please send us a postal card from New York," they demanded. "A postal card of the Empire State Building," added the eldest son, who could write as he spelled out the family name. His younger brother disagreed. He wanted a picture of Gary Cooper!

King Carol, right, boss of Rumania's up-to-the-minute dictatorship, takes part in a quaint old custom of the country as he is greeted with bread and salt by Oberburgermeister Dombrowsky of Bucharest on his return from a tour of western Europe.
