Handicraft Festival In Toronto

TORONTO, April 30.—This is Maritime Canada Day at the Canadian Handicraft Festival in Toronto. Displayed with the cream of the handicraft work of the Dominion, the products of Maritime Canada have easily taken first place in the nation-wide festival that has been in progress at the Eaton Auditorium here all this week. Never before in Canada has such a representative and beautiful collection of entirely handmade products been assembled as in this showing. Everything from the work of British Columbia and Ojibwa Indians to the very finest of semi-precious stone jewellery has been displayed, and what is more important, sold to highly delighted and appreciative buyers.

One of the outstanding features of the exhibition as a whole was the notable fact that while the handicraft work from the western provinces showed distinctly the European traditions of our new Canadians of other than British or French origin, the work of the Maritime Provinces was a direct reflection of the ancient handicrafts of the British Isles and of the pioneer days of Canada. Conspicuous in the display were the rugs—the glorified hooked mats of a few years ago. All three provinces were ably represented in this part of the display. The largest rug, measuring some 11 by 14 feet was a Nova Scotia product and because of its size and very distinctive beauty was given a place of honor in the rotunda leading to the main auditorium. The largest number of rugs came from "The Island" and amongst these were many in which traditional patterns had been worked out in color schemes that fitted them for use in the most modern of rooms. The New Brunswick rugs offered a wide choice of design and size up to approximately 6 by 9 feet. This, together with the refinement of texture and excellent choice of colors has been a continuous source of comment by both buyers and observers during the week.

The tang of the sea was brought into the show by the display of ship models. There were ancient frigates, sloops, schooners and other types of craft, practically all of them Nova Scotian workmanship. The simpler and more homey kinds of craft work as presented by the products of the knitting needle, the crochet hook and the patent needle, such as have graced the women's sections of every county fair and provincial exhibition for a generation, were admired by the younger generation to which these things are new again, and the older people to whom they come with the appeal of by-gone years. A quilt (we used to call them patchwork) in "Eva's Apron" pattern done in green and white brought many an exclamation of pleasure from visitors during the week.

The exhibition was arranged under the direction of Mr. Fred C. Robson, President of the Handicrafts Association of Canada, Inc., and the opening address was given at a private showing on Monday night last, by Colonel Wilfred Bovey, O. B. R., Director of extra-mural relations of McGill University, and President of the Canadian Handicraft Guild. Mr. Robson, in his opening remarks, paid hearty tribute and offered sincere thanks to Commissioner R. W. E. Burnaby of the Maritime Province Trade Commission, for the active and deeply interested co-operation he had given in the gathering of the exhibits.

Colonel Bovey gave a brief but intensely interesting review of the history of handicraft work in Canada from pioneer days to the present revival of interest, and set forth a proposal for future development. The economic value of handicraft work, he declared, lay at present in close association with agricultural life. Wonderful and very beautiful are the products of Canada's farm homes today. It is in rural Canada that handicrafts have their greatest values.

Instancing the immense drop in the value of Canada's wool crop as one of the many difficulties of the farmers, he urged that new products and new markets be found for the farm community. While new activities and new outlets for products, and hence new sources of income might be developed, Colonel Bovey held that weaving and other handicraft occupations were merely modern developments of the most ancient arts of our country. Quebec has woven tweeds ever since the first settlers came into it. Today there have been marked improvements in quality, texture and design so that no Canadian need feel anything but great pride in wearing a suit of such cloth. The tweeds of New Brunswick, the speaker declared to be quite as good as the famous Harris tweeds of Scotland, as distinctive in design, and as fine and interesting in texture.

"I do not advocate," he stated, "that every farmer or his wife should set up a loom and become a weaver; but there should be large groups in every province using our own native wool and producing a distinctively Canadian cloth." Education and active propaganda were necessary to make the handicrafts of our country successful, he believed.

Pointing out that in the past the handicrafts of the Dominion have been kept alive by private enterprise, Colonel Bovey advanced his proposal for future development. Let each province, he suggested, set up a normal school of weaving and other craftsman activities under government auspices. Then, let private enterprise as represented by the various handicraft guilds in the land, take up the work of marketing the products. This will need a strong and active sales force, he believed, with good propaganda behind it.

Proud Mother

MRS. W. D. HERRIDGE
OTTAWA, April 29.—(By the Canadian Press)—The Capital's newest notable, baby Herridge, born here Thursday, and his mother, Mrs. W. D. Herridge, wife of Canada's Minister to Washington, and sister of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, the Prime Minister, were both reported "exceptionally well" today.

OTTAWA, April 29.—Mrs. Herridge, wife of Hon. William D. Herridge, Canadian Minister to the United States, and the only sister of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, gave birth to a son in hospital here yesterday. The birth followed a Caesarian operation at 9.55 a. m. The child weighed seven and one-half pounds, which is the normal and healthy weight for a new-born infant. Both mother and child were reported to be "doing well."

It is believed that the young arrival will possibly be named Richard Bennett Herridge, after his distinguished uncle.

At the Canadian Legation in Washington, a nursery awaits the son of Canada's Minister. Several weeks ago, its furnishing was completed, and situated on an upper floor of the Legation, it is finished and equipped with everything of the latest for the care and comfort of the baby.

Association of Canada, Inc., and the opening address was given at a private showing on Monday night last, by Colonel Wilfred Bovey, O. B. STRANGERS AND VISITORS CORDIALLY INVITED.

The Governor General wears a suit of fine Canadian tweed, he declared, and every Canadian who lives anything of an outdoor life at all should be urged both on the grounds of patriotism and esthetic values to emulate his example.

Colonel Bovey paid special tribute to the Mount Allison Handicraft Guild and to the activities in Charlottetown County, New Brunswick, centering about St. Andrews. There was no doubt that the New Brunswick tweeds came in for more praise and comments of astonishment than almost anything else in the festival. These were products of the Charlotte County Cottage Craft Guild.

The New Brunswick exhibit was the most comprehensive from the provinces, covering such an inclusive range as hand-woven linen, model ships, tooled leather work, exquisite pottery which was stated to contain plastic clay from Musquodabuit, Nova Scotia silt from Manancton, feldspar from Kingston, Ontario, and china clay from Cornwall, England. Add to the display silver in a score of forms from spoons and other table articles to jewellery, brass work, copper, wood carving, block printed chifons, rugs, drapes and bed spreads, and there appears a sketchy picture of this remarkable demonstration of the dexterity of hands, and the innate ability to create beauty that lies within our people.

Did you know they make the most delightful pottery buttons in Charlottetown County, New Brunswick? Well, neither did most of those who saw them in this exhibition. And how they exclaimed over them!

Mr. F. C. Robinson laid special stress upon the real economic importance of craftsmen work, declaring that it presents an opportunity to do a very fine piece of service for Canada. He gratefully but none the less effectively held up to ridicule the idea that Canadians can do no better than offer their visitors from other lands machine-made imitations of the artistic ideas and ideals of other countries. He strongly urged the production of hand-made goods of such typically Canadian aspect that they will be associated with no other land on earth. These he asserted would give more lasting pleasure to the tourist buyers who visited us and tend also to increase their buying in Canada.

Today is Maritime Day at the display and all the talent which is providing the entertainment is from the Provinces. The Maritime goods are being given special prominence and included in the afternoon program are brief talks by Maritime representatives who are best fitted to explain the origin and value of the handicraft arts to the Ontario audience. The exhibition has been open during business hours all week and many thousands have visited and admired the display.
