Southworth has a strong ball club. He needs such, for the Cards are sure of some keen competition up and down the line. The Cubs, Pirates and the Giants will be hard to beat and the other teams in the league will be nibbling at the chances of the four clubs which seem to be the class of the race.

Sherdel, despite the fact that he could almost be referred to as a hard luck twirler, is a master of the change of pace which is so effective and which is a real asset to a flinger when he begins to age. It is the thing which has made Alex a great pitcher during recent years, and it is likely to prove a salvation in the case of the diminutive hurler. When he is right, Sherdel can slow-ball the opposing batters into a pulp and he is quite apt to be right a good many times during the coming Summer.

And Southworth still has Jim Bottomley performing smilingly around the initial corner. While Jim proved a washout in the hitting department during the big series last Fall, there is no reason to believe that he won't be as effective this Summer as in the past—and that's plenty effective. Jim, who is a resident of Oglesby, Ill.—and quite a prominent one—is a product of the extensive Cardinal farm system and won the most valuable player award in the National League last year, nosing out Lindstrom, of the Giants. The smiling clouter batted in 133 runs last Summer and in slapping out four-ply blows he tied Hack Wilson, of the Cubs, for the leadership with 31 homers.

Bottomley was given a lot of credit for putting the Cards into first place in 1928. His batting and fielding are highly respected by everyone. The Cards have a great ball club, indeed.

There is nothing of the traditional war film in "Roses of Picardy," now playing at the Strand. It is based on the two novels, "The Spanish Farm" and "Sixty-Four, Ninety-Four," by R. H. Mottram, and has been produced with fidelity by Maurice Elvey. It is a psychological study of the effects of the war on a woman and two men.

A young Englishman touring the battlefields finds himself in Hondelbecq, where his war life was spent. His memories take shape before him. During the war Skene and his battalion were quartered at the Spanish Farm. His duties as billeting officer brought him in contact with Madeleine, mistress of the farm. She seeks information of the lover whom the war has taken from her and for a time she consoles herself with Skene.

Not even the war, however, can alter the character of Madeleine. Faithful in her heart to her faithless lover, she accepts the situation philosophically. She does not deceive herself either about her feelings for Skene, to whom she yields out of pity for his condition of war panic, knowing that it is only a temporary affair. Skene meets Madeleine again and the climax shows her with her two "children," the Frenchman, now blind, and her father, driven half crazy by his treatment at the hands of the Germans. The film closes on a note of pathos, a wonderful scene that will be remembered when other parts of the film are forgotten.

"Mr. Jinks" who beat Cragadour in the Two Thousand, was next at ten to one.

Unique Romantic Drama At Capitol

NANCY CARROLL AND GARY COOPER DELIGHT RIALTO'S AUDIENCES IN "THE SHOPWORN ANGEL"

Stepping along on her own two dainty little feet, is Nancy Carroll, the latest bit of piquant personality to grace the screen. Her latest picture, in which she is co-featured with Gary Cooper, "The Shopworn Angel," at its opening yesterday at the Capitol theatre, where it will play for two days more, was a new triumph for Nancy Carroll.

Nancy Carroll has everything. She is a delight to watch. The life and action in her portrayal, the absorbing personality and the charm of her presence provides all the entertainment one needs for the evening. But then there's Gary Cooper. Cooper has "that" which, for men actors, is the same thing as "it" for women actors. He has proved it in many strong parts but, in no one of his pictures, has he excelled so completely as in "The Shopworn Angel."

"The Shopworn Angel" is a tender love story of a boy, shy, bashful, honest, and a girl, gay, giddy, charming and true. It is a pathetic story played against the bright background of Broadway. It is a glittering piece of romanticism, a thrilling tangle of circumstances in which a clean-minded young man and a re-awakened girl are swirled helplessly.

"The Shopworn Angel" has many things to recommend it. It has Nancy Carroll, Gary Cooper, Paul Lukas, that captivating and mysterious person, and an unusual, moving love story in a brilliant setting. It is good entertainment throughout and it is good for thinking people. "The Shopworn Angel" is a picture to see and to talk about.

A FINE DAY

Clear had the day been from the dawn. All chequer'd was the sky, Thin clouds like scarfs of coloured lawn Veil'd heaven's most glorious eye. The wind had no more strength than this. Just leisurely it blew, To make one leaf the next to kiss, That closely by it grew.

St. John Ervine Not Pleased With American Women

LONDON, May 6—Prohibition is having its own peculiar effect on American womanhood. St. John Ervine, English dramatic critic, told a large audience in a lecture in Manchester.

"I have seen more drunken women in New York in seven months than I have seen in England in seven years," Ervine said.

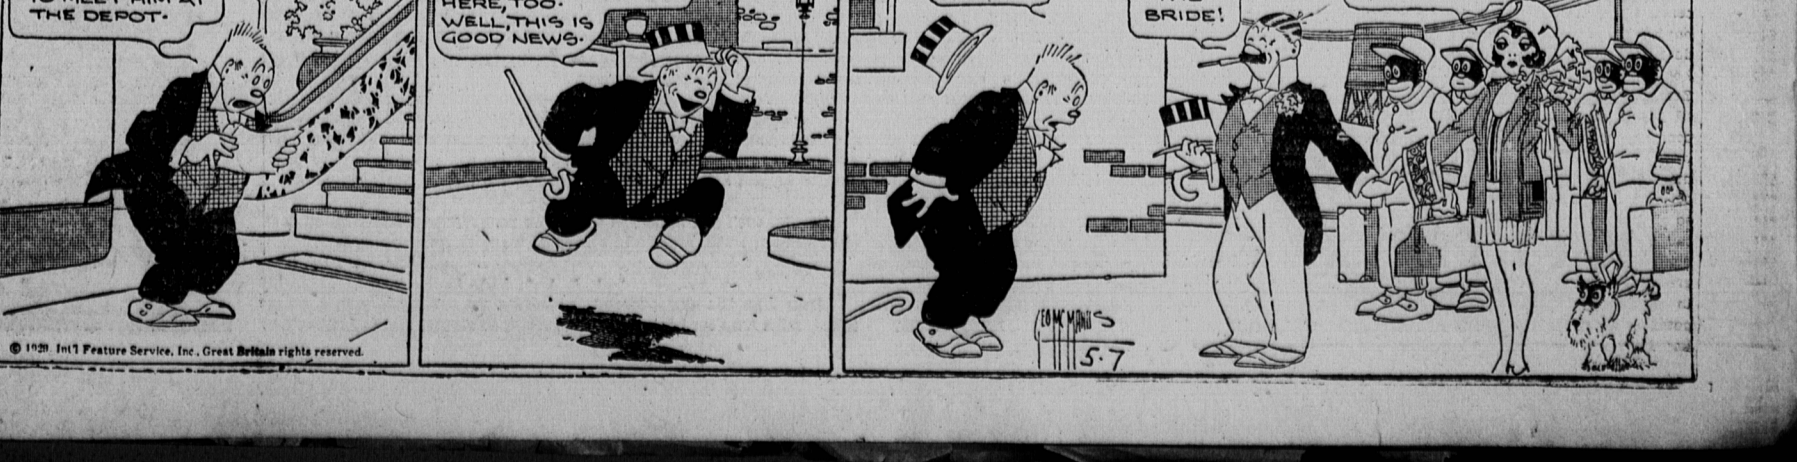

"Why, on the first night I was in New York my telephone bell rang three times and three bootleggers offered to fill my needs. The temperance reformer is perfectly shameless when he comes to talk about prohibition. He will shame Ananias, and so will the 'wet.'"

Ervine attacked the popular belief that England and Americans are cousins. He suggested, however, that the British Government send its surplus women to the United States, where there seems to be a lack of femininity.

Ervine had the opportunity study American drama and womanhood as guests chitric for the New York World.
