Interesting Debate At Notre Dame

On Tuesday evening, March 25th, the pupils of the Commercial Department of Notre Dame Academy held a most successful debate in the assembly hall of the Academy, where were assembled the teachers and pupils of the other grades, also student boarders of Princess of Wales College. There were present on the occasion Rev. F. D. MacGuigan, Vernon River. Rev. Father MacCormack, Holy Redeemer Church, City; Rev. Fathers McCarthy and McMahon, St. Dunstan's Basilica, the last three of whom acted as judges. The stage was tastefully decorated in purple and gold, the class colors. The young ladies of the Commercial Class, some time ago, formed themselves into a club for recreational and intellectual pursuits outside their class-room studies and if the writer, who had the pleasure of being present, may judge, he would say that their time spent in promoting these pursuits must have been very profitable to them and one is not surprised to learn that many of the graduates of this department are holding responsible positions in the business world. The capable, business-like manner in which the meeting was conducted speaks very highly for the training these young ladies receive.

Miss Bernice McCabe and Miss Elizabeth Gaudet acted acceptably as chairman and secretary respectively. The subject was "Resolved that Ambition has wrought more harm than good to mankind." The negative team, winners of the debate, consisted of Miss Mary Leightner, (Capt.), Miss Florence MacAulay, and Miss Jessie Waller. The pro team consisted of Miss Catherine McCloskey, (Capt.), Miss Irene Cameron, and Miss Margaret Stewart. The debate was keenly contested on both sides, and judging from the numbers of historical, scientific, and literary examples adduced, a wide field of research was covered, but the manner in which these young ladies brought out their points made it most interesting. Excellent speeches with oratorical effect, were delivered on both sides.

The success of the debate reflects great credit on the training received at Notre Dame Academy.

Short addresses by the Reverend gentlemen present brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

would be difficult to nail him down to anything definite. The amendment by Mr. McMillan lamenting the increase and spread of divorce and calling upon a campaign for education against the evil involved, but how such a campaign could be carried on deponent did not say, was discussed. His amendment however was voted down by 108 to 88. The House clamored noisily for a vote on the bill itself, but the time was up technically. Unanimous consent was necessary and Mr. Spotton, Conservative member for Huron, held the bridge by asserting his intention and his right to speak. Thus the measure goes over till Friday. The main contribution was by the Prime Minister. He emphasized the point that it is not a question of the merit of divorce, but of procedure. He showed how Parliament primarily supposed to consider public business is frustrated by the enormous accumulation of divorce bills, which are private affairs. He said much in favor of a divorce court as being a favor to lessen divorces, but he proceeded to invoke a question of provincial rights. He didn't believe in more judicial procedure and caloureting Ontario to accept a divorce court if they didn't want it and so if the bill were adopted in principle he wanted the mover Mr. Woodsworth to accept an amendment making the operation of the act contingent upon an act of the Legislature or an order in council of the local government. However, he said he would first vote for the McMillan amendment which calls for a campaign of education against the evils of divorce. If the bill on reaching its final stage didn't embrace the proviso he proposed then he would vote against it.

of his practical knowledge of certain phases discuss it without prejudice. The salmon canning industry had been benefited inasmuch as Canadian exports to Australia had considerably increased, while those of the U. S. had decreased, but in respect of timber and newsprint the U. S. had still by far the best of it while Canada had far to go to get the share of the trade to which by her geographical position and natural adaptability to meet the demands in Australia, she was entitled.

T. W. Bird, Nelson, followed in an academical preachment of free trade and protection, in which he contended that these treaties which gave special privileges to each other of nations were by artificial arrangement an indirect and vicious form of protection.

Mr. Hiley (Kings), on behalf of the Liberals spoke against the amendment of Mr. Gardiner. It was no more, he said, than a species of camouflage by which the Albertans hoped to raise the tariff against Australian butter without appearing to divert attention from their traditional low tariff principles. Quoting a number of statistics, he came to the conclusion that the Australian treaty was a pronounced success industrially and commercially.

Mr. Leo Lader, Vancouver, supported Mr. Stevens' amendment. The treaty had good features but could be considerably improved in the interests of Canada. A rather significant statement was made by Mr. Speakman (Red Deer), which may be interpreted as an indication to some extent of how the wind is blowing in his province of Alberta. He said that there had been a lot of loose talk recently with respect to the attitude of the Western farmer to protection. On the one side it had been argued that the farmer was unqualifiedly opposed to protection. On the other side it had been declared that he is himself rapidly becoming a protectionist. Taking a protective system as a whole, Mr. Speakman was convinced that the disadvantages greatly overbalanced any advantages which might accrue to the farmer. For example, in the case of any product such as wheat, the larger portion of which was exported, a protective tariff would be of very little value. On the other hand there was no denying the fact that in the case of a farm product wholly consumed in this country, a protective tariff on it could be nothing but advantageous to the farmer producing it. The debate is still on.

An uproar greeted Mr. Brady, Conservative of British Columbia, who had great difficulty in being heard, but who spoke against the bill, sitting down just as the clock struck nine, the time limit. The Speaker put the amendment sensing the desire of everybody to vote and it was defeated, but as stated, Mr. Spotton blocked the final vote. Evidently the bill will carry by about the same vote reversed.

The hitch will arise over whether it will become operative only with the sayso of the Ontario authorities. Before this and after they debated the motion of Mr. Gardiner of the U. F. A. to abrogate the Australian Treaty, the argument for the motion is that it exploits the farmers for the benefit of the manufacturers; that was the whole case in a nutshell. Against it, Mr. Stevens contended that the treaty should be continued, but changed in a way to bring out a fuller trade development between the two countries. He thought it possible to work out a plan to that end enabling Australia to sell more, but not to affect Canadian products. He has a subamendment calling for such a revision. The discussion was unfinished when the curtain fell on the deliberations. On an ordinary day this question would have stacked high.

This afternoon the debate was still carried on and all the speakers attached a great deal of importance to it. General McRae of North Vancouver, although he had divested himself of all interests that would have been affected could by virtue of his practical knowledge of certain phases discuss it without prejudice. The salmon canning industry had been benefited inasmuch as Canadian exports to Australia had considerably increased, while those of the U. S. had decreased, but in respect of timber and newsprint the U. S. had still by far the best of it while Canada had far to go to get the share of the trade to which by her geographical position and natural adaptability to meet the demands in Australia, she was entitled.

the Government was doing far more work on the roads, the Premier contended.

In the education Department there was practically no change.

The Agricultural Department showed an increase. The Government was called upon to defray the cost of examination of cattle for bovine tuberculosis and for the Island's share of the Maritime exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The Conservatives, the Premier contended, spent during their last term of office $84,000 a month as against $70,000 expended by the present Government.

Our net debt at most, he said, has only been increased under this Government by $274,000—"practically the amount which the Guardian says we have increased it this year."

There has been little difference in recent years in the total ordinary expenditure. In 1927 it was $851,000; in 1928 $828,000; in 1929, $836,000.

The Premier charged the Conservative administration with having lost $35,000 in revenue from poll tax and another $35,000 from farm lands notwithstanding that the present leader of the Opposition and the senior member for Charlottetown were on record in saying that the farmers should be taught that they were not paying enough taxes. In support of this remark he cited from a report of the P. E. I. Development commission, composed of Dr. Gauthier, Dr. McMillan and Mr. Stewart.

Hon. Mr. Stewart. What is the date of that report?

Premier Saunders: 1917.

Mr. Arsenault: That was before the Bell Government tax act.

Premier Saunders reviewed at considerable length our subsidy claims, dealing particularly with the merits of the brief which he presented at the Inter-Provincial Conference of 1927 and the additional brief for compensation in lieu of public lands which he filed with the Federal Government last January.

It was true that during his absence that another memorial on our claims was prepared by the Minister of Agriculture. He, Premier Saunders, looked that document over on his return and he did not see why it should be ridiculed. If there was anything wrong he would say it was too modest. The figures, substantially were correct. Of course, the Minister of Agriculture had his own way of doing things and he, Premier Saunders had his. Notwithstanding that, Mr. Lea's figures of the subsidy amount due us from the Dominion represents a very considerable sum. There was nothing in it to ridicule so far as he was concerned. The Premier could only submit that the method outlined by him and the figures detailed in his own presentation were the correct ones.

Dr. McMillan: Was that claim prepared by the Minister of Agriculture, ever presented?

Premier Saunders, I tell you I never saw the claim until I returned from Ottawa, but I presented this memorial I have already read, and that is our substantial claim.

The Premier commended the road work of the Public Works Department. Where the Conservatives only gravelled one mile of road, this government he said, gravelled 17 miles. They placed over 400 tons of Island gravel and it was hoped to place even more than that.

A tribute was paid by the Premier to Mr. and Mrs. Bonnell in connection with their long and efficient service at Falconwood Hospital.

The Premier expressed the wish that he could increase the salaries of all the school teachers and civil servants. However, a surplus of only $3,000 would not go very far in that connection. The Education Commission has filed its report, copies of which are now available for the people. A delegation of the Teachers Federation waited on the Government the other day and expressed their hearty approval of the commission's report.

"We are going to try to implement the recommendations contained in that report, so far as we possibly can," the Premier said. "I am not going to say that we shall follow out the suggestion that we do away with all taxes on real estate and personal property. These are things that have to be looked into. So far as this Government is concerned their report came down very late. We only received it a few days before the House opened and immediately following that it was sent to the printers, and the day that the report came back it was tabled. We have not yet as a Government, had an opportunity of discussing that report, and I so told the Teachers Federation of his practical knowledge of certain phases discuss it without prejudice. but tomorrow we are to meet them again."

Revised Accounting

The Premier read a report submitted by Mr. Hart, external auditor, on a revised system of accounting. A summary of the recommendations made by the auditor follows:

Treasury Department: Centralizing the cash receipts.

Tax Division: A complete accounting system.

Falconwood Hospital: Cash system, revision of the patient's ledger, handling of sale of farm produce, etc. and the charging of patient's board.

Educational Department: Discontinuing the practice of defraying examination expenses out of the fees collected.

Agriculture Department: Vital Statistics fees turned in to the Treasury intact.

Motor Vehicle Branch: Discontinuing the handling of cash by the clerks and several changes made in the method of handling license applications to speed up the work.

Public Works Department: A complete system of accounting for the Government Garage. Discontinuing the handling of revenue. The proper authorization of the sale of materials.

Premier Saunders then discussed the Technical School, criticising the Conservatives for taking off the poll tax which would have more than paid for maintaining this institution. He criticised also the quality of cattle maintained at Falconwood Farm under the preceding Conservative administration. They were so poor "you couldn't sell them, you couldn't get rid of them, you couldn't drive them away." The present Minister of Agriculture, on the other hand, established the finest herd of Holsteins that was available.

The Prohibition question came in for a lengthy review, though the Premier added little to what had already been said on this matter during the Draft Address. He repeated many of his own statements and the statements of Messrs. Lea, Allen, LePage and others. The "speakeasy" in Summerside that he had referred to in his previous address had been closed he announced; also a livery stable that had been giving trouble to the enforcement officers. "We have bootleggers who are hard to excel," he declared; but the Government was cleaning conditions up.

The Premier went at length into the record of ex-Prohibition Inspector Brooks which he blamed for engaging one McNeill, a prohibition informer whose trial for perjury was recently reported.
