Medical service is free. A medical officer is on duty at fixed hours daily. Seriously ill or injured men admitted to hospital.

The work is proceeding satisfactorily, and there seems to be harmony in the camp. One day a large group of men staged a two-hour strike in protest against the quality of the stew dished out for dinner but they returned to work promptly after hearing a 25-minute speech from Brigadier Constantine.

The brigadier told them the matter would be adjusted. He made it clear also that dissatisfied persons were not compelled to remain in camp.

ing the Ode and repeating the pledge in Unison. The minutes of the previous annual meeting and last yearly meeting were then read, approved and signed. Roll call was conducted by "My Earliest recollect-the President, Mrs. McSwain made a few words of encouragement to the members, thanking them for their co-operation and for the work accomplished during the year.

The Secretary then gave the final account of the year, which was approved and adopted. It was seconded that a letter of condolence be sent to a sister member Mrs. John McDonald. Then the election of officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. Allen

Wide Approval
In Nobel Award
To Galsworthy (LONDON, Dec. 10.—It is doubtful if any award of the Nobel Prize for Literature has been received with more wholehearted approval in England than the award which has just been made to John Galsworthy. It so happens that a series of revivals of his plays has just been staged with great success at the Garrick Theatre. "The Silver Box," indeed, his earliest stage piece, has been presented several times during the last two or three years, and is even now running at the Little Theatre. Galsworthy is 66 years of age. It was in 1898 that his first novel, "Jocelyn," appeared, but he was not recognized as a great novelist until "The Man of Property," the first of a sequence known as "The Forsyte Saga," made its appearance in 1906. As a picture in detail of middle-class life in the late Victorian and Edwardian eras the sequence was acclaimed with enthusiasm.

"To this day the novelist knows not how he begins, or why, or how he goes on," Galsworthy declared in a recent lecture at Oxford, "he is only sure that there is no rule, and that the process of character creation varies not only from novelist to novelist but even in himself. The last few years have shown a tendency in the novel to forsake individualism for a kind of communism. The species as a whole has become a novelist's life, or object of detestation, rather than selected specimens of the species.
The experiment is extremely interesting—especially to those who are making it."

Writing two years ago Hermond Ould said of Galsworthy: "The Galsworthy of today is not regarded with great excitement by young intellectuals, and would not ordinarily be prescribed for retarded adolescents, but the Galsworthy of 20 years ago was something new in literature. The clean style of his writing, direct to the verge of baldness; the reticence, quietness, and, above all, the presence of a social conscience, never insisted upon but always evident, were a tonic to young men of a generation rendered uneasy by the onslaughts of science on religion and temperamentally unable to succumb to a philosophy of hedonism.

John Masfield, Maxim Gorky, and Paul Valery, the French poet and critic, had been mentioned in the running for the prize now awarded Galsworthy. The value of the prize this year is about 172,000 kroner, just more than $45,000 at the present exchange rate.

The Eel-Grass Situation
On The Atlantic Coast

By Harrison F. Lewis, Chief Federal Migratory Bird Officer, Ontario and Quebec, National Parks of Canada, Department of the Interior.

II.
Reports obtained from the Pacific Station of the Biological Board of Canada and from the Interior Department's chief bird protection officer for western Canada indicate that the growth of eel-grass is still normal on the coast of British Columbia. Inquiries concerning the condition of eel-grass on the west coast of Europe have resulted up to the present time, in the receipt of three reports from European botanists, Mr. A. D. Cotton, of the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew, England, wrote to me on October 24th of this year that he did not know of any reduction of the growth of Zostera in England, and Dr. Frederick C. E. Borgesen, of the Botanical Museum at Copenhagen, Denmark, writing on the 28th of October last, definitely stated that, apart from normal minor changes of a local character, there had been no alteration in the growth and abundance of Zostera in his country.

Professor C. Sauvageau of the Faculty of Sciences, Bordeaux, France, has sent me a copy of a letter dated October 28th, 1932, that he received, in response to enquiry, from Charles Perez, Director of the Laboratory of Roscoff, on the west coast of France fronting on the English Channel, which is of quite a different tenor, and which, translated, reads as follows:
"We have noticed at Roscoff the same disappearance of Zostera.
From November, 1931, to January, 1932, all the beds of it in this region diminished and about March and at the time of the Easter vacation, all those that we could see in front of the laboratory, at Cal-lot, Penpoll, etc., were entirely denuded; not a leaf, an absolute desert.

In the course of the summer they started to grow again, but they were still very poor in September, there were still large areas entirely bare or nearly so.

"Ed. Fischer has observed the same disappearance in the region about St. Servan and Dr. Lefranc gave us similar information concerning the southern coast of the Department of Finistère.

"No doubt it is a case of a general bacterial infection; it is strange to observe that the epidemic has had such an extensive geographic dispe sal.

"Dr. Magrou, of the Pasteur Institute, gathered at Roscoff some of the diseased leaves, with black areas on them in order to try to locate bacteria in them. I do not know whether he had any results.

"On the other hand, I think that Ed. Fischer intends to mention this epidemic in a note that he will publish in the Bulletin of the St.
Servan Laboratory."
"This is all I can tell you at present."
It would appear from this communication that a disappearance of Zostera plants, with symptoms resembling those observed on the eastern coast of this continent, took place last winter on the coast of extreme western France, around practically the entire Department of Finistère, as well as westward on the coast bordering the English Channel at least as far as St.
Servan. As it is believed to require about eight months for surface water to drift across the northern 2 dozen clams in shell.

1 pint rich milk.
1 tablespoonful butter.
1 pint water.
1 tablespoon of flour.
1 tablespoon celery—chopped.
1 tablespoon parsley—chopped.
Salt and pepper to taste.
Make a white sauce of the flour, butter and milk. Scrub clams thoroughly, open them and wash in their own liquor. Chop very fine Strain the liquor and add to the water. Add the chopped parsley and celery and cook for ten minutes. Add the chopped clams and cook five minutes longer. Press through a sieve and add to white sauce. Season with salt and pepper to taste and serve hot.
