(It had been reported to the Board of Trade that Ottawa had been contemplating changing the Nova Scotia terminus from Carriboo to Pictou, making the trip "more costly and longer.")

INVESTIGATE ORIGIN OF LOBSTERS—Royal Canadian Mounted Police were investigating the whereabouts of the unidentified man, it was reported last night, from whom the Provost family procured the lobster which resulted in the death of two of the Provost children at Emerald Road, four miles from Tignish, Dr. J. A. Johnston of Tignish verified yesterday the report that the cause of the death of the two victims, Mary Mildred Provost and her brother, seven and nine years of age, was "poisoning as a result of eating canned lobster." Rest of the family, he said, were making satisfactory recoveries. The lobster, it was said, was not the product of an established cannery, but was believed to be of the "bootleg variety."

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER—A pleasant evening was spent recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. Wood when their daughters, Mrs. J. Harold Partidge and Lorena Sampel, were joint hostesses in honor of Miss Alice Partidge who was a principal in a happy event on Monday, Oct. 3rd. The bride to be was ushered to a pretty decorated chair by her hostesses where a ribbon was pinned and she was showered with confetti. To the strains of Lohengrin Bridal chorus played by Miss Rena Wood the miniature bride and groom Anna and Joyce were accompanied by their fathers, Mr. and Mrs. Partidge entered the room wheeling a decorated baby carriage laden with gifts which were opened by the bride-to-be, the humorous verses being read by Mrs. Arthur Roper. The bride-to-be was thanked her many friends for the beautiful gifts. Refreshments were then served by the hostesses after which music and singing brought the evening to a close. The guests departed for their homes wishing Alice every future happiness.

Miss Hazel Malone, accompanied by Miss Betty Gillespie motored to Halifax on their holidays.

Issues Ringing Challenge To Young Men

Mr. J. O. Hyndman Discusses Needed Harbor Improvements.

Mr. J. O. Hyndman, City addressed the Gryo Club on the subject of "Harbor Improvements" at the regular weekly dinner meeting of the club held last evening in the Canadian National Hotel. He issued a ringing challenge to the young men of the city and province to interest themselves in affairs which would make for improved conditions in transportation, in marketing, in the study of the needs of the province and in the study of the conditions of the people, the problem of unemployment would be materially relieved. He went back to 1911 and described his attitude to affairs generally and explained that a statement made by a public man altered his viewpoint. He intended to study the problem of Prince Edward Island in Confederation and from that time has devoted a great deal of energy in an effort to secure for the province the things which were guaranteed, in black and white, at the time of Confederation. He related the story of the recommendation of some of the Duncan Commission and some of the representations made to the Rowell Commission. He discussed the great public and governmental apathy existing here, and that while he wanted it distinctly understood he was not talking politics, he appealed to young men of the type found in the Gryo Club to make a greater study of our problems and then to unite and press for action on the part of those in authority. He described the steps leading up to the survey of Charlottetown Harbor and outlined in detail the disadvantages and requirements of the Province. He felt sure that if the improvements were fully made that more and larger boats would call here, bringing more wealthy visitors, enabling us to transport our goods at cheaper rates to the markets of the world. This activity on the waterfront would mean more employment and he hoped, a solution of the serious problem of unemployment and with which many capable organizations as well as governments are attempting to cope.

Remarks of appreciation were expressed by Dr. P. A. Graelman and Messrs. F. A. S. Jones and S. F. Paoli, Jr.

Member, Mr. James M. Clise, was initiated. Plans for the presentation of the Concert Artists and Entertainers next week were completed. Mr. W. Earle Reardon was the chairman.

man or Czechoslovak sovereignty is to be plainly defined on the basis of their predominant German character by an international commission, whereas Hitler's first demand was the freedom of German waters in districts where Czechoslovakia had no jurisdiction. Again, he pointed to the difference between occupation of the plebeian areas by German and Czech troops and Hitler's ultimatum, and the occupation by international forces, as arranged at Munich.

He made these other points:— 1. Voting rights under the plan of the Saar Plebiscite, which probably will be done by small administrative areas. Under Hitler's ultimatum Czechoslovakia had feared that voting would be by large areas which would be by their disadvantage.

2. Czechoslovak may take foodstuffs, goods, cattle, and raw materials from the Sudetenland, although they must not damage permanent property. 3. An International Commission lays down the conditions of Czechoslovak evacuation from Sudeten German areas. Under Hitler's ultimatum demands that conditions would have been up to the Germans and Czechoslovakia. The Munich agreement contains "certain very valuable provisions" which were not in the Godesberg Memorandum—presumably meaning guarantees for the evacuated Czechoslovakia and provisions for adjusting other minority quarrels.

Catastrophe Averted

Thus, the Prime Minister contended, the four powers had found "a way of carrying out a difficult and delicate operation by discussion and agreement, which would have averted a catastrophe which would have ended civilization as we know it."

He announced a £10,000,000 loan (approximately $50,000,000) for the economic rehabilitation of the Czech state. An additional request for a loan of £20,000,000 will be taken up later. The Prime Minister closed with an expression of hope that the general disarmament would follow but he made it plain disarmament would not be by Great Britain alone. Unilateral action had been tried by this country, he said, and had been found lacking. He renewed his faith on "removal of those suspicious and animosities which have so long poisoned the air." Now that Czechoslovakia had the fleet) for many days. I thought it was the kind of language Hitler would have used for Herr Hitler, I understood.

"I tried to swallow the Munich terms, but they stuck in my throat."

He sobbed and then went on to protest against the granting of Germany's demands that some of her troops should be allowed to enter the Sudetenland last Saturday.

The German Government having got their man down were not to be deprived of kicking him."

He also protested against Mr. Chamberlain signing the "no more war" declaration with Hitler without consultation with the cabinet.

"This is not the way the foreign affairs of the Empire should be conducted," he said.

As the result of the Munich agreement he said "we were left with the loss of prestige and also a tremendous commitment as for the first time in history, we agreed to defend a frontier in central Europe."

The House recessed at 11.10 p. m. until tomorrow.

A government motion was placed on the table late tonight declaring that this House approved the policy of His Majesty's Government which was averted in the recent crisis and supports their efforts to securing lasting peace."

The motion will be moved on Wednesday when the debate ends. It was signed by Mr. Chamberlain, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Malcolm MacDonald, Colonial Secretary, who led respectively, the Conservative, National Liberal and National Labor groups in the National government.

The effect of this motion was to forestall the opposition understood would call for a general peace and disarmament conference.

Clement Attlee, Labor leader, tonight on this question when he followed the Prime Minister. After referring to the "betrayal" of Czechoslovakia, he expressed the opinion the crisis of last week could have been averted if France, Britain and Russia had made a strong declaration against Hitler.

The Labor Leader asserted British and France had sustained a great defeat in the game of power politics.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, spoke briefly. He stated the government's "foreign policy brought us to the edge of war and that policy can never be the foundation for lasting peace."

Lord Halifax, Foreign Secretary, who spoke in the House of Lords, explained why Soviet Russia was excluded from the four-power conversations at Munich.

He said:— "I shall be asked why we consented to the omission of Russia, so closely connected with Czechoslovakia, from the discussions. I will venture to repeat here what I said to the Soviet Ambassador a few days ago. "Five days ago it seemed to us vital if war was to be avoided, somehow or another to get matters onto the basis of negotiation. "But if we were to face the facts—and nothing was to be gained and everything was to be lost by not facing them—we were obliged to recognize that in the present circumstances, the heads of the German and Italian governments would almost certainly, at least without much preliminary discussion, be reluctant to sit in conference with a Soviet representative, and accordingly our principal purpose was to assure negotiations, we were
