CHARLOTTETOWN needs man the helm who will take a firm stand in municipal affairs in a businesslike manner instead of haphazardly. Men who have made a good job of running their own businesses should be given the opportunity of managing the business of the city. One of them is Keith Rogers. Elect him mayor next Wednesday. 2-7-46.

relieved of her harness and to cater joyfully to the waiting place below the mill. The thrashing, today was wonderful that it was a mixture of "The Sun is cold, Ellen" and much as we appreciated such thoughtfulness on our behalf, there came a regret when memories of the work of one or two years of us with the far-off, to be sure, but it was alone today, even James was missing. Jeanie called in the afternoon, when she had been out about her chores and like James we "intended" that the three women-kind had been among last year's helpers.

If the twilight that came quickly to shut out the grey of today's day, brought the end of a day of thrashing for the time, it allowed small relaxation to the men at Alderley. I saw a lantern from the house on the hill meet the one that went down our short-cut and the two disappeared within the mill. There by their light the old wheel was set to turning, and crushing is being done. As I await James' return, here alone by the lamp-light, I recall January's days and go over them one by one. It has been a pleasant month. It may be that the gale which came with a thaw, to disturb us one night, was only the better to point out the delights of the fine weather. Snow fell but not in any great quantity nor in a disturbing manner but smoothly—a counterpane over hill and valley. Frost? But only clear and invigorating. Farmers were able to go busily to work or on any excursions that appealed to them.

TO WARD 5 VOTERS

LADIES & GENTLEMEN:

Responding to the request of many Business Men, I am again nominating to contest this Election as your Councillor.

Having spent six months in the Council I have gathered information that could be useful in Civic Administration. It has always been my endeavor to render the best possible service with the limited time at my disposal.

If elected I can assure Ward 5 and the Citizens in general that I will put my experience at their disposal in any decision that will have to be made.

Egypt. — Dr. J. Philadelpho de Barros Azavedo, Brazil. Dr. Charles de Visscher, Belgium. Iniro Pabala Alvaro, Mexico. Dr. Milovan Zoric, Yugoslavia. Alejandro Alvarez, Chile. Dr. Jose Gustavo Guerrero, Salvador.

Dr. Guerrero was the last president of the old League of Nations International Court, being elected to that position in 1931 and remaining in it until the war broke out in 1939 and brought an end to the court's activities.

Judges' salaries have been set tentatively, at approximately $30,200 annually. Mr. Read, a veteran of the First Great War and a Rhodes scholar from Columbia University, New York, was appointed to the External Affairs Department in 1929. He had the rank of ambassador and one of his first tasks in Ottawa was donning a long warm cloak of fur, white of course and a matching cap of ermine, and with eyes that have seen much in the ways of joy and sorrow as well as hope for the future of this queer and sad and often nice old world. He turns to take his departure. I was afraid James would not be here to stand with me rather wistfully at 10 days of running their own businesses should be given the opportunity of managing the business of the city. One of them is Keith Rogers. Elect him mayor next Wednesday. 2-7-46.

WORKINGTON, England — (OP)—While inspecting a new pit shaft near Workington, Cumberland, Andrew Templeman, a London geologist, and John McCoabe, of Beaton near here, were overcome by gas fumes and died. ordered discontinuance in the United States of the use of wheat in the direct production of alcohol and beer and imposed limitations on the use of other grains. The action was part of a new food-conservation program.

Official circles in Ottawa made no comment on President Truman's announcement. Up to now, only low grade wheat and corn, when available, has been used in the manufacture of alcohol in Canada.

One problem in the maximum flow of wheat overseas will be transportation. During the autumn, with the Great Lakes open, the movement of wheat to seaports exceeded shipping space. It is understood, and a substantial surplus was built up at the deep water

Rain Falls In Much Of Eastern Canada

(By The Canadian Press)

Eastern Canada yesterday experienced its second major thaw of the winter, and rain fell in many sections from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic Coast. Further west, residents of the Prairie Provinces shivered in sub-zero weather.

Rain started falling yesterday around noon in the Montreal district, and by midnight was pouring down heavily. The temperature climbed from sub zero readings of Tuesday to about 35 above last night.

The weather in the Quebec district was mild and a mixture of rain and snow was falling last night. Wednesday some hail was reported.

A freezing rain fell over Nova Scotia today with the temperature around 23 degrees. The weather was moderate and cloudy in New Brunswick. A storm was reported on the way toward Nova Scotia from the south, but it had not yet reached the Province.

Streets were slippery in Ottawa following a rain fall that lasted for the greater part of Wednesday. However the forecast promised colder weather with snow carried by a strong west to northwest wind from the south. A light rain fell last night. Strong southwest to west winds are expected to bring colder weather with snow flurries. In Toronto the temperature climbed to 40 degrees at noon. In Northern Ontario and Georgian Bay districts, colder weather was forecast.

In the Prairie Provinces temperatures of 10 below were reported from the Regina district. Throughout Manitoba and Saskatchewan the weather was clear, cold and windy.

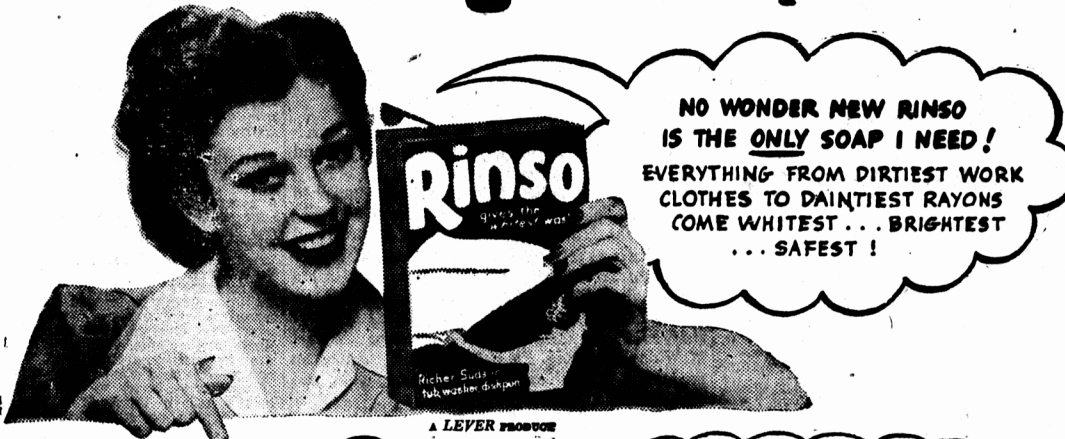

On the extreme West Coast, Vancouver citizens basked in clear mild weather under bright sunshine. The temperature stood at 45 above yesterday.
