disciple of the flowing bowl. In the course of events, discovered that a certain number of kegs of cider were stored in a warehouse in the western end of the town; other discoveries, made somewhat later, were that the doors of the warehouse were securely locked; that the walls of the storehouse were thin; that the floors of the warehouse was also thin. With this information as a working guide, the thirty one secured the exact position of some of the kegs, and crawling beneath the warehouse bored a hole through floor and keg, taking the complete contents of the keg away with him; some inside his waistcoat and the rest in two large pails.

—ARTISTIC DISPLAY.—One of the most interesting window displays shown in Summerside for some time is a special pump display in the hardware window of R. T. Holman Limited. The foreground shows a dry, arid stretch of soil, principally shore sand, occasionally relieved by an empty "square-face" or some other irrelevant part. The display is most artistic and unusual.

STRANGE SIGHTS SEEN ON AMAZON.

NEW YORK, June 14.—A terrible tale of the torrid zone was unfolded by Captain R. H. Terrible yesterday on the arrival of the Booth Line steamer Deuts, which plies between New York and Manaus, a port about 1,000 miles up the Amazon River. The skipper vowed by marine and other saints that never had he seen sights so strange.

On a river which empties into the Amazon, near Manaus, he said he saw myriads of electric eels, so strangely charged with electricity that the broad bosom of the stream was flooded with light and the crew were able to read their pocket Bibles by the glow, which was estimated at forty watts per eel. When seamen brought some of these high voltage eels on deck, Captain Terrible said the ship's dynamo were short circuited and there was the dickens to pay until the eels were disconnected.
