Large Audience Greet Candidates At Afton Hall

The same Liberal speaker last March in an address before the Life Insurance Presidents' Association in New York. At that time he had admitted that no country in the world was in a better financial or trading condition than the Dominion of Canada.

Continuing, Mr. McLure cited further trade figures, refuting Mr. Mackenzie King's arguments in the House of Commons. He instanced how the Liberal party had lined up solidly against the Empire trade agreements and quoted the Liberal leader as having threatened, if elected, to wipe out these agreements. "No greater misfortune could befall this country," he declared amid applause.

Dealing next with unemployment, Mr. McLure showed how this great problem had been dealt with by both governments. Mr. King when in power had taken the stand that it was not a federal but a provincial question and subsequently summed up his attitude in his memorable "not a five cent piece" speech in Parliament, which shocked the country and brought indignation protests from one end of Canada to the other. Mr. McLure contrasted this selfish attitude with the huge expenditure made under the Bennett Government in aid of unemployment in every Province.

He also reviewed the history of Old Age Pensions, showing how the scheme had been adopted successfully in this Government, thanks to the Bennett Government's action in increasing the federal contribution from 50 to 75 per cent.

Dealing with beneficial legislation of special interest to the Province, Mr. McLure cited the extensive relief programme, also the change in the star ferry operating system, the reduction of auto rates on the car ferry, and the increase of $150,000 in annual provincial subsidy payment. The three latter measures were based on recommendations of the Duncan Commission in 1926.

Mr. McLure in 1930 had claimed the 100 per cent, but it was left for the Bennett Government to effect these improvements. Another unimplemented recommendation of the Duncan Commission now being made, was a thorough survey of the harbours of the Province. "We have no Beatharnos scandal, or anything of that nature," said Mr. McLure. "The five years of Conservative Government were devoted to keeping Canada on an even keel, and that Premier Bennett and his government had done, under the most trying conditions this country has ever faced."

Mr. McLure concluded amid applause by inviting all his hearers to be present at Premier Bennett's address in Charlottetown on Saturday night.

MR. J. H. MYERS

A vivid picture of the difficulties facing Canadian farm exporters when the Bennett Government took office in 1930 was presented by the next speaker, Mr. Myers, who cited the long list of tariff increases by foreign countries, which came into effect under the Mackenzie King regime.

The history of the Empire trade agreements was then given, briefly but effectively. A strong point made in this connection by the speaker was the fact that even with the 10 per cent tariff preference which the Bennett Government obtained for Canadian producers in the British market, owing to our distance from that market we are still little more than on an equality with foreign European producers who are served by but a few hundred miles from Great Britain. Doing away with our tariff preference, as Mr. King proposes to do, would simply mean the wiping out of the British market for Canadian agricultural products.

The prospects of trade agreements being made shortly between Canada and the United States was next dealt with. Mr. Myers emphasized particularly the high U. S. tariff on seed potatoes and stated that he and Mr. McLure had asked the Prime Minister that in any reciprocal agreement potatoes, fox fur and other island products would be included. Assurance had been received that these items would be emphasized.

A voice outside the hall shouted: "What about your milk cheques?" Mr. Myers promptly retorted: "I am not afraid to face any audience in this Province and talk milk cheques."

Steel Mill Operations Surge Upward

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Following a recession of half a point last week the trend of steel mill operations has turned upward with the result that ingot output this week has risen 1 point to 52 1-2 per cent, says "Iron Age." The Pittsburgh rate is up 2 cents to 46, the highest level of the year to date, and operations in other principal districts also are higher, the lower Ohio River zone rising 11 points to 82 per cent.

The principal exception to the trend is the Cleveland-Lorain district where operations have dropped 7 points because of a decrease in demand for automobile steel, although automotive demand now is reported to be increasing moderately.

Fire Prevention Week Oct. 6-12

MONCTON, N.B., Oct. 2.—Fire Prevention Week, which has been proclaimed by the Dominion Government, October 6th-12th, will be observed throughout the Canadian National Railways system special emphasis being placed on this phase of railway operations.

In accordance with instructions issued by the Vice-president and General Manager of the Atlantic Region, W. U. Appleton, a special check will be made throughout the region with a view to searching out of possible fire hazards and their removal. Constant inspection is made of fire prevention appliances on locomotives such as smoke box and ash pan nettings, to prevent the escape of sparks.

The very few fires which can be traced to locomotives is striking proof of the effectiveness of these fire prevention appliances and the thoroughness with which inspection is maintained.

Pimpernel Born in Underground Station

(By The Canadian Press) LONDON, Oct. 1.—Stories of London in the 90s—the humors and the calamities of the properties, the rich street scene, the robust entertainment of the theatres and music-halls—were told with gusto one day recently at a Book Lundy by the Baroness Orczy.

This notable woman writer was to speak on "The history of a gay adventurer," but it appeared that the adventurer was not to be the elusive Pimpernel but the author herself. In time, however, she came to Pimpernel. He was born in the Temple Underground station.

"Surely the dullest and most dismal place in the world," one winter afternoon when the Baroness was waiting for a train. She had a sudden vision of him "with his ruddy glass and his smile," so she rushed away home to transfix him on paper.

Twelve publishers refused her book, but Fred Terry made a play of it, and finally an old fisherman in Cornwall, to whom a small publisher submitted all manuscripts in order to gauge the public taste, gave her approval and the book appeared.

THE SUCCESSION CHANGES

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The forthcoming marriage of the Duke of Gloucester to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott will make an interesting alteration in the succession to the throne and in precedence.

The future Duchess of Gloucester will replace the Duchess of Kent as "fourth lady of the land" because in the direct line of succession the Duke of Gloucester comes before the Duke of Kent. The present precedence in the royal family is:

Male: The King, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, the Duke of Gloucester, the Duke of Kent. Female: The Queen, the Princess Royal, the Duchess of York, the Duchess of Kent and Princess Elizabeth.

The succession to the throne runs: The Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, Princess Elizabeth, Princess Margaret Rose, the Duke of Gloucester, the Duke of Kent, the Princess Royal.

YORK DEFEATS DEWSBURY LONDON, Oct. 2.—(C.P.)—York defeated Dewsbury 8-5 in semi-final match for the Yorkshire Rugby League cup today. In a similar game for the Lancashire Cup Wigan gained a 9-4 decision over Oldham.

St. Helens gained an 11-2 victory over Swinton in a league fixture.

British Trades Commissioner To West Indies

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—On his way to Port of Spain, Trinidad, to take over his new duties as British Trades Commissioner to the West Indies, W. D. Lambie sailed from here today aboard the Lady Rodney. He was accompanied by Mrs. Lambie and the two children.

Mr. Lambie was named deputy trades commissioner in Winnipeg in 1930 after serving in New Zealand for several years. Since then he has spent about a year on special duty in Montreal and from April of this year to last month he was acting British trades commissioner in Toronto.

Boxers Seek Reprieve Of Bousquet

(C. P. Cable By Guardian's Special Wire) LONDON, Oct. 2.—The Council of the National Union of Boxers today wrote Sir John Simon, Home Secretary, asking him to advise the King to exercise his prerogative and reprieve Raymond Bousquet.

Bousquet was convicted of murder last month and sentenced to be hanged. Formerly of Winnipeg, he also was known as Del Fontaine.

The letter said that some time before Bousquet was charged, his associates believed he was suffering from "punch-drunkness." It was well-known to the profession that this condition not only affected his ability as a boxer but had a deleterious effect on his conduct and habits in everyday life.

Ancient Rights Attend Accused In Motor Death

(Special To The Guardian) LONDON, Eng., Oct. 2.—Three thousand marksmen representing many countries attended the Olympic pistol shooting championships held at Rome yesterday. Captain R. G. Pickrell of Winnipeg, Canada, a Canadian National Railways policeman, and twenty other competitors registered possible.

The final shoot off was a disappointment to the Canadian. It called for six shots in four seconds and Pickrell had a misfire. He finished tenth in the world list of pistol shots in the final, however, Pickrell qualified in the Maitre Tiroir competition which called for sixty shots at fifty metres, gaining a gold badge with eleven points to spare.

admitted within the Bar. He took his stand on a small raised dais just behind the counsel, vis-a-vis the Lord High Steward. The ceremonial, as governed by all precedents, prescribed that the Earl would now make three reverences, and kneel until permitted to rise. What happened was that the Earl bowed thrice, and remained standing with his head and shoulders down, exactly in the attitude of a schoolboy 'giving a back'; and inasmuch as he kept on looking up momentarily to see how long the posture was to last, it would not have surprised those of us who were already bewildered by the affair if Lord Halsbury had sternly ordered him to 'tuck in his tuppety.'

"But Lord Halsbury, instead, informed the Earl that he would now be arraigned, whereupon the Clerk of the King's Bench inquired, 'How say you, my Lord, are you guilty of the felony with which you stand charged or not guilty?' His counsel was up in a moment, with the argument that there was no offence disclosed in the depositions about the marriage in Nevada, as the Act applied to bigamous marriages committed within the King's dominions. This objection was over-ruled and that precipitated the end of the trial. For the Earl announced: 'Under the advice of counsel, I plead guilty.'

"Standing in anything but a ceremonious attitude, with his hand on his hip, the Earl made a manly and telling explanation of the whole dismal circumstances of the case. The peers retired to their own chamber to consult in private. They were absent about a quarter of an hour. The luckless Earl was brought in again by Black Rod. Lord Halsbury plied Pelton upon Ossa by adjusting a huge black three-cornered hat on top of his great wig, and yet even then remained impressive as he passed upon the noble bigamist the sentence of three months in Holloway Gaol."

Judges There to Help "Directly in front of Lord Halsbury sat, on a sofa, which in legal phraseology is always known as a 'sofa,' eight or ten of his Majesty's judges, in powdered wigs and scarlet robes. Theoretically here to advise their judicial superior, the Lord High Steward, on abstract points of law, they—like Gilbert's peers in 'Iolanthe'—did nothing in particular, and did it very well. On five rows of scarlet chairs, ranged to the right and left of the Lord High Steward, sat the peers. They had assembled at first in the House of Lords itself, all wearing their official mantles of scarlet cloth, lined with white taffeta, and scored with rows of ermine and gold lace,—four bars for dukes, down to two for the barons. They had entered the scene of the trial two by two—for which method there was, of course, archaic, and even Ark-ic, precedent.

Then entered to Lord Halsbury a brilliant figure in military uniform, carrying a long white wand, the herald of a billiard-rue. This was the Gentleman-Usher of the Black Rod, and the white staff was the emblem of the Lord High Steward's appointment to the office, which the King—having received it from the Lord Chamberlain—had handed to Black Rod for production on the present occasion.

"Lord Halsbury nodded at it, as one recognizes a passing acquaintance; it was held in position at the right of the throne, and the ceremonial was now fairly set going. But the procedure had not advanced sufficiently to require the accused Earl within the Bar, and he had to kick his heels without for a time, the tribunal ostentatiously ignoring his presence.

"The first effect of all this had been to give one the sensation of having gone back a few centuries since breakfast. But, looking round again, the eye caught too many notes of the 20th century to harbor longer this sentiment of the long remote. There was the peccant Earl himself, very modern indeed in a grey frock coat suit and red necktie; there were the solicitors and counsel for the prosecution and the defence.

"At length the accused Earl was

Reduction In Australia Primage Duties

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—Supplementary information available today at Department of Trade and Commerce shows that Australia in its recent budget has not removed its primage duty of four per cent on newspaper. Cabled advice to the department from Melbourne Sept. 27 indicated that all printing paper was to enter Australia free under the British preference. Information received since shows the primage duty has been removed on printing paper only when used for the production of books of a literary and educational nature, magazines and periodicals.

While Canada will be helped in its book paper exports, this last year amounted to $124,924, whereas the value of newspaper shipped by Canada to Australia was $3,804,751. In the case of book paper the primage duty is removed against all countries.

In the case of crude asbestos the four per cent primage duty is removed in the case of Empire countries and left on against foreign countries. Canada last year exported to Australia $54,899 in crude asbestos. The list of goods on which the four per cent primage duty under the British preference is lifted but left on in the general tariff is long but with the exception of asbestos does not include commodities Canada exports.

Another list comprises goods on which the primage duty of five per cent is left on for foreign countries and removed under the British preference. It includes many scientific instruments, drugs and chemicals, but the only ones in which Canada would be interested are said to be mercerized cotton yarn, artificial silk yarns and canvas fire hose.

Canada does sell some bronzing and metal powders. On this the primage duty of 10 per cent remains against foreign imports and is removed to Empire countries.

Book binders' cloth will have the duty removed to Empire countries and 10 per cent remains against foreign countries. Fire engines will have a five per cent primage duty against Empire countries and ten per cent against Empire countries.
