

One Came Out After
The Other.

Suffered with Boils for Six Months.

Mr. Elie Brazeau, Meadowside Station, Ont., tells of his experience with Boils and Burdock Blood Bitters.

He says:—"In the Spring of 1889 I was continually troubled with boils—one coming after another for about six months. I suffered terribly, and was in a very bad condition. In August I got a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and began to feel better after taking it. I kept on until I had used five bottles, and can truthfully say that I was cured, and have remained so ever since. I have not had the least sign of a boil."

There is nothing like Burdock Blood Bitters for bad blood, boils, pimples, dyspepsia, indigestion, or any trouble arising from the Stomach, Liver, Bowels or Blood.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

While delay and disappointment have so far attended the efforts of Marconi to establish wireless communication and a news service across the Atlantic, the new system is making progress. Hundreds of ships are now equipped with Marconi appliances and talk with each other across long distances. In one or more cases a trans-Atlantic liner has been able to keep up communication with the European or American shore during almost the entire trip across.

Long distances at sea are more easily covered than on land owing to the elevation of the land between the stations. But recently Marconi from the company's station in Cornwall addressed a message to the Italian Minister of Marine at Ancona, Italy which was correctly transmitted as was the Minister's reply. The distance is nearly 1,000 miles, and the Alps lie across the line of transmission. Whether the signals passed over or through the mountains the reader may guess.

Our local interest in the wireless system is increased by the fact that the winter steamers Stanley and Minto are equipped with the Marconi apparatus. They can at any time communicate with each other, but there are unfortunately no stations on either side of the straits by which the steamers can hold communication with the shore. Of course when one of the steamers is in port and the other at sea this difficulty will be obviated, and in case of accident or unforeseen difficulty occurring it will always be convenient and desirable that the boats may be able to communicate with each other.

To the general public the progress of the wireless system is slow, but it is being utilised all over the world, on every sea, in the conduct of the war by sea and land in the far East and in the peaceful interests of commerce, and the humane work of the light house and life-saving stations. Steady progress is making in its development and application and it must not be forgotten that great things—things once thought to be impossible—have already been accomplished by wireless telegraphy.

NEWFOUNDLAND REJOICES.

The Anglo-French treaty which settled the controversies between the two countries as to Egypt, Morocco and the French Shore question in Newfoundland was formally ratified on the 9th instant and went into effect immediately. Newfoundland rejoices in her deliverance from a trouble which had lasted for 200 years. France gives up all her rights on the dry land over 800 miles of shore. The whole coast line is now absolutely British and belongs to Newfoundland for the first time in her history. The titles to land, mining and timber grants will no longer be depreciated by the insertion of the "Treaty clauses" therein. Agriculture and mining will no longer be retarded on that coast by French interference, for to-day that littoral belongs absolutely to Newfoundland. The French have given up for ever their claim to exclude Newfoundland fishermen from fishing along the Treaty Shore. They retain a right of fishing concurrently with Newfoundland fishermen on that shore. But many think they cannot exercise that right profitably, and that they will abandon fishing on the Treaty Shore. Be this as it may Newfoundland rejoices in a great deliverance from a foreign yoke.

A SPECIAL PUT ON.

The indignation felt and expressed by the people and press of Charlottetown over the mail arrangements by the western route was relieved on Saturday by the announcement from Ottawa that a special train will be put on the road between Sackville and Tormentine to leave Sackville daily at 7 o'clock in the morning. The Board of Trade Council had been called to consider the mail service and other matters, but before the members assembled the keen edge was taken off their wrath by the news referred to.

The special train on the Sackville-Tormentine line will go far to put mail matters by that route in good shape. The outgoing mails will make connections as good as in summer time, leave nothing to be desired. The incoming mails will remain at Sackville from 4 p. m. till 7 a. m. the following day and then on ordinary occasions will come forward without delay. They ought to reach this city at, say, 5 o'clock in the afternoon, or some 20 hours later than by the summer service.

We take the earliest opportunity to express our own and the general satisfaction for what has been done to quicken the service by providing the special train from Sackville to Tormentine. That it is to be done quite promptly will lessen the inconvenience that would otherwise have been felt.

With one boat on the western route and almost all the freight coming via Pictou where the Minto is unequal to the task of carrying it, a strong case is made out for a third winter steamer. The reason why the freight comes by Pictou way are two—the higher freight rate and the inadequacy of the means for handling heavy freight by the Tormentine route.

An astronomer in the Lick observatory has discovered a crack in the moon's surface or crust eighty miles long. Whereupon another astronomer in Harvard declares that this is "old news" as he discovered the fact twelve years ago in 1892 that there are thousands of deep cracks in the moon's crust of various lengths. Thus far the rival astronomers. But the plain common people were aware of all this generations ago. If not, why is it that the individual with a "cracked" intellect has been from time immemorial described as "lunatic".

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING.

There are those who would have us believe that it would be a very risky experiment for the city of Charlottetown to own and operate an electric lighting plant. The fact is that a majority of the electric light plants in the British Isles—355 out of 500—are owned and run by the city and town corporations. In these 355 plants a vast amount of capital is invested, much more than in all that are owned by the companies. Some of them are small, earning but from $10,000 to $20,000 a year while the receipts from electric lighting in Edinburgh are $300,000, in Glasgow $380,000, in Manchester $400,000 and in Liverpool $500,000. Yet the Leamington News tells that in the entire list of cities which do their own lighting only one shows a loss, and that was Whitley which made a deficit of $1800 on its first year's working.

Think of the significance of these figures. Three hundred and fifty-five cities and towns which manufacture their own electric light and of these 354 do so at a profit and only one made a loss, and a small loss at that, and in the first year's working, when everything was new and the revenue had not been fully developed. The Leamington News shows that not only in conducting electric light plants, but in public owned gas plants and street railways also the public owned services earned from 1 1/2 to 3 per cent. more on the capital invested than did the companies conducting similar public services. In street railways the earnings of the city owned roads for last year netted $8,000,000 as against $4,800,000 for the company roads. Everywhere throughout the British Isles civic ownership is coming into vogue, simply because it pays and because the people get a better service for less money than under the contract system. Surely there is a lesson in this for Charlottetown however much interested parties may advocate the other side.

The end of the matter in regard to the extension of the rails to the Plant Line wharf is not yet in sight, and the intimation of the station site being located at Hillsboro street will not be accepted by the Board of Trade or the citizens generally until satisfactory reasons are given for deciding against the George Street site. In regard to both these matters there was some plain speaking at the Board of Trade meeting on Saturday. More will yet be heard of these matters.

TWENTY YEARS OF PILES.
