Besides her husband four sons are left to mourn, from six to twenty years of age; also three brothers, Alder in Carleton, James in Cape Traverse, Bert in the Canadian West, and two sisters, Mrs. Mattie Dunn and Miss Mona of Cape Traverse, to all of whom much sympathy is extended. ADDRESSED OTTAWA GYROS—The following news item is from the Ottawa Citizen of April 13: "Canada does not realize and has not taken full advantage of the fact that she is the fur chest of the world, W. Chester McLure, M.P. for Queen's, P.E.I., told the Gyro Club last night. He pointed out that the fur trade was the sixth greatest industry of the world. In tracing the history of the fur trade, he asserted that it had not been for the stimulus of Canada's fur resources it was quite possible that the Dominion would not now be part of the British Empire. At the present time, more than any other business in Canada it was the closest linked to London and continental Europe. Fur conservation, in which Prince Edward Island had done the pioneering, was becoming of increasing importance to the Dominion. The speaker was introduced by G. Harold Burland and thanked by J. Warren York."

SOME CROWD—Mr. Wendell MacDonald, medical student, Edinburgh, has sent his father, Mr. P. J. MacDonald, an illustration of the enormous crowd attending the semi-final football match between the Celtics and the Hearts of Mid-Lothian played at Hampden Park. No fewer than 134,170 persons paid for admission as compared with 131,273 last year. This indicates that whatever may be the condition elsewhere there is no depression so far as sport patronage is concerned in Scotland. It is interesting and satisfactory to learn that Wendell successfully passed his Easter medical examinations, although 50 per cent of his class were "ploughed."

At a meeting of local manufacturers last evening a committee was appointed to investigate the feasibility of organizing a local Manufacturers' Association. The meeting which was called by the Industrial Committee of the Board of Trade and at which Mr. T. E. MacNutt presided, had as its object the considering of ways and means of promoting wider patronage of home industry.

Mr. T. E. MacNutt reported that the Industrial Committee had presented its brief to the Government and had been given a favourable reception. An advertising committee consisting of Messrs. C. L. MacKay and S. T. Green had been appointed at a previous meeting. Reference was made to the woollen industry, for which a great future was in prospect. The matter of an exhibition booth for local manufacturers had been taken up with the Exhibition Association. The Summerside Board of Trade had expressed sympathy with and readiness to co-operate in the move, begun by the Industrial Committee. The Government was willing to co-operate in every way in distributing literature to Women's Institutes, Dairy Associations and farmers' organizations. The suggestion had been made that a Manufacturers' Association be formed.

Mr. C. L. MacKay for the advertising committee reported that it had been considered a good thing to have the manufacturers advertise through the press in an effort to have home industry more widely patronized. He quoted advertising rates. There would be considerable work for an association to do such as collecting of data to present to the Government for distribution.

Mr. Nelson Rattenbury believed that the advertising proposition was a good one. The interest of local manufacturers had been neglected during the last half century. The growing of cereals had been neglected with the result that flour and oatmeal had to be imported. What was produced was fed to the animals.

The situation might be handled by a committee, Mr. Rattenbury believed. Various mediums of advertising were discussed. The opinion was expressed that newspaper advertising was the best medium and that all other methods should be subsidiary.

PROHIBITION RAIDS—Mounted Police conducted 54 searches of premises in Charlottetown during the month of March in connection with the enforcement of the Prohibition Act. Inspector Fripps from time to time receives anonymous letters containing information regarding infringements of the Act. If the writers would sign their names the information would be given much more credence than otherwise. All communications would be held strictly confidential, the Inspector states.

Edmund Arsenault, a young man who was arrested on Monday in connection with the affair, appeared yesterday before Magistrate G. M. Though the interior was filled with smoke, none of the contents was damaged.
