MR. D. NICHOLSON'S SPEECH ON ADDRESS

He Eulogizes the Progress Made by Canada and Criticizes Opposition Members.

Mr. Donald Nicholson, M.P., speaking on the address in the House, said: "I feel that the part that Canada has taken in the most momentous event of history, the war, is a matter of the heartiest congratulations not only to this country, but to the Empire at large. Three years will have elapsed next August since the beginning of the war, and I need not say that the situation today from the Allies' standpoint is infinitely more favorable for a victorious ending of the war than it was when Parliament last assembled. Throughout Canada there is no dislocation of business; prosperity bounds from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in spite of the great conflict. In my own province, in which I am particularly interested, prosperity has prevailed and increased under Conservative rule. In proof of this, Sir, I should like to submit the following facts: The value of field products for the year amounted to nearly $13,000,000. To this may be added the yield of the fisheries, which was $1,000,000, making $14,000,000 worth of products of land and sea which were shared amongst scarcely 100,000 people. Important enterprises in Prince Edward Island which have been originated and carried out by the Conservative Government go to make for greater prosperity and continued development of our resources. In brief I might refer to the completion of the car ferry terminals at Carleton Place giving the Island complete connection with the mainland and the Intercolonial railway and carrying out in their ous and evidently voiced the feelings of all the business men of Halifax. The minister pointed out that within two years, Canada had recruited, equipped and was now maintaining an army of 360,000 men, of whom 250,000 had been sent overseas to fight for their King and country. Besides this we have floated in our own market loans aggregating $200,000,000, with $300,000,000 offered by the public. To quote the minister: "At the outbreak of the war, with our adverse balance of trade and our foreign obligations for interest, it was the obvious policy of the Dominion to borrow as much as possible abroad to prevent gold exports. We consequently borrowed from the Imperial Government for our war expenditures and arranged loans in New York. There came a time, when with our trade balance favorable and our savings increasing, we were able to place the first domestic war loan in Canada. We asked for fifty millions. The public gave us one hundred millions. In September of this year, we asked for one hundred millions. The public gave us two hundred millions."

And in these trenchant words, the minister summed up his address: "What is the important question from a financial standpoint with relation to the war?" And he answered his own question by pointing out that, with the Dominion Government spending $750,000 and the Imperial Munitions Board spending over $1,000,000 a day in this country, the important point is, how is this high expenditure to be met? The Imperial Government cannot pay for munitions made in Canada by drawing cheques on the Bank of England. "It can do so only by establishing dollar credits in Canada, and that can be accomplished only by the people of this country placing large amounts of their money in the hands of the Imperial Government. If we give them the money we can get all the orders we want, and more," said Sir Thomas, "but we must save." Here, Sir, is a striking tribute to the patriotism and generosity of our people, and one that proves, beyond all dispute, how willing we were to spend our means and strength for the Empire. In times like these, when rigid economy is the watchword, it is surprising and most gratifying to find that the revenues of Canada are abundant, and that so far the pinch of war has not been felt to any appreciable extent in this country. In the course of the coming few years, the question of where to obtain sufficient government revenue in Canada is likely to become a matter of serious discussion. If this anticipation is realized, the great public debt which Canada is able to service will not be entirely a misfortune. Somehow, the debt will be met—or the interest on it will—and nothing terrible will happen. The soil of this country is rich enough to give a living to all who are able and ready to put it to the test. Had it not been for the development of war business, yielding in many instances, exceptional profits, the Federal Government would have been put to it to devise taxation to produce the necessary revenue. These profits, it is presumed, will, in the course of a few years, disappear, and the Government will again have to seek other sources of revenue. I also notice, Mr. Speaker, that the Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, has been doing his bit as head of that great department during the war. After the war broke out, the Canadian Government asked the British authorities how they could best help, and suggested recruiting men for the navy as well as for land forces. At first there was no need of these for the navy, but since then, the naval building program has become greatly accelerated and many new ships have been put into service. These have had to be manned and there has been an increasing call for sailors. Today, the Imperial Navy, which has swept the seas, bottled up the German fleet in the Kiel canal, and guarded the whole of the Empire, requires men. The navy at all costs must be maintained at full fighting strength. And the Hon. J. D. Hazen, in an interview, as reported in the press, said: "As soon as Canada was made aware of the change in the situation in regard to the navy, we offered to form an overseas division of the Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve, and I sent them to the Admiralty for service in the Imperial Army. The Admiralty was pleased to accept the offer, and asked if possible that five thousand men be sent, out of which two thousand would be required by the end of the present year. Every recruit Canada gives to this force will mean the saving of one soldier for the British Army, for if the necessary men are not secured, the conscripts at present serving in the army will have to be transferred to the navy."

All this goes to show how admirably the three departments of State, Militia and Marine, have been working together for our own country, in the assistance rendered to the Empire. In the Departments of Public Works and Trade and Commerce, the showing is magnificent, and the Dominion Trade Returns record an astounding national prosperity. The figures for the month of September itself, our first six months of the last fiscal year, show that in six months ending September 30, 1916, the aggregate foreign trade of the Dominion had surpassed high water mark for the best twelve months Canada knew before the outbreak of the war. For the month of September itself, our foreign trade amounted in value to $161,797,951, as against $92,687,862, for the corresponding month of 1915. For the six months from April 1, to September 30, Canada's foreign trade reached the enormous and altogether unprecedented aggregate of $1,145,509,402, as against $550,535,300, for the corresponding period of 1915. Exports for the first six months reached a total of $390,995,024, being almost double the volume of import trade during the corresponding period of last year. In September our imports to

But by far the greatest expansion has been in the export trade of the Dominion. For the six months it has considerably more than doubled, the total being $536,721,514 as compared with $246,392,148 for the six months ending September 30, 1915. The greatest expansion has been in the volume of exports of agricultural products and manufactured goods. During the six months agricultural products to the value of $206,141,036 have been ex-
