20 KILLED

ing taken as far as Morlaix, 40 miles away.

(In the Texas City blast last April 16 some 3,500 persons were killed or injured after the French freighter Grandcamps, also loaded with nitrate, caught fire and exploded turning a city of 15,000 into a raging holocaust.)

The Ocean Liberty, built in 1943, displaces 7,176 tons and is owned by T.S. Bendixen of Lillesand, Norway. The ship's original destination had been Antwerp, but it had been rerouted to Brest because of a Belgian dockworkers' strike.

Many people in Brest, fearing further explosions and outbreaks of fire tonight, fled to safety in the suburbs of Brest in private cars loaded with furniture and personal valuables.

Two Explosions

An eyewitness said there were two explosions. "Strange smoke formations began to rise from the docks. Then there was a great explosion, louder than the first one.

"This explosion demolished furniture in some of the houses near the harbor and shattered windows. As a result of the explosion fires spread to the commercial part of the town."

French naval authorities, who acted promptly when the fire was first discovered but were unable to extinguish the roaring flames, tonight opened fire on parts of the Ocean Liberty's hull in attempt to flood compartments on the burning ship and prevent further explosions. Agence France-Presse reported that the Ocean Liberty had sunk in the Brest roadstead.

It was reported that the nearby hospital of Ponchelet, where many of the dead were taken, had been badly damaged in the explosion. There was no confirmation of casualties in the hospital.

Telephone and telegraph lines were blown down in the blast and the only communication from Brest was the French naval radio network.

SaveTheChildrenFund

According to a report from an official of the Canadian Save the Children Fund, Canadians have contributed $94,441 to help children in the war devastated countries since January 1947. Of this sum, $5,416.99 came from the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in Canada and Newfoundland.

The money has been used to purchase and ship cod liver oil, baby food, cocoa, chocolate powder, powdered milk and clothing to France, Germany and to Sweden where it was distributed among the needy countries such as Poland, Roumania, Hungary, and Austria.

$3,266 was cabled to Britain and $2,000 to China for general relief.

In addition, 266 cases of good used clothing, shoes, towelling and sheeting worth approximately $1500. has been packed and shipped from January to July to Britain, Europe and China.

The desperate need still continues. Mrs. Nicholas Lemtugov, a social service worker returning from Europe, says: "Warm clothing is needed everywhere — sweaters, scarfs, caps, mittens, underwear, stockings and shoes. Everywhere there is a shortage of milk, eggs, sugar and fats. In Finland, the rations are very grim. We shared a school lunch which consisted of one item only—a bowl of very thin gruel. The principal diet is potatoes, cereal and bread—and such bread! It is absolutely tasteless and of a greyish colour.

Time is of the utmost importance—the children in the war devastated areas cannot wait. Send donations to the National Headquarters of the Canadian Save the Children Fund, 108 Bloor St. West, Toronto 5. The Clothing Depot is at 111 Maitland St. Toronto 5.

Thinks M.A.A.U. of C. Should Solicit Aid Of Other Bodies

By John Tracy
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

HALIFAX, July 26 — (CP) — With the Olympics only a year away, any organization which sets itself up as a successor to the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada should solicit the aid of all other sports organizations in arranging track and field meets and encouraging candidates for the Canadian Olympic track and field team, says Alex. (Halifax Herald) Nickerson.

What drew Nick's ire was a press release from Charlottetown by the Maritime branch of the A. A. U. stating that all baseball clubs wishing to participate in the Maritime playoffs this year should register with the A. A. U. this month.

Declaration Of Independence

After quoting a declaration of independence of the A. A. U. from Dr. Cecil MacLean, secretary-registrar of the Nova Scotia Amateur Baseball Association — "We do not recognize the Maritime branch of the Amateur Athletic Union or any similar organization."—Nick says:

"More than 10 years ago Canadian hockey shook itself loose from the enfeebled grip of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and announced that henceforth it would run its own show. Football, tennis, golf and rowing years before had taken the same attitude, but the break with the hockey heads just about finished the A. A. U. which had become an octopus, strangling in many cases, instead of encouraging sport.

"About that time too, baseball in this Province severed relations with the Maritime Provinces branch A. A. U., issuing their own playing certificates instead of paying an extra fee to the A. A. U.

"What had ruined the A. A. U. across Canada was the stubborn determination of that body to attempt to run all major sports instead of concentrating on the one sport—track and field—where its authority was unchallenged."

Keep Your Eye On The Ball

Watching a Halifax and District Baseball League game the other night, Nick got the lowdown on umpire baiters from an expert. Jim Ferrante, scouting Halifax prospects for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"That fellow," Ferrante said, pointing to one of the better known hecklers, "wouldn't play on my club. If he can see that a ball is a couple of inches off the outside corner, then he isn't following the ball from the time it leaves the pitcher's hand. Show me a player who argues with an umpire about a pitch being inches inside or outside the plate, and I'll show you a ball player who doesn't deserve a hit. All he's doing is trying to cover up his own shortcomings by beefing to the umpire."

Continuing, Ferrante said: "Just try it some time. Follow the ball from the time it leaves the pitcher's hand and you'll lose it after it passes your bat. If you see it, it means you must have taken your eyes off the pitch and are looking ahead of the ball. You can't get base hits that way."

Strawberry Track Races

The proprietor, Mr. John Peters, New Glasgow, has decided on August 2nd for his first harness racing event of the season. His many friends and fans are looking forward to another big day's sport.

Most of all the contestants of last year will be there on their polished steel This new track has been nicely renovated this year, the curves and stretches are much improved over last year, and everything has been done under skillful management to eliminate any danger to horses or drivers. Besides this magnificent attraction the fans and horse lovers will have an ideal parking field, with it's natural ground elevation allowing a complete view of the horses from start to finish.

Watch the Guardian for entry list this week. With the probability of three classes, besides a farm horse race of half a mile, by which the young element of this community want to show up the modern farm tractor, which has lightened the burdens of so many Dobbins of the day, this race will surely show a lot of vim and action and add much to the afternoon's sport.

The free-for-all classes on most present day tracks are the main features, and this local free-for-all will be fast and furious, when the starter's bell will dong over the ears of Allie Burnham, Joe Louis, Honey Girl and Betty S., with Dill Pickle, Sampson Royal, besides two from the south side, names unknown to the writer. In this class alone the spectators may be confident of their money's worth.

Other classes will be made up of the cream of the countryside such as King Belina Stanford Hal, Laddie Dale, McIsaac's Kalmuck, Taylor's Budlong, Painter's Bud Axworthy and dozens of others just waiting for the word.

Our friend Harry Keating has something whose name may appear on the score card behind two little ones, Mr. Edw. Turner has been seen on this track with his Clegg two-year-old, a very worthy credit to any man's barn. By the echoes in the air Edward will pass over the word "Go" to some other starter for a few flashes while he takes the mount!

Sport Echoes from Prince County

Everything is now even steven between the Charlottetown Abegweits and the Summerside All Stars. Each has taken rather a rough going over from the other and it's anybody's guess or bet, if you indulge, who will carry the Prince Edward Island colors against the Intermediate champions of the mainland. The Charlottetown boys didn't seem to be the same batters who faced Williams, Powell and Bernard in Charlottetown. Of course the local boys started to boot the ball around very early in the game and just as smooth errorless infield work gives a pitcher confidence and enables him to give his best, so a succession of disastrous miscues will sometimes throw a flinger off his stride.

The most significant fact that came out of the ball game, to this scribe at least, was the fact that Bernard was hit fairly freely during his stay on the mound. This may have been because the speedballer was having an off night, or it may have been because the Capital City wrecking crew were batting over their heads. The other alternative we don't like to think about: that the Charlottetown hitters normally have what it takes to give Bernard a fairly busy evening when he is pitching at his peak.

If they have they're a mighty potent ball club because there is no gainsaying the fact that Bernard, when he is shooting them in there in his top form, has a great deal more than a glove and a prayer and getting base-hits off him isn't exactly like getting money from home without writing for it. The Abegweits may find that out before the play-offs are over.

If they don't we have only one ace left in the hole. That is the big Red Sox hurler, Powell, who is considered in these parts about on a par with Bernard, (each has his loyal supporters who vow that their favorite is the better of the two). Powell has a lot of stuff, very good control, and he generally gets tougher as the innings slip away.

The Summerside Juniors are now two up on their Charlottetown rivals as far as exhibition games are concerned. Both teams seem to have played much better ball than their elders did here in Summerside the same night. Our infield particularly gave a very convincing performance of "The Dance of the Stumblebums" and it must have been acting because the boys ordinarily play much smoother ball than that. Let's forget it. Tomorrow is another day.

We haven't heard a word about our suggestion that the Town should secure while there is still time a community athletic field for the youth of Summerside. We hope the matter is being considered and some action will be taken. It might be financed by a community drive and a recreation hall erected in memory of those of our boys who paid the supreme sacrifice in World War II. This building could be equipped with gymnasium, etc. and the names of the fallen heroes might be written in some prominent place such as on a plaque in the entrance. This type of memorial would be so much more satisfactory than a stone. It would honor the memory of the dead by looking after the interests of the youth for whom they gave their lives. We wager the community would be solidly behind such an enterprise and its achievement would go far towards solving the problem of our juvenile deliquents. Remember, gentlemen, there are two strikes on you now, but you can still hit the grandest home run that has ever been struck for the youth of our town.
