Breaks Were Deciding Factor In Yankees' World Series Triumph

By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (AP) Baseball has wrapped up another warlike world series and in some respects it might be a good idea to leave it right there under cover. The truth is that the 40th classic of the diamond, as it is sometimes called, was not a memorable world series. It drew larger crowds than last year's record attendance, produced a new high player's pool and provided more than $300,000 for war charities, yet it fell short by the one standard on which it can be measured against previous classics, good baseball performance. This, perhaps, was to be expected because both the New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals were of necessity make shift ball clubs and had players on the field who would not have been even on the bench in peacetime. The result was a jittery, jumbled exhibition in which 15 errors were made in five games and the series was decided on breaks rather than baseball skill. The Yankees deserved to win because they had the championship spirit to try to advance in the openings where they occurred. Pitching, which decides most series and which was the one reason the Yankees were established in advance as favorites for this classic, was not the deciding factor as it turned out. The hurling for both sides was good, although scarcely spectacular, and, taking an over all view, the Cardinals had the best of it. But the Red Birds were badly overshadowed in two departments in which they had claimed super-

William Powell returns to familiar ground in "Crossroads," a story of intrigue, love and suspense. Powell is a French diplomat who is married to Miss Lamarr, a triple threat who is a ball player. Bill Dickey's catching was masterful as always and his five games that he pitched were outstanding. The Cardinals' pitching performance was given to Lefty Grove and he was the one who pitched the final out in an inning which the Cardinals' collapse was general, but one of the biggest "busts" certainly was Lou Klein, who batted seventh and knocked in 83 runs in the regular season, but who had an average of .136 at bat in the series. In five games he left 13 runners stranded on the bases, twice making the final out in an inning which the Cardinals' collapse was general, but one of the biggest "busts" certainly was Lou Klein, who batted seventh and knocked in 83 runs in the regular season, but who had an average of .136 at bat in the series. Expect Bill Terry Back In Baseball

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12 (AP)—Behind the scenes in the world series show, there was quite a bit of activity. Bill Terry will be back in baseball as a manager in 1944. Terry, who was the one time boss of the New York Yankees and who quite definitely yet but the likely choice seems to lie between the Chicago Cubs and Brooklyn Dodgers. The latter is the more interesting possibility because it was Terry who once wanted to know "is it possible to win the national league?" That was in '34, and when the shooting was over, the Dodgers had dumped Bill's Giants out of a pennant. Bill's been down on the farm for a year now and apparently is getting the old ure and ready to go again. He was at the series as sports writer but it is known that he saw more than a little bit of things knocking Germany down three or four times, another blow will keep her down. Is any one, he asked, in a position to stand up and say that Russia should declare war on Japan at this time, considering her commitments on the east front? Frankly, he added, he did not know and he doubted if anyone knew enough facts to base an opinion.

F. D. R. Challenges

(Continued from page 1) been getting 30,000 American trucks a year for civilian use, said it was not up to him or any American to suggest when or even if Russia should go to war with Japan and launched into a general denunciation of speeches and political tactics that breed bitterness among Allies in war time. Perhaps the most serious, certainly the most sensational story brought back by the President's return was the statement of Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts that the lives of 1,000,000 American soldiers could be saved if Russia were to invade Siberia and cut off the Japanese bases to bomb Japan. The President was asked if he could dispute this figure and said bluntly that he couldn't. Suppose the President went on, Russia granted use of the bases. It would be necessary to send troops, labor battalions, planes and supplies before they could be operated. Japan, naturally, would try and stop it, perhaps invading Siberia, invading with Russia. But, he continued, is Russia ready for war with Japan at this time? Russia may think that, having knocked Germany down three or four times, another blow will keep her down. Is any one, he asked, in a position to stand up and say that Russia should declare war on Japan at this time, considering her commitments on the east front? Frankly, he added, he did not know and he doubted if anyone knew enough facts to base an opinion.

BRINGING UP FATHER

LONDON, Oct. 12 (CP)—The London Daily Mail declared editorially today that the five United States senators who have reported their findings on a world tour of battle fronts in a Senate executive session were likely to hamper war production unintentionally by "creating a civilian indignation and prejudice." The editorial was the first explicit answer by the British press to recent criticism in some Senate quarters of British post-war economic aims. In many families being dispossessed and left homeless for the City to provide for. But your committee also wishes to point out, and to emphasize, that the conditions just referred to no longer exist. Anyone now owning a property in Charlottetown can rent it profitably. So now it would appear that the time has arrived when every effort should be made to collect all arrears, even if it is necessary to use the cumbersome methods prescribed in the City's Act of Incorporation, including publishing the names of delinquent tax payers in the press. This is for the reason that the course of action may necessitate the selling by auction of some properties whose owners will not co-operate, but when could this be done to better advantage than at present when property is at a premium, and prospective purchasers seem plentiful? "In any event, it would seem the duty of this, or any City Council to use every effort to place the City in a sound, and liquid position, prepared as well as possible to meet the demands which will inevitably be made on every governmental body to assist in the rehabilitation of Canada's armed forces. The time for this cannot come sooner than we hope, but it may come sooner than we expect, and your committee would like to conclude this too lengthy comment with an appeal to all tax payers now in arrears to make a special effort to wipe out these arrears now, and make more drastic action on the part of the city collector unnecessary. Coun. Chandler's report was received with applause. Mayor Holman congratulated the Finance Committee and the tax collectors on the good showing made, and commended the summary that the names of those in tax arrears, particularly of property taxes, be published in the press.

Maple Leafs To Begin Training

TORONTO, Oct. 12 (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs, 29 strong, today left for St. Catharines to begin training for the 1943-44 National Hockey League season which they open here Oct. 30 against New York Rangers. The departure followed the Toronto hockey club's annual luncheon at which the players were introduced to club supporters. There were only three veterans in the roster of 32 players, coach Clarence (Happy) Day and his assistants. Three of the 32 were university students and will not be at the training camp continuously. The veterans were Bob Davidson, hard-plugging left wing who was named captain of the team for the season, fast-skating Lorne Carr and defenceman Bucko McDonald.

CITY FINANCE

(Continued from page 1) and $80,842.90 in 1941. "In respect to expenditures," Coun. Chandler said, "it might seem at first glance that the total expenditure shown as $251,617.41 was an increase over both of the previous years considered, but included in the total expenditure shown in each year is the contribution to sinking fund. While it is not shown for accounting purposes to show it in the total expenditure, the contribution to sinking fund is not an expenditure in the ordinary sense of the word, but merely approximates the action of a private citizen in transferring an amount from his current account to his savings account, or to put it in even simpler words, to change a bank roll from one pocket to another. Thus as $50,000.00 was placed in sinking fund in 1942 as compared with $40,000.00 in each of the years 1941 and 1942 it is evident that for purposes of a comparative consideration of the total actual expenditures, the $10,000 increase in the sinking fund should be deducted from the total of $251,617.41 or a decrease of $40,000.00 from 1941 and of $5,142.53 from 1942.
