Stewart, son of the late Mr. Peter Stewart, left his home while just a boy and arrived in Arizona and recently passed on at the age of 81. During his long life he followed many different occupations and was highly respected and loved. Mr. Stewart never returned to his old home. The second was Mr. Arthur F. Morrow, who came to the island in 1880, and worked for almost 45 years represented them in the States of Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire, and he recently was called by death at the age of 69, working until the day of his passing. Arthur was favorably known to the merchants, druggists and merchants in the large territory he covered for so many years. While his father lived, he visited his old home in Souris every summer for a week or two and enjoyed meeting his school mates and friends in his own native town. Mr. Morrow and Mr. Morrow, longed to the Masonic Order and Shriners.

Prince Edward Offers Screen Version Of "The Mortal Storm"

A motion picture as timely as tomorrow's headlines "The Mortal Storm" is being featured at the Prince Edward today and Thursday. Characterized by brilliant performances upon the part of an outstanding cast, this film is designed to make audiences think. In brief, it tells the story of a family, a happy family, which suddenly finds itself torn, divided against itself and happiness against a regime of terror which sweeps down upon it. Margaret Sullivan, who may always be depended upon for a sterling performance, surpasses anything she has done previously as the hapless heroine, Freya Roth. From start to finish she lives the life of the girl she portrays with sympathy and deep feeling. The same role applied to James Stewart in his role of Martin Brenner. Stewart's sympathetic handling of an unusual type of character puts him in line for an acting award. The surprise of the piece, however, comes in the person of Robert Young who, for the first time in his screen career, essays the role of a villain. It is a credit to this young man's acting to state that his characterization is believable, even likable, in spite of the things he is forced to do. One gets the impression that there is a lad misled rather than a dyed-in-the-wool menace. Adding even more to this production is the work of Frank Morgan as the professor and scientist, Viktor Roth. After his performance in "The Shop Around the Corner". So much for those who head the cast. Add to these flawless performances by such players as Robert Stack, Bonita Granville, Irene Rich, William T. Orr, Maria Ouspenskaya and Gene Reynolds, and in some degree you will be able to sense the power which lies behind this truly great production. In addition to the Mortal Storm the performance includes two short subjects entitled Eternal Fire and Blackboard Revue.

IN HOSPITAL AFTER CRASH—Suffering possible serious head injuries and shock, Douglas McIsaac, of 11 Cecil Street, is a patient in the Moncton Hospital Monday as a result of a car accident in which he was an occupant, in Board Street, Sunday night about 11 o'clock. Cecil Bruce, 10 Steadman street was the driver of the car. McIsaac was boarding at 890 Main street. The accident occurred when the driver lost control turning into Board street and the car overturned. The car was badly wrecked and had to be towed into town. Hospital authorities said that McIsaac was "resting comfortably."—Moncton Transcript.

Stresses Value Of Faith In Time of Crisis

An inspiring sermon in which confidence was expressed in the ultimate defeat of Germany, because of the denial by her leaders of the truth of the Christian religion, was given before a large congregation in St. John's Presbyterian Church, Belfast on Sunday afternoon by Rev. Malcolm D. D. A. MacLeod, pastor of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, 5th Avenue, New York.

Dr. MacLeod took for his text Matthew 17:20: "For he that has faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, 'remove hence, unto yonder place; and it shall be so.'"

In the course of his address Dr. MacLeod said:

When the Master said mustard seed He evidently had in mind the mustard seed, a common symbol for smallness. Jesus said it was the smallest of all seeds. He was talking to farmers. It was the smallest of seeds, but it grows.

Now let us see that we understand just exactly what that means. And to begin with remember this: a seed of mustard is not a seed in metaphor. He said, "if thy right eye offend thee pluck it out." He didn't mean that we were to literally tear out his wonderful organ of vision. He was talking of the lust of the eye. To remove mountains was an old saying for overcoming difficulties. The mountain was a symbol of difficulty. A Rabbi who could explain a hard passage of Scripture was called a mover of mountains. Jesus didn't imply that we were to remove the mountains without spades and shovels. Jesus wasn't talking foolishness. He was talking in the language of the Oriental. It was a common thing for the Jews to say, "Christ's day to speak of any mighty man as a mover of mountains. Caesar was Hannibal was Christ says if a man has faith he can push mountains out of his way, nothing is impossible.

Nowhere is the uniqueness of the Bible more clearly than the Faith. It is the invariable requirement of a cure being wrought. Time and again He said, "Thy faith hath saved thee." Never My power, always "thy faith." He never said, "My power hath saved thee."

Once a woman touched the hem of His garment. She thought that virtue resided in His garments and that she would be healed but Jesus corrected her. He said, "woman get up in peace, thy faith hath made thee whole."

A Staggering Challenge

Now this is an amazing staggering challenge. The man who has faith at his disposal has a power which is mighty beyond anything we can conceive. Faith is like water: it takes the shape of the receptacle into which it is poured. Let us see what it can lift out of its theological setting.

Take for instance the man who has faith in himself. There is an old law that where there's a will there's a way. And that is usually true because the will makes the way. I mean there's a spirit in man that can move mountains. When Napoleon planned for his Italian campaign was met with the criticism that it was impossible he replied, "Impossible did I say? Then let us see what it can do."

When a man has faith in himself and is in red-hot flaming earnest there's no telling what he can do. "Never never" it can't be done" mountain, Cromwell did. Lord Nelson did.

It is faith that wins battles just as much as armies. "This is the victory that overcometh the world even our faith."

The world has always been full of doubters. You will never be able to do that "it can't be done" "never never" it can't be done." And of course they are right. To be sure it can't be done. The peo-

Science And Faith

There is a popular impression today that science is a sceptical institution that it has no place for faith in its curriculum. Men say, "See how hard science has made life. Science has given us the airplane, the radio, the cinema." One cannot pause to mention the marvelous things that science has done for us with Science has revolutionized the world during the last 25 years. But what has faith done? We are asked. What has faith done? But this is not a fair question. People fail to think things through. Because, when we stop to think of it, no man has greater faith than the scientist. Every true scientist works by faith. He throws his mind forward into the darkness as a sailor drops his anchor into the deep.

He sits down before the book of nature like a little child and spells out its message word for word. To be sure he uses his reason, but that use is reason unless he has faith in his reason.

Reason undoubtedly is a road to truth but it is not the only road. There are a lot of other roads. We do not know a mother's love by reasoning. It's fine to be intellectually honest and ethically honest but it is not always a theory or a formula. Sometimes truth is an experience which only experience can know.

And the same is true of moral truth and spiritual truth. The man who has absolute faith in the triumph of truth is a mighty man. He can move mountains. The man who is on the side of truth and who could move mountains with his mind, could do that man. He will conquer any mountain because this universe is not grounded on falsehood. That is the one incontestable fact. "I know that truth and right have the universe on their side."

Germany Can't Win

And that is why we cannot conceive of Germany winning the war. It would seem like a denial of everything true and holy. As one good woman remarked, "If Germany wins this war I think I shall have to give up my faith in God." But she was not afraid. She was going to win. She won the battle of France. And even if she wins the Battle of Britain that is not going to be the end—not by a long sea-mile. She's going to get her reward. She's going to meet her Waterloo. God is not asleep. Never again humanity be permanently enslaved. There's a little poem, "Truth forever on the scaffold, Wrong forever on the throne." But don't stop there. Let us hear the whole stanza.

"Truth forever on the scaffold, Wrong forever on the throne. But that scaffold sways the future, Standeth God beneath the shadow, Keeping watch above His own."

Now the point I am trying to sharpen and the goal I am striving to reach is this: If faith in one's self and in the victory of truth can work such wonders, what could not faith in God if we only trusted Him with all our hearts? Is anything impossible if God is back of us? I confess this text used to trouble me. It seemed entirely too incredible that if one had faith the size of a little seed he could say to a mountain "move on," and the mountain would straightway move.

But then I witnessed a woman going down into a poor mission district in Chicago where there was a perfect mountain of paganism and I observed what that little woman did. Her name was Jane Adams. She had no organization back of her and no funds, no financial magazine to sponsor and underwrite

Governor General's Literary Awards

STE ANNE DE BELLEVUE, Que., Aug. 27—(CP)—Formal presentation of the Governor-General's Literary Award for 1939 was the chief business at the annual banquet session tonight which marked the close of the 19th annual convention of the Canadian Authors' Association at Macdonald College here.

Three Canadian writers came into the limelight to receive vice-regal medals for their literary works. Previously announced, the awards were to Franklin D. McDowell, of Toronto for his novel "The Champlain Road," Arthur D. Bourinot, of Ottawa for a volume of poems entitled "Under the Sun," and Mrs. Laura G. Salverston of Winnipeg, in the general literature class, for "Confession of An Immigrant's Daughter."

Instituted three years ago by the late Lord Tweeddale, the awards are recognized as the highest distinctions available for Canadian writers in Canada.

PRAGUE, Aug. 27—(AP)—"Bad, and gradually getting worse," is the phrase with which a Bohemian Jew characterized the present situation of Jewish citizens of the protectorate. There are still more than 200,000 Jews in Bohemia and Moravia, more than 40,000 in prospect—that any great number of these will be able to get away soon. For Czech Jews, borders are getting tighter each week. A very few are getting away to Shanghai, distant China being about the only place still willing or able to absorb some of the luckless Jews of the former Czechoslovakia.
