THE MORNING GUARDIAN

FRIDAY JUNE 22, 1900.

THE FUTURE OF SOUTH AFRICA.

The entire civilized world has now practically come to the conclusion that the Dutch Republics of South Africa will very soon become part and parcel of the British Empire. Such active sympathy as was felt for the Boers in the earlier stages of the war has largely died out, or become quiescent. It is said to be natural to sympathise with "the under dog in a fight," but by a natural perversity this sympathy ceases when the under dog has no longer the slightest fighting chance. So it comes that even the British hating continental powers are now apparently prepared to acquiesce in the results of the logic of events, and to view with a degree of complacency the acquisition of the South African States by Great Britain.

The problem to be faced by British statesmen is the future government of the new States. Fortunately it is to be solved by no inexperienced hands, for the statesmen of the Empire have had to do with many kindreds, tongues and tribes in many various parts of the world. The difficulties will doubtless be found to be considerable, but it is possible that ten years hence we may conclude that they have been overrated. Doubtless the Dutch peoples of the late Republics are much embittered against us, but after all their numbers are small. Be it remembered that we have long ruled more people of Dutch blood in Cape Colony alone than now reside in the two conquered States. It may also be observed in the two States themselves there is but a comparatively small preponderance of the Dutch over the Outlander and English-speaking people combined.

Nor ought it to be forgotten that there is, notably in the Orange State, a large section of the burghers who have shown a disposition to accept the new order of things, not of choice, but still quietly of necessity. Those who have estates and property will be those most disposed to settle down peacefully under British rule. And these are precisely the classes who in times of peace will be most influential among their fellows. They will be treated justly and the restoration of kindly relations must be left to the healing influence of time. The Boer is ignorant and bigoted, no doubt, but there is much that is good in the better classes of the race and these will quickly settle down to the ways of peaceful industry.

It may be observed that though Britain has within the century past acquired much territory by conquest through wars that were forced upon her, it has seldom, if ever within the century happened that the peoples so conquered had before possessed free representative institutions. Of these the Republics must be for the time deprived. Like the revolted Southern States of our own continent in the sixties, they must for a time be controlled by martial law. Their artillery, forts and munitions of war must be given up and their cities be garrisoned by British troops. The rule of the conqueror will be just, however, and tempered with mercy. It will be the more readily accepted from the fact that the dream of driving the British into the sea and creating a Dutch federation to control all South Africa has probably now forever vanished from the minds of the more intelligent burghers.

Unfortunately the settlement made by Mr. Gladstone after Majuba had left in the Boer mind a sort of contempt for the fighting qualities of Englishmen. Many of them came to believe that one Boer was equal to many British soldiers in the field. They know better now, and of their better knowledge has come the avoidance of any fighting in the open with equal numbers of their once despised foemen. This newly gained respect for British valor will be of itself a powerful factor in the restoration of friendly relations between the two races. And, under British rule immigration from many lands will set toward South Africa, thus proportionately reducing the strength of the Dutch element and placing it in a minority. All these things will aid in the solution of the problem, and pacification may come more quickly than we have dreamed. In fact we may conclude a very few years hence, in view of the results achieved, that it was a good thing that the heart of the Pharaoh of South Africa was hardened as it was in the year of "grace" 1899.

Hon. James Dunsuir, the new Premier of British Columbia, is said to be the wealthiest man in political life in Canada. He was born across the border in Washington State but has spent nearly all his life in Canada. He was first elected to the Legislature of British Columbia in 1898 as a supporter of the Turner Government, and has now associated Mr. Turner with him in the new Cabinet. Mr. Dunsuir is one of the most unobtrusive and silent of public men, and during three sessions of the Legislature that he has attended has never addressed more than a very few sentences to that body.

The first part of an athlete's training relates to the care of the stomach. The nourishing quality of his food is considered. The quantity he eats is carefully weighed and measured. It is curious that this care of the stomach is looked upon as an extraordinary thing only to be practiced in special circumstances.

It should be every one's care. Life is a struggle for the prize of success. The man who wins must take care of his stomach. It is not lack of energy or exercise that has caused so many a break-down in the race. It is neglect of the stomach. Incessant dull headache aggravated by eating, flatulence, gnawing in the stomach, heartburn, acid eructations, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, nervousness, mental depression, sleeplessness; these are only a few of the symptoms of a weak stomach and an enfeebled condition of the digestive and nutritive functions. Not all these symptoms will be experienced at once, but any one of them means danger. "It has made a new man of me," is the constant testimony of those who have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This remarkable remedy has such a perfect control of the stomach, digestive and assimilative organs and blood making glands that it speedily corrects the derangements which weaken them, re-establishes them in healthy working order, so that once more the whole body—blood, brain, nerves and muscles—is nourished, and built up into rugged health. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant. Its protracted use does not create a craving for stimulants. The dealer's after the dollar and the customer's after the cure. Its dealer with his eye on the dollar who proposes substitution. Let the customer keep his eye on the cure and insist on "Golden Medical Discovery." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets do not gripe. They effectually cleanse the system of accumulated impurities.
