The Mystery of The Singing Walls

"The thing that gets me," he growled, "is why they parked him before his own door."

"Just this. A hypodermic leaves no particular trace, and when Mr. Warburton was dead outside his house with his finger severed, it might perfectly well have been cut off in an accident, and that supposed that his finger had been of blood or heart failure had produced death. Therefore, unless there was an investigation and a post mortem murder could have been done without any one suspecting it."

"But why?" Busby persisted wonderingly. "Because, in this case," Graham emphasized, "the chief object of the criminal seems to have been to make death appear accidental and thus prevent a post mortem. Of course, it is obvious that the chances of death appearing an accident were much greater if the body was found before his door than if Mr. Warburton had been discovered in some out-of-the-way section of New York. Also, the locality in which he was found would certainly have given a clue to the murderer, while, if the body were found before his own house there would be no clues leading anywhere. The captain shook his head, still unconvinced, and moved slowly across the sidewalk to the iron grill below the steps.

"Your theory is all right," he grumbled. "But how about the finger?" "That's the most mysterious part of the affair," Graham admitted, "for, if the criminal had intended to make it appear natural death, he would have had the finger in one of the chief factors of this lift this case, and if I was only one of the magazine detectives, I would have had it all doped out long ago while you were chasing yourselves in circles. As they walked up the broad steps and again passed under the dome light of the marbled vestibule, Busby let out a growl: "authors who write crook stories give me a pain," he spluttered. "The mostly females anyhow and don't know no more about real crime than I do about feeding babies. Only the dear old fads for their bunk and the murderer's footprints on 5th avenue. Believe me, George, they give me one large pain."

As the three men crossed the spacious entrance hall and started out from the long, narrow corridor leading to the telephone switchboard at the rear of the house, "Doheny says the only work being done just now over on the East Side," he explained, "is a gas main being put in on avenue B, right alongside of the west curb."

"What was Mr. Warburton doing over there?" Graham Avenue B is right on the water front, running in between a row of warehouses and that big Salin, Cecilia's Hospital. It's a bad locality."

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION FOR MRS. PENN

She Escaped It by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Windsor, Ont. "After the birth of my first baby I was very much run down in health and the doctor said I must have an operation as I was suffering from a displacement. A friend wanted me to try your medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and I took it steadily for a year. During this time I was carrying my second baby and I felt real well all the time and did not have a hard confinement. I feel sure the Vegetable Compound did me a lot of good, and all my people do, too. One sister in Leamington, Ontario, takes it, and both sisters praise it as a good medicine. I am more than pleased with the result."—Mrs. W. Penn, Windsor, Ontario.

Mrs. Corbin Relieved from Pain Stewiacke, N.S. "I had pains across my back and in my side for two years after my first baby was born. My mother had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I read about it in the papers, so I tried it and the pains all left me. I have a family of three children now, and the medicine helped me during the months before they were born. I recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. Clara W. Corbin, Main Street, Stewiacke, Nova Scotia.

CONSTANT CURLING, WAVING DRIES LIFE FROM HAIR

Girls just must curl and wave batted hair to appear their prettiest. But constant curling and waving burn life from the hair.

To offset these bad effects, just get a 35-cent bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug store or toilet counter and just see for yourself how quickly it revives dry, brittle, lifeless, and fading hair.

"Danderine" is a dependable tonic and will do wonders for any girl's hair. It nourishes, stimulates and strengthens each single hair, bringing back that youthful gleam, glint and step and dandruff disappears. "Danderine" is pleasant and easy to use.

"It sure is," Busby agreed feelingly. "A lot of them East Side hanging-out place. And a man could be bumped off without anybody being wise to a thing."

"I wonder what he was doing over there," Graham pondered. "It's a bad neighborhood." Busby wet his lips meditatively. "Come on, O'Neill, we'll run over and take a squint around, he convinced. "George, you go upstairs and keep an eye on things. See if Busby and O'Neill hurried out through the marble vestibule, he threw the detective into the brilliantly lighted elevator. Pressing the button marked "five" and if I was only one of the magazine detectives, I would have had it all doped out long ago while you were chasing yourselves in circles. As they walked up the broad steps and again passed under the dome light of the marbled vestibule, Busby let out a growl: "authors who write crook stories give me a pain," he spluttered. "The mostly females anyhow and don't know no more about real crime than I do about feeding babies. Only the dear old fads for their bunk and the murderer's footprints on 5th avenue. Believe me, George, they give me one large pain."

The Attack in the Dark

"Slamming back the elevator doors, John and the detective stepped out into the hall. To each side of them the long corridor, bathed away still and deserted, bathed in the glow of the dome light at the head of the stairway. Momentarily, the engineer's glance traveled along the unbroken expanse of wall opposite, gany doors just across from the sitting and bedrooms. Way down to the right, below the tall, narrow windows at the end of the passage, a stream of light poured from the royal blue of the wadded carpet. From somewhere out of a court below, crept up the melody of a city cat, walling wailfully like a haunted soul. Terza, his nerves vibrant as violin strings, John pushed the door open and stepped forward listening his heart pounding against his ribs. For in that woman's wailing note of an old cello. All at once, both men started as the sitting room door seeped the thump of a chair overturning and a gurgling sound like liquor poured thickly from a narrow-necked bottle.

With a quick intake of his breath the engineer shot across the hall and gripped the glass knob. But his wrist flexed back into his stomach and he brought up with a hump against the satiny panel. The door was locked. Whirling down the hall, Graham swung wide the entrance of the owner's bedroom and disappeared inside, John was half-way again came out into the corridor. There's no way through in there," he declared. "There's no communication between the two rooms." Again there seeped through the door of the sitting room the thump of a struggle, the dull thud cries for help.

Drawing off, John crashed his shoulder into the solid wood with a crunch that made him grunt with pain. The door quivered and held firm and the engineer bounced back like a sack of rubber into the center of the hall. He was gathering himself for a second attempt, when Graham gripped him around the waist. "Lay off," he warned. "That door is as damned solid. Here, Burke! Get one of those studs from the woodbox in the

Mt. Stewart Notes

On Saturday last we thought Spring had surely arrived, when we beheld some of our citizens taking of their storm windows and doors, but turning round we also beheld ten men wading the R. R. cuttings which are from eight to ten feet deep, between here and Pisiquid.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Coffin, who have spent the past two months at their home in Savage Harbor, left on their return to Cambridge, Mass., where Mr. Coffin is employed in carpenter work. Mrs. Coffin accompanied them to Borden where with her sons, Messrs. Arthur and Albert she spends some time. Mr. and Mrs. Coffin spent Sunday in Borden before proceeding on their way.

Mrs. Arthur Coffin, Charlottetown, is visiting her brother Mr. Stuart McEachern, Mt. Stewart.

Miss Jennie Douglas now employed in Charlottetown, spent Sunday at her home here.

Mr. Daniel Birt returned home Saturday evening from the P. E. I. Hospital which he entered Thursday, April 28th inst. for treatment for a case of blood-poisoning. No doubt Mr. Birt is glad to get back for—"It is ever so humble there's no place like home."

Miss Agnes Clements, teacher here, spent Sunday at her home in Murray Harbor.

It was an ill wind that blows nobody good. The gale of wind on Sunday last sent the sea-ice on the north prospects of opening the lobster season which has been deferred from April 26th to May 4th looks brighter now.—F.

PIMPLES OVER FACE AND NECK

Itched and Burned Badly, Healed by Cuticura.

"My face started to itch and burn and then broke out with pimples that were hard, large and red. After a few days they feasted and scaled over and were very sore. They itched and burned so badly that I used to scratch which caused them to spread all over my face and neck. My face was badly disfigured. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After using it I purchased more and in about two weeks it was healed." (Signed) Miss Bertha Wilson, R.
