Backyard Venture Proves Lucrative

(Canadian Press)
HAYWARD, Calif., Oct. 14.—Sixty-five fluffy Angora rabbits are made to produce the equivalent of 260 soft rabbits' wool sweaters for children a year in an unusual home business operated here by Mrs. Nella Creque.
Mrs. Creque raises the rabbits in a backyard pen, shears them herself for their wool, spins it into yarn and knits the garments. Each animal produces four ounces of wool every three months, enough to make one child's sweater.
Mrs. Creque shears each rabbit carefully with a pair of scissors and uses an old-fashioned spinning wheel to produce the yarn from the clippings.
Besides being soft, light and comfortable, the rabbits' wool garments wear well and do not shrink. Mrs. Creque claims. She has made both a hobby and a business of the "factory," and the rabbits themselves don't seem to mind providing the wool.

Miss Wild Ducks As Season Opens

(Canadian Press)
HALIFAX, Oct. 14.—The season is on for wild ducks in Nova Scotia, but hunters are looking in vain for the great flights of birds that once winged their way to the province's shores each fall.
Though black duck reached Nova Scotia in greater numbers than 1933 or 1934, reports from all over the province say they are still far below the seasonal arrivals of a few years ago. And this despite a fine breeding season last spring.
Of the once-great flocks of geese, only scant remnants turned up this year. So few were their numbers that most gunners ignored them altogether.
Brant were almost completely missing, their absence due to failure of the well-known birds along the coast to rehabilitate themselves after dwindling away for several years. Bel grass formed one of their chief foods during their stopover in Nova Scotia on the long trek to the south.

..CANADIAN LEGION.—The regular monthly meeting of the Eldon Branch of the Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. was held in the Eldon Hall on Saturday evening. President Dave Bishop presiding. There were twenty members present, including Provincial President W. A. MacLaggan and two other members from the Montague Branch. The meeting opened with two minutes of silence, followed by singing of "O Canada." Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Correspondence from various headquarters also read. A lengthy discussion then took place with regard to wreaths and poppies, and Remembrance Day service. A committee was appointed to look after and make the necessary preparations. Mr. McLaggan was then called upon and presented a very good and splendid address with some good sound advice which was greatly appreciated by the members. He expressed his pleasure at having this the first opportunity of meeting with them and expressed his willingness to help them in any way possible. He also stressed the importance of observing Remembrance Day in a fitting manner and urged the increase of poppy and wreath sales, especially in the school, explaining the significance of the poppy, which is a symbol of something which cannot be forgotten, and Remembrance Day is a duty to the children. "It is a duty," he said, "that the Legion must not fail to accomplish." He continued: "The Legion is the mouthpiece of the returned men, and is judged by its activities." Mr. Comrade K. K. Wightman of the Montague Branch then said a few words regarding Remembrance Day and also stressed the importance of increased poppy sales. Past President Daniel Ross then addressed the meeting, thanking the Provincial President for his valuable advice. The meeting closed with singing the National Anthem. After the meeting there was a very appetizing lunch served by the Eldon members. The remainder of the evening was spent in music, supplied by a Montague member of the Legion. The writer was much impressed by the genial atmosphere displayed. Nowhere was there greater evidence of the very spirit of comradeship than at this meeting and when the Montague comrades departed they carried with them the thought "it was good to have been there."—H.

Addis Ababa Has Australian Links

Addis Ababa, the capital of Ethiopia, has gained more than eucalyptus trees from Australia, for last year an Australian nurse—Sister Myra Riley—courageously volunteered to establish there, on behalf of the Sudan Interior Mission, a much-needed leper hospital. The hospital, which has now been in operation for about eighteen months, during which thousands of patients have been treated is proving of inestimable value to Ethiopia, where, prior to 1934, one-third of the population was reputed to be lepers. But for Sister Riley it is doubtful whether the hospital would have been established. She is a native of Sydney, and has recently returned from Ethiopia to do research work at leper settlements in Queensland.—Australian Press Bureau.

Deplore Perjury Among Witnesses

HALIFAX, Oct. 14.—Perjury by witnesses testifying before the Grand Jury at the October term of the Supreme Court here is deplored in a report submitted by the jury to Mr. Justice R. H. Graham. Declaring perjury was "obvious" in some instances, the jurymen assert they view this circumstance with "serious concern." Such disregard for the truth under oath, they state, "is deplorable and subversive to justice."
Their recommendation is that the Crown investigate all cases where perjury is indicated "with a view to appropriate action being taken."
In another report, the Grand Jury urges segregation of the different classes of prisoners in the Halifax county jail to eliminate the mingling of youthful offenders with hardened criminals.

Girl Farmhands No Modern Idea

(Canadian Press)
GRAND VALLEY, Ont., Oct. 14.—The Star and Vidette says: "We have been rather amused by some of the stories appearing in the large daily papers regarding the news that women and girls were helping in the harvest fields. We of rural centres know that this has been going on for years, and will quite likely continue as long as there are farms, and have chuckled to themselves at the stories, as if women working in fields had never occurred before.
"Living in close contact with the farmers, we have come to realize that the women who live on the farms realize and know the value of time, especially during the harvest season. They know what it means when the hay or grain should be in the barn and rain is threatening. They know that in helping their men, they are helping themselves toward an easier life in years to come. That is obvious. We can see nothing unusual in a woman helping in the fields around the barn. It was done in Biblical times, and no doubt will continue until eternity."

Pigs And Women Cause Of Murder In Wild Paqua

Pigs and women are at the bottom of most native murders in the Australian Territory of Papua, New Guinea, in the opinion of Mr. Jack Hides, an assistant resident magistrate, visiting Sydney after leading an expedition along the valleys of the Strickland and Purari Rivers.
Mr. Hides said if a native was murdered, it became the duty of the son or kinsmen of the victim to avenge the crime. It might be 10 years before that vengeance was obtained. Pigs and women were at the bottom of most of the murders in Papua. If a man's pig or wife was killed or his property was damaged, the aggrieved man considered that he had a right to take the life of his enemy.
During his journey up the Strickland River, Mr. Hides said he met a native named Somalo, of the Iungazim tribe. This man offered to guide the expedition over part of the journey, and his services were accepted. One night, while they were resting, he asked Somalo why his people took heads. Somalo replied: "It is because of god." Asked what god, Somalo replied: "There is only one god, and that is the god of the Iungazim." Further questioned, Somalo said: "God was there before there were any streams, trees, or animals, and even before there were any babies." Asked the origin of head-hunting, Somalo said that this god of his people had killed another god, cut his head off, and left it outside his hut. Some time later the god found that the head was sprouting. He planted the head, and from it grew the first cocoon tree. The Iungazim collected heads for their god, but they would never take the head of a man. Pigs and women were the only things that the god would eat. Head-hunting was a religion with these natives, as far as he could learn. After a head-hunting expedition, members of the tribe returned to their village and held a head dance for their god. When the dance was ended, they preserved the heads by curing them with smoke and hung them in their tents. Somalo told him definitely that they took heads for their god.—Australian Press Bureau.

New Styles Echo Military Theme

(Canadian Press)
LONDON, Oct. 14.—A review of the couture collections indicate fashions for 1936 are taking on a tropical note, "Italian versus Ethiopians."
The Italia influence is inspired by Florentine paintings of the 15th century and by the Exhibition of Italian Renaissance paintings in Paris.
What is termed the Ethiopian influence, is indicated by clothes quasi-military in type much braided and befringed, reminiscent of the more picturesque Ethiopian uniforms. This, however, is mixed with an oriental, or rather "near-east" influence that crops up in many models.
Period clothes from Renaissance paintings cannot be merely copied for the active modern woman who has to go places. The new influence appear in subtle changes of line and cut, in Renaissance colorings, the use of trimmings and braidings, and in gait and jeweled belts and accessories.
The more formal frocks take on the chaste, flowing lines of 15th century Italy, whereas day clothes mimic gaudy military effects. For afternoons or quiet evening wear there are Franciscan monk robes with monastic rope girdles. Sweaters and knitted garments are influenced in coloreds both by Italian and Ethiopian sources. Delustrated synthetic silk used for hand and machine knitting.
Sports ensembles sometimes have three-quarters to five-eighths length coats hanging from the shoulders on loose lines with sides fluted. Some coats and suits are quite military looking, some cloths have ecclesiastical hoods, and some dresses and coats are made entirely of the pleated material. Sleeves are significant with the fullness at the top, and are either gathered into the wrist or left loose—the "best" new sleeve is knee length. Shoulders are widened, often padded. Waists are in the natural position, or a shade higher. Fancy gadgets are medieval jeweled belts, silver and gold coin trimmings, leather belts worked with coronets, cocks, padlocks and keys, gold intaglio belts in Italian designs, and turreted and heraldic belts with brackets to match.

Immune Milkmaids Inspired Vaccine

(Canadian Press)
TORONTO, Oct. 14.—Writing of some benefactors of the human race, in "Health" Magazine, W. R. Riddell says:
"In the Royal House of England, the eldest son of James II died of smallpox; his youngest daughter, afterwards, Queen Anne, recovering from it infected her infant brother and he died of it; his eldest daughter, Queen Mary, died of it, as did his sister, Mary, Princess of Orange—and a with-out comment at the time. The only reference to any of these deaths as unusual that I can find in contemporary writings is that of the celebrated French doctor Guy Patin, who suspects that the princess had some other affection.
While the pockmarked person was seen everywhere till the end of the 18th century, the writer declares that in his life of 80 years he has seen only one. "Why the change? Edward Jenner, born 1749 receiving his M. D. from St. Andrews in 1792, practising at Berkeley, noticed that the Gloucestershire milkmaids who were infected with cow-pox never had smallpox. He tried experiments which were successful, and in the last decade of the 18th century, published his theory of vaccination. With no little opposition from the regular faculty, the practice made its way and now is almost universal."

Dobbin Valuable Alike in Life And Afterwards

The horse is a very utilitarian animal, valuable alike when alive and after he has shuffled off the scene. In some countries his flesh is used as food, his hide is turned into leather, parts of his anatomy turn up in the shape of glue and that useful appendage in life, his tail, is also turned to account. Who, for instance, considers as he listens enraptured to some beautiful melody that the virtuoso is extracting his entrancing music by drawing hairs taken from a horse's tail across the intestines of some animal made into the form of strings. And as the captivated listener stiffs his ears, he is struck by the charms in his comfortable chair, the chairs are it is stuffed with the same kind of hair. When he goes to bed at night he reclines on a mattress, perhaps, stuffed with this hair and the painter plies his calling with a brush made from Dobbin's fly swatter. In Belgium, three different qualities of hair are recognized, stiff tails, tails and manes. As regards colour, dark hair, as nearly black as possible. The hair is used in the upholstery trade, for stuffing mattresses and making certain kinds of brushes. Argentina supplies the greatest quantity, followed by the United States, Great Britain, Germany and Canada, according to the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways. The Belgian manufacturer has a high regard for Canadian horse hair and it is probably the most expensive which accounts for Canada not supplying a greater portion of the market, cheapness being one of the prime considerations.

Appeal to King On Alien State

(Canadian Press)
LONDON, Oct. 14.—An appeal to the King is to be made in the New Year by women from all parts of the Empire to safeguard the nationality of women who marry foreigners.
Organized by the Women's Freedom League, the petition will request the King "to ask the Governments in the United Kingdom and each of the Dominions to consent to the adoption of uniform legislation to give the married women independent nationality in her own person, in the same terms as a man or single woman."
In July a petition was presented in the House of Commons signed by women's societies in every Dominion, asking the government to remove the disabilities of married women in matters of nationality.
