THE OTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION.

A New York journal known as the American Syren and Shipping takes a peculiar view of the Alaskan boundary decision. It claims to have private and exclusive information to the effect that the maps submitted by the Canadians to the Commissioners were as false as those which "made it easy for Daniel Webster to sign away 5,500 miles of the territory of the State of Maine." "Friends in Canada tell us," continues this amazingly well-informed authority, "that the well-simulated indignation of the Canadian press over the smallness of the award of land in Alaska is a clever political dodge. As a matter of fact, the shrewd Canadian politicians tricked the American people from start to finish in the Alaska matter and are laughing up their sleeves over the easy way in which they pulled off the slickest political confidence game, next to the Panama burko game, that has been worked on the American people in a decade." And then come these really remarkable words: "Of course, nobody believes that such wily birds as Senator Lodge, the Hon. Elihu Root, and Ambassador Choate were hood-winked. They doubtless received the usual retainers by which such men lay up more treasure on earth than they are likely to find to their credit in Heaven. And may be a few of the newspapers which published matter in laudation of what they termed "the great American" victory over the Alaskan dispute, put much money in their pockets."

There has been a somewhat widespread opinion in Canada that in the days of the Ashburton treaty the late lamented Daniel Webster had in his possession an important official map which showed that the true boundary between Maine and New Brunswick was the Penobscot River and not the St. Croix, and that he 12,000 square miles in dispute really belonged to the Province and not to the State; that in fact the Daniel aforesaid when he came to judgment in the boundary matter, instead of signing away some 5,500 miles of United States territory really grabbed some 6,500 miles of British land. But that by the way. If Syren and Shipping is right that impression is of course all wrong.

As for the Canadian maps that were before the Alaskan Boundary Commission our impression all along has been that there were one or two which most Canadians had rather kept out of sight as at least one of them, having the name of Hon. Clifford Sifton, our Minister of the Interior, appears to have conceded the principal part of the United States claims. Whether or not Canadian or British gold corrupted Ambassador Choate and the American Commissioners to make an award in our favor we may for the present permit to remain an open question. If our neighbors across the border, or any considerable portion of them hold the opinion that the public men in question were not only corruptable but were corrupted in the manner implied, it is no part of our duty to dispel the delusion.

The "well-simulated indignation of the Canadian press" certainly deserves to be characterized in that way if the indignation was not genuine. Many Canadian readers no doubt thought the public writers of Canada were really angry and indignant, particularly against Lord Alverstone. But the journal we are following opines that not only has the indignation of the Canadian editors been simulated, but that the American editors who lauded the award, "put much money in their pockets" as their reward for so doing. What are we to believe in regard to the award? Can it really be that we have played "a slick political game" on the too confiding Government and people of the Great Republic?

Some judicial appointments in Quebec were made at Thursday's meeting of the Ottawa cabinet, but it does not appear that any postal appointment for Charlottetown was decided on.

The Toronto Globe of December 2nd says that signs are multiplying that pre-empt the approach of the general election, that there is activity in both Government and Opposition camps, and warns the Liberal Associations to "lose no time in making ready for a vigorous campaign." There can be no mistaking what this means.

The Kansas City Journal tells that Jean Simmons, representative of Shelby County in the Legislature, has quit politics and gone into the skunk raising business. This sounds like a joke but is a fact. There is a big profit in raising skunks for their fur. "It may give a man a bad odor," says Mr. Simmons, "but it is less offensive than politics."

The New York Medical Journal in a recent issue points out that while the number of deaths from consumption is steadily decreasing, pneumonia—"the most widespread and fatal of all acute infections decreases"—is rapidly increasing. In fact the deaths from pneumonia have increased 53 per cent, since 1897. Already this early in the season the deaths from pneumonia outnumber the deaths from consumption, and the most fatal months of the year will not be reached till after midwinter.

Just think of it a regular fifteen cent cigar three for a quarter yet that is exactly what we are selling "Imperio" Havana cigars for. These cigars are made by "Grandes Cigars Co.," the largest manufacturers of clear Havana cigars and the British flag. The cigars are five inches long and are made from full favored clear Havana leaf. This is the biggest cigar value ever shown in this city. Try a sample three, money back if not satisfactory.

PERKIN, ONT. Aug. 10th, 1903.
DEAR SIRS:—In acknowledging receipt of your cheque for $1,500.00, I desire to express my satisfaction with the outcome of my investment with you. My policy, No. 8726, was issued on the endowment plan in 1870 for $500, and I paid ten premiums of $48 each, or $480 altogether. The surplus payment you now make is more than the total cost of the policy by $1,020 and I have received the $1,000 in addition. It is hardly necessary for me to say that to have all my payments returned and over $1,000 in addition, besides the insurance protection all these years, is quite satisfactory to me. I congratulate the Canada Life on a record which might almost be considered impossible.

Yours truly,
F. A. HALL.
