AUTUMN BIRD SONGS Not long ago one evening while in my garden I distinctly heard the clear unmistakable song of the robin. I was surprised for two reasons. I had not heard a robin sing for weeks, and I knew that the song season was long past for almost all our birds. The notes of the bird seemed to come from some distance—a block or so away. But to my surprise I found the bird sitting upon my next-door neighbor's roof just overhead. Why did it sound so distant? Because the bird was singing in an undertone or what is called the "whisper-song." Though the true season of song is over, it seems the bird still feels the urge to sing. Yet to sing out in full-toned voice of spring would be sadly out of place. So the robin from the same elevated stand warbles out the same notes, bar after bar, but in quiet hushed undertones—a song in keeping with the waning of summer.

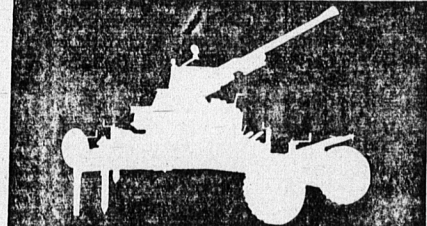

There are many of our song birds which sing during the bright days of early autumn. The songs uttered are very often subdued and hushed in tone or they may be but fragments of the songs of spring. But to those who are familiar with the bird songs, it matters little how the song of Autumn is sung, the singer can be easily recognized. Appropos of this I find in my journal for a week-end in early October, the following note: "Bird migration in full swing. By a neglected roadway with its overgrown fences and shrubbery I found many sparrows and warblers, robins, bluebirds and a few jays. All were feeding with the restless urge of migration evident. I was interested to hear many of these in song. Although none of these were anything like the free fall notes heard in spring, yet they were recognized without difficulty and I noticed also that in some songs there was a more plaintive ring that often enhanced its sweetness." The well-known song sparrow is often heard piping a few husky notes during the fall migration. The chipping sparrow can be heard

All Prince Edward Island Declares War

THIS IS PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND'S COMMITMENT IN THE NATIONAL WAR WEAPONS DRIVE

Districts throughout Canada have been given specific War Weapons as their definite monthly objectives in the National War Weapons Drive, which starts today in Prince Edward Island. Our objective is an anti-aircraft gun a month for the duration. We can and must provide it by increasing our purchase of War Savings Certificates. Everyone must do his share. It's our responsibility in helping Canada finance its ever-expanding war programme. War Savings Certificates are within the reach of all. Push their sales wherever and whenever you can.

WATCH OUR GUN COME TO LIFE The progress we make in the purchase of our guns will be shown each week. Bit by bit the blank will fill up. Check its growth in this paper next week.

Repeated bombing raids on British port areas and the industrial plants has attracted fresh attention to the frightful suffering of the many thousands of civilians in Great Britain who are harried from shelter to shelter and finally driven into the open country by successive raids. Eventually places are found for them all places of relative security, but their belongings of all kinds are destroyed. The task of emergency feeding alone is difficult. The task of setting them up once more with some quantity of clothing and bedding is much more difficult. To meet these enormous needs, funds have been started in various parts of the world. Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth has permitted the

MOUSE PLAGUE LAID TO PREDATOR KILLING

Explanations are being sought by the army of field mice that in past weeks, invaded the rich garden areas of northern San Mateo County, California, and wrought thousands of dollars worth of damage to cabbage, cauliflower and other crops. Among the most likely reasons, says Richard H. Pough, of the National Association of Audubon Societies, "is the common practice of killing almost every kind of wild life that normally feeds on mice and checks their numbers! Unless man disturbs conditions there is a natural balance between the breeding rate of mice and the voracious consumption of those animals and birds that control their feeding on them. As mice are rapid breeders it takes a great many of these predatory animals to balance the actual increase. Foremost among the predators that live to a considerable extent on mice
