

From School Teacher To Great Eminence

A young man who was brought up on a farm in Western Pennsylvania studied diligently and qualified for district school teacher. Further pursuing his studies and teaching, he managed to save up enough money to put him thru medical college. After the Civil War, he began the practice of medicine in the new oil section of Pa. and often rode horse-back thru the woods to reach and relieve those who were seriously ill. He was a student of nature, knew and could easily recognize most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods. Later, he moved to Buffalo, N.Y., where he launched his favorite remedy, and, in a short time, they were sold by every druggist in the land. Today, the name of this man, Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His Golden Medical Discovery is the best known blood medicine ever sold. More than fifty million bottles have been sold. If your druggist does not sell the "Discovery," in liquid or tablets, you can obtain a trial pkg. of the tablets by sending 10c to Dr. Pierce's Branch Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont.

CORAL JEWELRY. The vogue of all shades of rose and pink has brought about a revival of coral jewelry. It is especially lovely in the clear pink tone that is as rare as it is expensive.

Clearance AUCTION SALE AT M. HERBERT, ON WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27th, 1926. AT 12 P. M. SHARP I am instructed by the Executor of the late Capt. Jones to sell by Public Auction at his late residence on above date, all his stock, crop, implements, choice household furniture, etc., without reserve. Terms at sale. J. A. McDONALD, Auctioneer. 7360-21-1351.

Professional Cards McDonald & McPhee B. A. J. A. McDONALD H. F. MCPHEE B. A. Barristers, Attorney Etc. Money to Loan Riley Building Charlottetown

Mark R. McGuigan B. A. BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, ETC. Money to Loan Cameron Block Charlottetown, P.E.I. 2220-11-11.

W. A. MORRELL CHARTERED ACCOUNTANT AND AUDITOR RHODES STEELE BLOCK AMHERST, NOVA SCOTIA 3016-8-14-5005.

Dr. C. C. Archibald Graduate of N. Y. Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital Practice limited to Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Teeling Eyes and supplying Glasses: Office, Bayer Building Great George Street Office Hours—9 to 12.30, 1.30 to 5

Merchants Business and Professional Men We are well supplied with stocks of Blank Books Ledgers, Day Book, Loose Leaf Books, Journals, Cash Books, Letter Books, Index Books, Memo Books, Order Books, Bill Books, etc., etc. Diaries, Office and Pocket for 1926. Almanacs for 1926. Envelopes (500,000) all sizes and quantities. Foolscap and Typewriter Paper, Ink, Typewriter Ribbons, Pencils, Erasers, Cans, Ink Stands, Clips, Desk Pads, Letter Openers, Muclage, Rulers, Carters, Staffords and Waterman's Inks, etc., all at lowest prices Wholesale and Retail.

Carter & Co., Ltd.

AN UNTOLD FABLE

"Isn't it nice to find that Tom is engaged to both of us? Now we can be so chummy, can't we?"

NOT HUNTING TROUBLE

He: You're the apple of my eye. She: Go 'way! That's what Eve said to Adam.

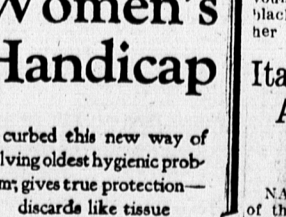

A GOOD SIDE YARD

Prospective Buyer: You deceived me, sir! The space at the side of this house amounts to nothing! It's not more than three feet! Real Estate Agent (mildly): Didn't I say there was a good side yard?

EXPERIENCED ON THE NECK

Host (to diner): What part of the chicken do you feel best fitted to wicket with, my boy? College Youth (unthinkingly): My experience has been with the neck.

WOMEN'S HANDICAP

is curbed this new way of solving oldest hygienic problem; gives true protection—discards like tissue

KOTEX No laundry—discard like tissue

Keep Slim To keep love

All ideas of charm and beauty include slenderness today. A woman who carries excess fat does herself injustice. Millions have learned an easy way to reduction. No abnormal exercise or diet is required. Just take a Marmola Prescription Tablet four times daily. Marmola has been used for 18 years. You can see its results in every circle now. Users have told its results until people now are using a million boxes yearly. This method is quick and pleasant. It is scientific. There are no secrets about it. Our latest book tells every ingredient used. It is so reliable that every user is now offered a guarantee. The reduction is gradual—not over a pound a day. So the body adjusts itself to the new conditions. Every person who suffers overweight should learn what Marmola does. A way so widely used so long used, deserves a test. Let it do for you what it is doing for people all about you. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists at $1.00 per box. The cost for your latest book, a 22c sample.

MARMOLA 2-235 General Motors Bldg. DETROIT, MICH. Mail for 25c Sample Free

A Miller's Daughter

IN THE SUMMERHOUSE. This is one day's chapter about the miller's daughter and the enchanted prince. The story will be finished at the end of this week, and the paper dolls will make a complete set with characters and costumes to fit the story. Although the miller's third daughter had no idea she would gain the reward and be able to buy the things her parents wished for, she went into the summerhouse to dream about it for a little time while she rested. She was astonished to see the richly draped couch, the blazing fire in the fireplace and the pretty little table all set with tasty things to eat. She saw the writing over the fireplace which said, "Of comforts here partake, but of my speech beware." "Of comforts here partake, but of my speech beware," she repeated. "Why, then," she laughed, "these are for me, and one should always be careful of his speech." (This dress, for the miller's youngest daughter, is red with a black bodice. The handkerchief for her head is red with black dots.)

CHAPTER XVIII. Saint-Eustache is Obstinat. On the occasion of my first visit to Lavedan I had disregarded—or, rather, Fate had contrived that I should disregard—Chateaufort's suggestion that I should go with all the panoply of power—with my equipages to compose the magnificent all France had come to associate with my name, and thus dazzle by my brilliant luster the lady I was come to win. As you may remember, I had burst into the chateau like a thief in the night, bedraggled, and of miserable aspect, seeking to provoke compassion rather than admiration. Not so now that I made my second visit. I availed myself of all the splendor to which I owed my title of "Magnificent," and rode into the courtyard of the Chateau de

PAINS ALL OVER BODY Two More Cases of Feminine Illness Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Italian Farmers Ambush Robbers; 15 Wounded

Russia Has Tons of Coal

Dull Pains in Back

Bardlys The Magnificent INSTALMENT 32. "What brings you here?" I cried in greeting, as he stepped into the room. "Are you still for Beaugency?" he asked sharply, throwing back his head. "Why, yes," I answered, wondering at this excitement. "Then you have seen nothing of Saint-Eustache and his men?" "Nothing." "Yet they must have passed this way not many hours ago." Then tossing his hat on the table and speaking with sudden vehemence: "If you have any interest in the family of Lavedan, you will turn upon the instant to Toulouse."

Lavedan preceded by twenty well-mounted knaves wearing the gorgeous Saint-Pol liveries of scarlet and gold, with the Bardleys escutcheon brodered on the breasts of their doublets on a field or a bar azure surcharged by three lilies of the field. They were armed with swords and muskets, and had more the air of a royal bodyguard than of a company of attendant servants. Our coming was in a way well-timed. I doubt if we could have stayed the execution of Saint-Eustache's warrant even had we arrived earlier. But for effect—to produce a striking coup de theatre—we could not have come more opportunely. A coach stood in the quadrangle, at the foot of the chateau steps. Lavedan and the Vicomte were descending these the Vicomte grimacing and blaspheming as ever—on one side and his daughter, white of face and with tightly compressed lips, on the other. Between these two were a woman—his wife and his child—of a firm step, a good color, and a look of well-bred, lofty indifference to what was going on about her. He disposed himself to enter the carriage which was to bear him to prison, with much the same air that would have assumed had his destination been a royal levee. Around the coach were grouped a score of men of Saint-Eustache's company—half soldiers, half ploughboys—ill-dressed and indifferently accoutred in dull breastplates and rusty caps, many of which were rusted. By the carriage door stood the long, lank figure of the Chevalier himself, dressed with his wonted care, and perfumed, curled, and beribboned beyond belief. His weak, boyish face sought by scowls and by the adoption of a grim smile to assume an air of martial ferocity. Such was the grouping in the quadrangle when my men, with rifles at their heads, giving pause to those within, and drawing upon themselves the eyes of all, as they rode, two by two, under the old-world arch of the keep into the courtyard. And Gilles, who knew our errand, and who was as ready-witted in the situation as a glance. Knowing how much he desired to make a goodly show, he wished to order. This resulted in the couples dividing at the gateway, one going to the left and one to the right, so that as they came they spread themselves in a crescent, and, drawing rein, the faces forward, confronting and half surrounding the Chevalier's company. As each couple appeared, the curiosity—the uneasiness, probably—of Saint-Eustache and his men had increased, and their expectancy was on tiptoe to see what lord it was who went abroad with such regal pomp. When I appeared in the gateway and advanced at the trot into the middle of the quadrangle, there I drew rein and doffed my hat to them as they stood, open-mouthed and gaping one and all. It was a theatrical display, a parade worthy of a tilt-ground. It was yet a noble and imposing advent, and their gaze followed me as I looked unwearily at his men; madly, madly, very pale, lowered her eyes and pressed her lips more tightly; the Vicomtesse uttered an oath of astonishment; whilst Lavedan, too dignified to manifest surprise, greeted me with a sober bow. Behind them on the steps I caught sight of a group of domestics, old Anatole standing slightly in advance of his fellows, and wondering, no doubt, whether this were, indeed, the bedraggled Lesperon of a little while ago—for if I had thought of pomp in the display of my livery, no less had I considered it in the decay of the ribbon and foppish that mark the cock-comb, yet was I clad, plumed, and armed with a magnificence such as I'll swear had not been seen within the grey walls of that old castle in the lifetime of any of those that were now present. Gilles leapt from his horse as I drew rein, and hastened to hold my stirrup, with a murmured "Monsieur," which title drew a fresh astonishment into the eyes of the beholders. I advanced leisurely towards Saint-Eustache, and addressed him with such condescension as I might find room for to impress and quell a man of this type your best weapon is the arrogance that a nobler spirit would resent. "A world of odd greetings this, Saint-Eustache," I smiled disdainfully. "A world of strange comings and goings, and of strange transformations. The last time we were here we stood mutually as guests of Monsieur le Vicomte; and now you appear to be officiating as a—tipstaff."

"Monsieur!" He colored, and he uttered the word in accents of awakened resentment. I looked into his eyes, coldly, impassively, as if waiting to hear what he might have to add, and so I stayed until his glance fell and his spirit was frozen in him. He knew me, and he knew how much I was to be feared. A word from me to the King might send him to the wheel. It was upon this I played. Presently, as his eye fell—

IN THE SUMMERHOUSE. This is one day's chapter about the miller's daughter and the enchanted prince. The story will be finished at the end of this week, and the paper dolls will make a complete set with characters and costumes to fit the story. Although the miller's third daughter had no idea she would gain the reward and be able to buy the things her parents wished for, she went into the summerhouse to dream about it for a little time while she rested. She was astonished to see the richly draped couch, the blazing fire in the fireplace and the pretty little table all set with tasty things to eat. She saw the writing over the fireplace which said, "Of comforts here partake, but of my speech beware." "Of comforts here partake, but of my speech beware," she repeated. "Why, then," she laughed, "these are for me, and one should always be careful of his speech." (This dress, for the miller's youngest daughter, is red with a black bodice. The handkerchief for her head is red with black dots.)

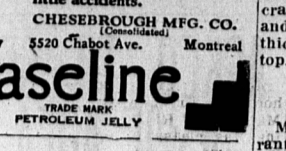

PAINS ALL OVER BODY Two More Cases of Feminine Illness Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Italian Farmers Ambush Robbers; 15 Wounded

Russia Has Tons of Coal

Dull Pains in Back

Handiest thing in the house SOOTHES BURNS Nothing more comforting than "Vaseline" Jelly. Eases pain. Hastens nature's healing. Wonderful for cuts, scratches, bruises and other little accidents. CHESEBROUGH MFG. CO. 5220 Chabot Ave. Montreal

Lavedan preceded by twenty well-mounted knaves wearing the gorgeous Saint-Pol liveries of scarlet and gold, with the Bardleys escutcheon brodered on the breasts of their doublets on a field or a bar azure surcharged by three lilies of the field. They were armed with swords and muskets, and had more the air of a royal bodyguard than of a company of attendant servants. Our coming was in a way well-timed. I doubt if we could have stayed the execution of Saint-Eustache's warrant even had we arrived earlier. But for effect—to produce a striking coup de theatre—we could not have come more opportunely. A coach stood in the quadrangle, at the foot of the chateau steps. Lavedan and the Vicomte were descending these the Vicomte grimacing and blaspheming as ever—on one side and his daughter, white of face and with tightly compressed lips, on the other. Between these two were a woman—his wife and his child—of a firm step, a good color, and a look of well-bred, lofty indifference to what was going on about her. He disposed himself to enter the carriage which was to bear him to prison, with much the same air that would have assumed had his destination been a royal levee. Around the coach were grouped a score of men of Saint-Eustache's company—half soldiers, half ploughboys—ill-dressed and indifferently accoutred in dull breastplates and rusty caps, many of which were rusted. By the carriage door stood the long, lank figure of the Chevalier himself, dressed with his wonted care, and perfumed, curled, and beribboned beyond belief. His weak, boyish face sought by scowls and by the adoption of a grim smile to assume an air of martial ferocity. Such was the grouping in the quadrangle when my men, with rifles at their heads, giving pause to those within, and drawing upon themselves the eyes of all, as they rode, two by two, under the old-world arch of the keep into the courtyard. And Gilles, who knew our errand, and who was as ready-witted in the situation as a glance. Knowing how much he desired to make a goodly show, he wished to order. This resulted in the couples dividing at the gateway, one going to the left and one to the right, so that as they came they spread themselves in a crescent, and, drawing rein, the faces forward, confronting and half surrounding the Chevalier's company. As each couple appeared, the curiosity—the uneasiness, probably—of Saint-Eustache and his men had increased, and their expectancy was on tiptoe to see what lord it was who went abroad with such regal pomp. When I appeared in the gateway and advanced at the trot into the middle of the quadrangle, there I drew rein and doffed my hat to them as they stood, open-mouthed and gaping one and all. It was a theatrical display, a parade worthy of a tilt-ground. It was yet a noble and imposing advent, and their gaze followed me as I looked unwearily at his men; madly, madly, very pale, lowered her eyes and pressed her lips more tightly; the Vicomtesse uttered an oath of astonishment; whilst Lavedan, too dignified to manifest surprise, greeted me with a sober bow. Behind them on the steps I caught sight of a group of domestics, old Anatole standing slightly in advance of his fellows, and wondering, no doubt, whether this were, indeed, the bedraggled Lesperon of a little while ago—for if I had thought of pomp in the display of my livery, no less had I considered it in the decay of the ribbon and foppish that mark the cock-comb, yet was I clad, plumed, and armed with a magnificence such as I'll swear had not been seen within the grey walls of that old castle in the lifetime of any of those that were now present. Gilles leapt from his horse as I drew rein, and hastened to hold my stirrup, with a murmured "Monsieur," which title drew a fresh astonishment into the eyes of the beholders. I advanced leisurely towards Saint-Eustache, and addressed him with such condescension as I might find room for to impress and quell a man of this type your best weapon is the arrogance that a nobler spirit would resent. "A world of odd greetings this, Saint-Eustache," I smiled disdainfully. "A world of strange comings and goings, and of strange transformations. The last time we were here we stood mutually as guests of Monsieur le Vicomte; and now you appear to be officiating as a—tipstaff."

Handiest thing in the house SOOTHES BURNS Nothing more comforting than "Vaseline" Jelly. Eases pain. Hastens nature's healing. Wonderful for cuts, scratches, bruises and other little accidents. CHESEBROUGH MFG. CO. 5220 Chabot Ave. Montreal

Lavedan preceded by twenty well-mounted knaves wearing the gorgeous Saint-Pol liveries of scarlet and gold, with the Bardleys escutcheon brodered on the breasts of their doublets on a field or a bar azure surcharged by three lilies of the field. They were armed with swords and muskets, and had more the air of a royal bodyguard than of a company of attendant servants. Our coming was in a way well-timed. I doubt if we could have stayed the execution of Saint-Eustache's warrant even had we arrived earlier. But for effect—to produce a striking coup de theatre—we could not have come more opportunely. A coach stood in the quadrangle, at the foot of the chateau steps. Lavedan and the Vicomte were descending these the Vicomte grimacing and blaspheming as ever—on one side and his daughter, white of face and with tightly compressed lips, on the other. Between these two were a woman—his wife and his child—of a firm step, a good color, and a look of well-bred, lofty indifference to what was going on about her. He disposed himself to enter the carriage which was to bear him to prison, with much the same air that would have assumed had his destination been a royal levee. Around the coach were grouped a score of men of Saint-Eustache's company—half soldiers, half ploughboys—ill-dressed and indifferently accoutred in dull breastplates and rusty caps, many of which were rusted. By the carriage door stood the long, lank figure of the Chevalier himself, dressed with his wonted care, and perfumed, curled, and beribboned beyond belief. His weak, boyish face sought by scowls and by the adoption of a grim smile to assume an air of martial ferocity. Such was the grouping in the quadrangle when my men, with rifles at their heads, giving pause to those within, and drawing upon themselves the eyes of all, as they rode, two by two, under the old-world arch of the keep into the courtyard. And Gilles, who knew our errand, and who was as ready-witted in the situation as a glance. Knowing how much he desired to make a goodly show, he wished to order. This resulted in the couples dividing at the gateway, one going to the left and one to the right, so that as they came they spread themselves in a crescent, and, drawing rein, the faces forward, confronting and half surrounding the Chevalier's company. As each couple appeared, the curiosity—the uneasiness, probably—of Saint-Eustache and his men had increased, and their expectancy was on tiptoe to see what lord it was who went abroad with such regal pomp. When I appeared in the gateway and advanced at the trot into the middle of the quadrangle, there I drew rein and doffed my hat to them as they stood, open-mouthed and gaping one and all. It was a theatrical display, a parade worthy of a tilt-ground. It was yet a noble and imposing advent, and their gaze followed me as I looked unwearily at his men; madly, madly, very pale, lowered her eyes and pressed her lips more tightly; the Vicomtesse uttered an oath of astonishment; whilst Lavedan, too dignified to manifest surprise, greeted me with a sober bow. Behind them on the steps I caught sight of a group of domestics, old Anatole standing slightly in advance of his fellows, and wondering, no doubt, whether this were, indeed, the bedraggled Lesperon of a little while ago—for if I had thought of pomp in the display of my livery, no less had I considered it in the decay of the ribbon and foppish that mark the cock-comb, yet was I clad, plumed, and armed with a magnificence such as I'll swear had not been seen within the grey walls of that old castle in the lifetime of any of those that were now present. Gilles leapt from his horse as I drew rein, and hastened to hold my stirrup, with a murmured "Monsieur," which title drew a fresh astonishment into the eyes of the beholders. I advanced leisurely towards Saint-Eustache, and addressed him with such condescension as I might find room for to impress and quell a man of this type your best weapon is the arrogance that a nobler spirit would resent. "A world of odd greetings this, Saint-Eustache," I smiled disdainfully. "A world of strange comings and goings, and of strange transformations. The last time we were here we stood mutually as guests of Monsieur le Vicomte; and now you appear to be officiating as a—tipstaff."

EATING WITH BRITISH ROYALTIES BY A LADY OF THE COURT (Edited by Elizabeth Craig) PRINCESS MARY COCKTAIL

Mix in a cocktail shaker a third of each of a glass of dry gin and Creme de Cacao. Add a little cracked ice. Shake well, pour out, and float the same quantity of thick cream as gin used gently on top.

CUCUMBER VINEGAR. Pare and slice fifteen large cucumbers, put them in a stone jar, with three pints of vinegar. 4 large onions, sliced, two or three shallots, a little garlic, two large spoonfuls of salt, 3 teaspoons of pepper, and 1/2 teaspoon of cayenne. After standing for 4 days give the whole a boil. When cold, strain and filter the liquor through paper. Keep in small bottles to add to salad or eat with cold meat.

GOOSEBERRY VINEGAR. To every gallon of fully ripe gooseberries measure off two gallons of cold water that has boiled. Bruise berries well with your hands, then stir into the water. Stand for three days, stirring well once a day, then squeeze all the juice through a jelly bag into a large vessel and to every gallon of the gooseberry water add 1 pound coarse sugar. Place a paper over to keep dust out, and stand for a month or two when drain off. Clean off the lees with a little vinegar, then pour back the gooseberry vinegar, and allow to stand anywhere within doors for six or twelve months till fine and sharp enough. The longer the better. When fine, bottle it off.

FRANCE Prepares For Royal Visit (Canadian Press) PARIS, Jan. 19.—Having been advised that a state visit from King George and Queen Mary is likely during the coming spring, Gaston Doumergue, president of the French Republic, is taking a strenuous course in etiquette and in English. Under expert tutelage the president has learned a considerable number of polite English phrases and details of court etiquette. It is recalled that the time that Queen Mary came to Paris, M. Doumergue, who was then Premier, made the bad mistake of offering her his left arm to escort her to dinner, and the guardians of the protocol are determined that such a breach shall not happen again.

SPLIT IN RANKS OF THEOSOPHISTS LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Daily Sketch says there has been a definite split in the ranks of the Theosophists over the "New Messiah" Krishnamurti and his new world religion. The newspaper asserts that the London Lodge, consisting of 40 members, the oldest lodge in England, has seceded, as well as 10 other members of the society. When making several pairs of pillow slips with lace edging measure off the entire amount of lace required and attach it onto the salvage of the material in one piece, then cut off the pillow slips and sew up on the machine.

HILLSBORO BRIDGE CLOSED TO HIGHWAY TRAFFIC The Canadian National Railway intend replacing the ties on the Hillsboro Bridge. Consequently, on and after Monday, January 25th, the bridge will be closed to highway traffic until further notice.

CIVIC ELECTION! In pursuance of An Act of the Legislature of the Province of Prince Edward Island, made and passed in the Third year of the reign of His Majesty King Edward VII., Chapter 17, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the several Acts incorporating the City of Charlottetown," and all Acts in amendment thereof or in addition thereto. I do hereby give PUBLIC NOTICE that an Election of a Mayor for the said City, Three Commissioners of Sewers and Water Supply for the said City, and of One person to serve as a Common Councilman in the City Council for each of the Wards Numbers 1, 2 and 3, of the said City, and of Two persons to serve as Common Councilmen in said Council for Ward Number 4 of said City, and of Three persons to serve as Common Councilmen in said Council for Ward Number 5 in the said City; being in all a Mayor, Three Commissioners of Sewers and Water Supply, and Eight Common Councilmen representing the City as follows:

- For Ward Number One One Councillor
For Ward Number Two One Councillor
For Ward Number Three One Councillor
For Ward Number Four Two Councillors
For Ward Number Five Three Councillors

WILL BE HELD ON WEDNESDAY The Tenth day of February, A. D., 1926 At the Several Polling Places as Described in Proclamations Posted in the Several Wards of the said City. NOMINATION DAY, WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 3rd, A. D., 1926 At the Office of the City Clerk, City Hall, from the hour of Twelve O'clock, noon, until the hour of Four O'clock in the afternoon of the same day. For Qualifications of Electors see Act 3rd Edward VII., Cap. 17, Secs. 24 to 29; also Act 1st George V., Caps. 13 & 14. G. P. NICHOLSON, City Clerk City Clerk's Office, Charlottetown, January 14th, 1926 JOHN McKENNA, Mayor of the City of Charlottetown.

RED ROSE "is good COFFEE"

GOOSEBERRY VINEGAR. To every gallon of fully ripe gooseberries measure off two gallons of cold water that has boiled. Bruise berries well with your hands, then stir into the water. Stand for three days, stirring well once a day, then squeeze all the juice through a jelly bag into a large vessel and to every gallon of the gooseberry water add 1 pound coarse sugar. Place a paper over to keep dust out, and stand for a month or two when drain off. Clean off the lees with a little vinegar, then pour back the gooseberry vinegar, and allow to stand anywhere within doors for six or twelve months till fine and sharp enough. The longer the better. When fine, bottle it off.

CUCUMBER VINEGAR. Pare and slice fifteen large cucumbers, put them in a stone jar, with three pints of vinegar. 4 large onions, sliced, two or three shallots, a little garlic, two large spoonfuls of salt, 3 teaspoons of pepper, and 1/2 teaspoon of cayenne. After standing for 4 days give the whole a boil. When cold, strain and filter the liquor through paper. Keep in small bottles to add to salad or eat with cold meat.

FRANCE Prepares For Royal Visit (Canadian Press) PARIS, Jan. 19.—Having been advised that a state visit from King George and Queen Mary is likely during the coming spring, Gaston Doumergue, president of the French Republic, is taking a strenuous course in etiquette and in English. Under expert tutelage the president has learned a considerable number of polite English phrases and details of court etiquette. It is recalled that the time that Queen Mary came to Paris, M. Doumergue, who was then Premier, made the bad mistake of offering her his left arm to escort her to dinner, and the guardians of the protocol are determined that such a breach shall not happen again.

SPLIT IN RANKS OF THEOSOPHISTS LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Daily Sketch says there has been a definite split in the ranks of the Theosophists over the "New Messiah" Krishnamurti and his new world religion. The newspaper asserts that the London Lodge, consisting of 40 members, the oldest lodge in England, has seceded, as well as 10 other members of the society. When making several pairs of pillow slips with lace edging measure off the entire amount of lace required and attach it onto the salvage of the material in one piece, then cut off the pillow slips and sew up on the machine.

HILLSBORO BRIDGE CLOSED TO HIGHWAY TRAFFIC The Canadian National Railway intend replacing the ties on the Hillsboro Bridge. Consequently, on and after Monday, January 25th, the bridge will be closed to highway traffic until further notice.

CIVIC ELECTION! In pursuance of An Act of the Legislature of the Province of Prince Edward Island, made and passed in the Third year of the reign of His Majesty King Edward VII., Chapter 17, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the several Acts incorporating the City of Charlottetown," and all Acts in amendment thereof or in addition thereto. I do hereby give PUBLIC NOTICE that an Election of a Mayor for the said City, Three Commissioners of Sewers and Water Supply for the said City, and of One person to serve as a Common Councilman in the City Council for each of the Wards Numbers 1, 2 and 3, of the said City, and of Two persons to serve as Common Councilmen in said Council for Ward Number 4 of said City, and of Three persons to serve as Common Councilmen in said Council for Ward Number 5 in the said City; being in all a Mayor, Three Commissioners of Sewers and Water Supply, and Eight Common Councilmen representing the City as follows:

- For Ward Number One One Councillor
For Ward Number Two One Councillor
For Ward Number Three One Councillor
For Ward Number Four Two Councillors
For Ward Number Five Three Councillors

WILL BE HELD ON WEDNESDAY The Tenth day of February, A. D., 1926 At the Several Polling Places as Described in Proclamations Posted in the Several Wards of the said City. NOMINATION DAY, WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 3rd, A. D., 1926 At the Office of the City Clerk, City Hall, from the hour of Twelve O'clock, noon, until the hour of Four O'clock in the afternoon of the same day. For Qualifications of Electors see Act 3rd Edward VII., Cap. 17, Secs. 24 to 29; also Act 1st George V., Caps. 13 & 14. G. P. NICHOLSON, City Clerk City Clerk's Office, Charlottetown, January 14th, 1926 JOHN McKENNA, Mayor of the City of Charlottetown.