VOTE WILL APPEAR SATURDAY

And everybody who is not in it wants to be.

See that your name is among the candidates; get busy and gather in the votes.

A great number of the contestants seem to have become at once enthused—and the contest is an assured success.

The folks are taking an absorbing interest in the race—an interest that is alike surprising to the paper and to the promoters.

Your friends have nominated you. Will you disappoint them? Get busy at the start and win.

New candidates are appearing each day, and the list of the prominent young women includes most of the known hustlers of the city and vicinity.

Some of the candidates' votes may run several thousand Saturday, but do not get discouraged, that only means a few yearly subscriptions, and you can get a few yourself if you start in with the determination that you are going on one of these trips or prizes. The trip or prize is surely worth an effort.

The candidates will find that people will soon begin to take an interest in their race and be more than willing to give them a subscription and help them along. It shows that a young woman has get-up and enterprise in her aspirations for the honors and pleasures of a trip or prize of this sort. Your friends would just as soon give their votes to you as anyone else but you will have to go after them yourself.

Put your votes in the ballot box that we have provided for them in The Guardian Office, or send them by mail and we will put them in for you. And get them in before the time limit runs out on them.

Do it now.

Come, take a trip with us, fill in the application blank that you find elsewhere and mail it to the contest manager.

Whether or not you or your friends desire to become candidates, complete information concerning the contest will be given upon your request.

The Contest Department of The Guardian will remain open each evening this week from seven to eight o'clock, in order to give the contestants an opportunity of calling in and discussing the rules and conditions of the contest.

Don't fail to see the beautiful District Prizes on Display at the following places: A. E. Toombs, Queen St.; Miller Bros., and Montague Furnishing Co., Montague.

The names of Miss Gertrude White, 234 Great George St., District 1 and Miss Jennie Garret, Souris, District 2, were unintentionally omitted in the list of nominations yesterday. The Guardian takes this method of informing their many friends that they are actively engaged in the contest.

MARITIME OFF TRACK; TRAINS WERE DELAYED.

ST. JOHN, Oct. 25—The Maritime express, which is due to arrive in the city each day at 1.45 p.m., ran off the track at Nauwigewauk yesterday afternoon, but fortunately none of the crew or passengers was hurt. The engine and one of the baggage cars were damaged somewhat, being thrown completely off the rails. The C. P. R. from St. John had arrived at Nauwigewauk on time and was waiting for the Maritime, which was to pass it there. While coming in on the switch it is thought a sharp flange of the tender of the engine of the Maritime caught in the points of the switch, for the tender and baggage cars were thrown off the rails and the roadbed for a considerable distance was torn up.

No one was hurt but the baggage car was thrown over on its side and came within an ace of rolling over a steep embankment. Both the Maritime and the C. P. R. trains were delayed one hour and fifteen minutes on account of the run-off. Word was sent to Hampton and the engine of a suburban came to Nauwigewauk and brought the Maritime into the city, arriving here about 3.30 o'clock.

A crew of men was sent out from the city and the tender of the engine soon placed on the rails. It was brought to the city last night and will be repaired here. The workmen were unable to get the baggage car on last night, however, being without a crane. It is likely that one will be brought down from Moncton this morning. Engineer Milne, of this city was at the throttle of the Maritime engine, and conductor Crockett had charge of the train. The accident happened almost on the spot where the collision occurred on the 24th of May in which Brakeman Casey, of Moncton, was killed.

I'LL WORK TO MAKE MANUEL KING AGAIN SAYS DESLYS

VIENNA, October 24—Mlle. Gaby Deslys, the charming little dancer who practically scored the highest kick on record in that she lifted King Manuel of Portugal from his throne and made a republic out of an ancient monarchy, today declares she would work to make Manuel kind again if he wants to regain Portugal's throne.

"As soon as my engagement in Vienna is over I shall go to him wherever he is," said Mlle. Gaby. "And if he is really as poor as the papers say, I shall help him, work for him until I drop from exhaustion. Oh, I shall show the world that we, too, can love and sacrifice as well as any ladies of the grand world who call themselves, through loveless marriages, the wives and queens of kings.

"Now e shall soon be able to help him, and so much the better, because I have offers of engagements in America which will pay me enormous sums. And I shall accept them for Manuel's sake. Altho we would be far happier were he not on a throne, if Manuel wishes to reascend the throne of Portugal I shall aid him in his ambitions."

The little dancer was interviewed in her suite in the Hotel Bristol in one hand she had a telegram that had just been delivered to her. She smiled a greeting through the tears in her wonderful dark eyes.

"No bad news, I hope," said the interviewer.

"No, not bad news, for I am always glad to hear from the dear boy," she answered.

"And the dear boy."

"Oh, Manuel, of course. There is no other. He has just wired me from Gibraltar. Poor boy, he thinks of me constantly in the hour of his trouble, and that is enough to make me happy. So my tears may be tears of joy after all."

"And he tells of his plans."

"No, no!" she laughed, hugging the telegram. "You are now growing inquisitive. You are not to know one word; not one syllable, of its contents. It is all for me—for me alone, and not one other soul in the world shall ever know the message he sends to me. I am loyal to my King."

"It is untrue that the Princess Alexandra of Fife didn't want to become the wife of King Manuel," said Mlle. Gaby, stamping one of her little feet, to give emphasis to her remark. "On the contrary, he didn't want to marry her, because he loved me too well."

"The whole world curses King Manuel now because he fled from his capital in the hour of revolution. What would they have had the poor boy do? They—the bloodthirsty and disloyal revolutionists—would have killed him if he had stayed until the end of October, and he would have forfeited his life as well as his throne.

"Life means a whole lot to a boy of his age, even tho' he be a king who loves his people. Life means much to me as long as my king lives, and why should if not mean much to him? If they had killed my poor king they would have killed me, too, for how could I live without him?

"They say that I had to leave Lisbon, where I went as his loyal sweetheart at the command of my king, but that is not true. It is a wicked falsehood trumped up to hurt Manuel. The truth is that the people of Lisbon loved me very much and showed me every mark of respect when I appeared in public with King Manuel, as tho' I was really their 'uncrowned queen.'

"It was only the court ladies who hated me. And why? Because they are ugly and jealous, and I was happy and light-hearted, and my King and his people thought me beautiful. Oh, they are terribly ugly, the court ladies of Lisbon, and I do not blame them for being jealous.

"It is also untrue that I occupied apartments in the royal palace. The king would not have had me there and I would not have gone. I had pretty apartments at a hotel near the palace, where he could visit me whenever he wished and be happy away from the cares of state, which always surrounded him at the palace.

"From this hotel we arranged out excursions and picnics, which gave us the happiest days of our lives, and the people seemed happy to see us so happy together.

"How, then, can I be accused of a part in the downfall of Manuel?

"I am anxious to go to America. If my manager succeeds in buying off my contracts in Europe I shall make my first appearance in New York in December."

SWIFT JUSTICE IN ENGLISH COURTS

LONDON, Oct. 24—The Crippen trial, which closed with the prisoner's conviction after half an hour's deliberation by the jury, was in many respects a model exhibition of the processe of criminal law. The jury was obtained expeditiously, and the time was not wasted by irrelevant discussion.

The lord chief justice assisted the jury by incisive questions, especially when expert witnesses were likely to bewilder them with technicalities. He also protected witnesses exposed to cross examination, and was helpful to Crippen himself at critical stages of the testimony.

Counsel on both sides were kept under restraint and were not allowed to abuse their privileges by introducing unfair comment when they were examining witnesses or dealing with the experts. The manners of counsel were perfect, and the lord chief justice, both in the general conduct of the case and in his ldcid charge to the jury, was the embodiment of impartiality.

Crippen was defended with great ability by eloquent and sagacious advisers, who concentrated their argument on the most vulnerable point of the prosecution, namely, the lack of positive identification of the victim, and laid unwonted emphasis on the individual responsibility of each jurymman to give the prisoner the benefit of a doubt.

The prisoner himself had sought to reinforce his eloquent counsel by a prolonged exhibition of coolness and nerve, and even when the verdict was rendered, protested his innocence with blanched face. The crown solicitors have done their work with amazing thoroughness and the chain of circumstantial evidence was irrefragable.

The trial of this celebrated case, in which the public has taken the keenest possible interest, has shown that the criminal procedure in the English courts is well nigh perfect in dignity and efficiency, and that the rights of the individual, even when he is a monster and outcast, are protected with absolute impartiality.

lines. In sailor parlance, she "has no shoulders at all."

The indefatigable will be driven through the waves, not over them. Her immense freeboard forward renders this possible. Where a smaller vessel might be engulfed this battleship cruiser, her designers contend will merely throw a smother of spray. The idea of minimizing her lifting power is that she may not lose speed by plunging in heavy weather, and thus give greater steadiness at the gun platforms. Enormous bilge keels are intended to reduce rolling.

Eight twelve-inch guns are mounted in four turrets, the wing pair being echeloned so that all guns can be brought to bear on either broadside and six anead or astern.

TRAINS TO ROCKIES BY THE YEAR 1912

MONTREAL, October 24—General Manager E. J. Chamberlain of the Grand Trunk Pacific, arrived here this evening for a conference with the head officials here. He stated that by 1912 through trains would be run from Montreal to the Rockies and to Prince Rupert by the following year.

With regard to present conditions, Mr. Chamberlain said with the freight facilities they now had, he expected the road would handle ten million bushels of wheat before navigation closed, and with their terminals they were in position to take care of thirty million bushels. Mr. Chamberlain said he had just made a thorough inspection of the whole line, and out of 900 miles, there was only 30 which were not in first-class condition. Mr. Chamberlain looked for big western developments and expressed conviction that within ten years, the west would dominate the east politically, financially and in every other way.

It is supposaed he will be taken to the mountains and liberated.

PEAT FUEL A GREAT SUCCESS AT OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Oct. 24.—The experiment made by the mines department during the past month of placing on the local market 500 tons of peat manufactured into domestic fuel at the government experimental plant at Alfred, a few miles east of Ottawa, has proved a great success. The whole supply offered was sold within a few days at $3.25 a ton, and since then there has been a deluge of orders for further supplies. There is a general concensus of opinion among those who have used the new fuel that it is cheaper and more satisfactory than coal. The results of the first year's operation of the government plant at Alfred indicate that there is an immense field for commercial exploitation in developing the very large peat deposits scattered throughout central Canada.
